ALLIES AND RUSSIA AGREE

HARDING WINS FIGHT AGAINST "PYGMY" NAVY

86,000 Men Voted in Spirited Debate.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—The administration today won its fight in the house to save the navy. By a vote of 177 to 130, the amendment offered by Representative Vare [Penn.], Republican, providing for 86,000 enlisted men for the navy was adopted in the place of the "little navy" appropriations committee's recommendation for 67,000 men.

The "little navy" died hard, and they are planning to renew the fight next week, when they will demand a formal roll call.

The vote today was by tellers and the "little navy" leaders have some hopes of upsetting it. Administration leaders were confident, however, that in view of the comfortable margin in favor of the Vare amendment they would be able to hold their own on a record vote.

Caused Storm in Congress.

No issue raised during the present session of congress has raised so much excitement in the house as the controversy over the navy bill. The debate preceding today's action was one of the most spirited the house has witnessed for several years.

Enthusiasm of the administration forces broke away from all restraint when the vote was announced. Loud cheers and wild whoops drowned out the furious hammering of the speaker's gavel, and several jubilant "big navy" men did an Indian war dance down the center aisle.

The administration had a difficult uphill fight to secure a majority for 86,000 men.

Harding Had to Fight.

Only the most earnest pleas by President Harding, Secretary of State Hughes, and Secretary of Navy Denby, who declared that the proposed cut would destroy American sea power and nullify the results of the armament conference, saved the day. If the vote had been taken earlier in the week, there is little doubt that it would have favored the recommendations of the appropriations committee.

Following the adoption of the Vare amendment, the house, by viva voce vote, accepted an amendment offered by Representative MacArthur [Ore.], Republican, boosting various items in the naval bill to conform to the increased enlisted personnel.

Representative Madden [Ill.], Representative Mondell [Wyo.], Republican leader, and Representative Kelley [Mich.], chairman of the naval sub committee, made desperate efforts to stem the tide against the "little navy" program for the closing hours of the debate.

Madden for Little Navy.

Mr. Madden declared that the Vare amendment, along with proposed expenditures not contemplated in the annual budget, would not only consume all this year's revenue but would create a deficit of $500,000,000. He sharply rapped navy department officials, who he declared frequently revealed a lack of knowledge on the needs of the navy.

He related one instance of how the navy department wanted $12,500,000 for oil. The committee cut the estimate to $6,283,000. Several days ago, Mr. Madden said, the secretary wrote that a mistake had been made and that the navy estimate should have been $7,500,000.

"Stop, look, and listen before you vote today," Mr. Madden cautioned. "The November election is approaching. I don't see how any Republican who has promised economy can go back to his constituents and explain a vote for this extravagance; and that's what this amendment is."

GHOST AT POLO GROUNDS IS ONLY BROOKLYN'S GOAT

New York, April 15.—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle saw his first baseball game today as the guest of Charles A. Stoneham, one of the owners of the Giants. When the Giant batsmen finally were retired after scoring eleven runs in the first inning, he heard a loud wail coming from the dugout where the Brooklyn team sat invisible to him.

Always alert for anything supernatural, he turned to Mr. Stoneham and asked:

"What was that, a ghost?"

"No," replied Mr. Stoneham, "a goat—Mr. Wilbert Robinson's goat. It just became lost and is trying to find itself."

TWO OF AURORA'S RICHEST WOMEN KILLED IN MOTOR

Miss Edna Smith, 37 years old, and Mrs. Leo Nash, 35, who with their sister, Mrs. Charles Sencenbaugh, were rated the wealthiest women in Aurora, were killed yesterday at Lakehurst, N. J., when their automobile was struck by a locomotive of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. With Miss Smith and Mrs. Nash was Miss Edna L. Smith, a student at Columbia university, who also was killed.

Miss Smith and Mrs. Nash were daughters of the late Capt. C. H. Smith, founder of the Western Wheeled Scraper work in Aurora, the largest institution of its kind in the world. All three of the daughters inherited millions from their father's estate.

Neither Miss Smith nor Mrs. Nash cared much for society, their chief interest being in sociological work. During the war both went overseas in Y. M. C. A. canteen service. While in France Mrs. Nash met the man who became her husband.

About eight years ago Miss Smith established a home for dependent children in Aurora and a little later established a school in New York for the education of poor children. Later she founded a similar school at Carmel, Cal.

EASTER HOPE FOR McCORMACK

Singer Is Resting Easier After Operation.

New York, April 15.—John McCormack, noted Irish tenor, lies in his apartment, 270 Park avenue, fighting a hard battle for his life.

His wife is ever at his side and has read some of the many messages which have come over the wires.

"I now see a ray of Easter hope," the singer's wife said tonight.

Another Operation.

The singer, who became ill last Saturday with laryngitis and who had already been operated on twice, found breathing difficult this morning, after a restless night, according to a statement issued by his physicians, and another operation had to be performed. Dr. Harmon Smith, assisted by Dr. Munroe, opened the upper part of the pharynx.

The physicians announced that it probably would be necessary again to lance the singer's throat tomorrow. They declared, however, that they did not believe the operation would be as serious or delicate as the three that have preceded it.

Takes a Little Food.

D. F. McSweeney, concert manager of the tenor, issued a bulletin tonight signed by Dr. Harmon Smith, stating:

"Mr. McCormack has been resting comfortably since 1 p. m. today, when anti-toxin in excess of 10,000 units was administered by Dr. Alfred G. Du Pont. He has been able during this period to take a little nourishment for the first time in several days."

This afternoon Mr. McCormack was reported somewhat relieved and resting easily.

Message from Ireland.

One received this morning, which gave McCormack considerable cheer and seemed to strengthen him in his fight, was a message from Dublin signed by Lawrence O'Neill, lord mayor of that city, and Michael Collins, Eamon de Valera, and Arthur Griffith. The message read:

"The people of your native Ireland are grieved to hear of your illness. They fervently pray for your speedy recovery. We extend to you the love, the gratitude, the sympathy, and the hope of the Irish nation."

Telegram from Senators.

Another telegram came from Washington signed by twenty-four members of the United States senate.

Scarcely a hamlet in the United States where the great singer has at some time appeared failed to be represented among the several thousand messages of sympathy and encouragement. Australia, New Zealand, Canada, South America, and Belgium are some of the foreign lands from which have come messages.

GIRL MANAGER CATCHES BANDIT WHO RIFLED SAFE

Grabbing a bandit who was attempting to escape from Plows' candy store, 118 South Michigan avenue, yesterday afternoon, after he had robbed the safe, Miss Nellie Cronin, the manager, forced him to sit down and kept him under guard until police arrived. The police say he is Harry Schwartz, 24, a notorious criminal with a lengthy record.

Miss Cronin said papers Schwartz and an accomplice who escaped withdrew from the safe were valued at $60,000. The papers were recovered.

Entering the store shortly after noon, the two bandits worked their way to the rear through a crowd and sat down at a table. One of them coolly walked to the safe, opened it, withdrew papers, and returned to the table. Miss La Verne O'Rourke, a clerk, witnessed this robbery and notified Miss Cronin.

Miss Cronin posted girl clerks at the two entrances and walked toward the bandits, while another girl ran for the police. The man who escaped eluded girls who tried to grab him.

He Spent Days Eating Nuts in Barn; She Asks Divorce

St. Louis, Mo., April 15.—A petition for divorce, together with an injunction to restrain her husband from consuming her food, was filed in Circuit court here today by Mrs. James R. Finley against her husband, the Rev. J. R. Finley of Columbia, Mo., and formerly of Sapulpa, Okla. Extravagance displayed by buying an automobile and spending days by eating nuts and cheese in a barn while a minister at Memphis, Mo., are some of the charges on which Mrs. Finley bases the divorce petition.

George Remus Indicted by U. S. with Eighteen Others

Cincinnati, O., April 15.—George Remus, Cincinnati attorney, and eighteen associates were named in nine indictments returned late today by the federal grand jury here following investigation of operations of an alleged "liquor ring." The indictments allege conspiracy to divert liquor from the Squibbs Distilling company, Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Edgewood company, Cincinnati; John D. Park & Sons company, Cincinnati, and other distilleries and bonded warehouses.

Baby Is Born as Firemen, on Tiptoe, Put Out Blaze

Oakland, Cal., April 15.—Firemen arriving at the home of Mrs. J. S. Brown today to put out a blaze were requested by members of the family to "please make as little noise as possible." They complied. The fire soon was extinguished, and as they boarded their apparatus for the return a nurse came to the front door and announced, "Mother and son are doing nicely, thank you."

CLUBS LAUNCH MOVE TO MAKE STREETS SAFE

Demand Reckless Driving Stop.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

Watch your speed!

Public interest in safety promotion and resentment against the city's 5 per cent of reckless motorists swept Chicago yesterday following Judge Harry Olson's warning of the growing automobile menace and promise of swift court action to stop speeding.

Police, automobile clubs and civic organizations joined the Chicago Safety council in a spontaneous campaign to stop the automobile death toll, force dangerous drivers from the streets and educate the public generally in the basic rules of accident prevention.

"We're with you heart and soul in any movement to curb criminal automobile driving," James A. Carter, manager of the Illinois Automobile club, declared in a letter written to Judge Olson and Judge Gentzel of the Speeders' court.

Laws Not Enforced.

"The city prosecutor has, or claims to have, the right to nolle these charges before they go to the Speeders' court. The best information we have is to the effect that 70 per cent of automobile law violatos are "fixed" before they get into court.

"A fearless, forceful judge who will not hesitate to impose jail sentences on drunken or criminal drivers is a necessity. The great majority of motorists are praying for protection against criminal drivers."

Need Safety Program.

"The court is on the right line," declared Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, "and the court should not be interefered with in any way in bringing justice to speeders. I have invited Judge Olson to be present April 20, when we hope to enlist the aid of the forty-one affiliated Chicago clubs and organizations in working out a safety program for 365 days in every year.

Si Mayer of the North Shore club also pledged his coöperation. The club has already established a vigilance committee to work with the police department in apprehending speeders.

Schools Enlisted.

William Otter, president of the Chicago Safety council, declared that court action is the first and most important step in ridding Chicago of speeders, but added that education in safety rules is only slightly less important. The council has already introduced practical safety teaching into the public schools through the coöperation of the school board and teachers' organizations.

A drivers' school will open to all chauffeurs and truck drivers at 2255 South Wabash avenue at 8 p. m. April 18. Last year the school had an average attendance of 610 drivers, who received instruction in vehicle operation and safety rules free of charge.

Chief of Police Fitzmorris, in commenting on the communications received by the chief justice, declared emphatically that the police department is through with fixing automobile cases.

Will Push Cases.

"There's no hope of keeping out of court when an arrest slip is issued by an officer of the police department," he said. "This office knows now when each slip is issued, and sees that it goes into court. When speeders kill 243 children in one year it is time to start fighting."

Coroner Hoffman congratulated the court on its move. Records from the coroner's office show that the great majority of child deaths are due to children running across the streets in play.

A total of forty-three such deaths took place in four months last year, and the coroner's jury was able to bring manslaughter prosecutions against but four of the vehicle drivers, although authorities agree that the automobile driver is morally responsible for the safety of children, even though they violate safety rules.

The report shows that 292 people lost their lives last year through autos, while 192 were crushed under vehicle wheels. Collisions of cars killed 44, while collisions of autos and street cars or engines killed 55. A total of 213 children under 15 years of age were left dependent by the death of parents.

WOMEN BACK CAMPAIGN

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Finds 'Spoils Politics' Keep Europe Sick

BY R. R. M'CORMICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 15.—Three months' observation of conditions in Europe, during which time the principal countries were visited and many business men, financiers, and politicians consulted, leads me to a conviction that the Genoa conference is based primarily upon a political desire to pass the buck.

The troubles confronting the governments of the peoples of Europe are not international, but domestic. The former warring countries obviously were much disordered by peace. Reconstruction must inevitably be painful. It has been painful in England, where the greatest degree of statesmanship and self-sacrifice has been shown.

England has come back. The change in England during the last year was even greater than during the previous one. There is little difference to be seen between the present and pre-war England. Taxes are heavy, there are profiteers in high places, and many patriots are suffering, but England is close to complete recovery.

France Is Prosperous.

Aside from the devastated region France, too, is in a prosperous condition. Its difficulty has been in the natural unwillingness of its people, terribly tried by the war, to face the cost of reconstruction. East of France and Italy there is no government worthy of the name.

The destruction of aristocracies and their organizations of bureaucrats, while essential to civilization, has left the poor people without leaders of financial sense or government instinct.

The pay rolls in the countries from Germany eastward are many times larger than necessary for administrative purposes, but they are politically necessary for the party in power and are justified as being indispensable in fighting bolshevism. Hand in hand with the unbridled governmental extravagance is the total inability to collect taxes.

Fertile With Alibis.

The spas of Europe are filled with big spenders from Germany, Poland and Roumania, the depreciated exchanges apparently being no deterrent.

The politicians of Europe, not being able to make both ends meet, are fertile in their ablis. Their three favorites—armament, exchange and debts to America—are worked day and night. European politicians, like American, dislike expenditures for national defense because they do not furnish fodder for their political boroughs. It is the armies of job holders and not armies of soldiers which are destroying Europe. You cannot get a word on this subject from any diplomat or statesman, and I would defy Oscar Hewitt to pry into the pay rolls of the European government offices.

Whatever propaganda may be dished up in Genoa and elsewhere for American consumption there will be no practical disarmament. Poland was partitioned from lack of military force and it suffered tyranny for centuries. That lesson has burned home. France, without an ocean or channel boundary, will never give up the protection afforded by the strongest army in Europe, nor will anybody in Europe credit the peaceful representations of that Russian government which has massacred its hundreds of thousands, brought famine to millions and which holds that agreements with capitalistic nations are not binding upon the Communists.

All Seek Money from U. S.

The countries meeting at Genoa will continue to appeal to America to cancel the war loans and to advance further money across the ocean, by public speeches, international resolutions, and political pressure on Washington through foreign born voters, but these maneuvers, even if successful, will not reconstruct Europe. Unless they can produce their Washingtons and their Hamiltons, our Hoovers, and our international bankers cannot help them.

DEADLOCK ON DEBTS BROKEN AFTER 2 DAYS

Reds Present Vast Counter Claims.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GENOA, April 15.—The deadlock in the Genoa conference has been broken.

M. JOFFE.

The allies have reached an agreement with Russia. The Russian attitude on the proposals of the allied experts for the payment of the czaristic debts has changed from deep pessimism to hopeful understanding. M. Joffre, a member of the Russian "big five" and former Russian ambassador to Berlin, made public the above information in a statement to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, late tonight. It is understood that the Russians are yielding on numerous questions of finance while the French are yielding on judicial demands.

The agreement was reached after two days' bitter battle over debts, a moratorium and recognition at the informal conferences of the allied and Russian leaders at Prime Minister Lloyd George's villa.

The entente offered Russia a moratorium until 1927 provided Russia then paid between 62,000,000,000 gold francs ($12,500,000,000) and 80,000,000,000 gold francs ($16,000,000,000) with interest.

Russia Demands Recognition.

Foreign Minister Tchitcherin replied that the sum was fantastic and beyond all powers of Russia to pay and he demanded recognition, de jure and de facto, of soviet Russia before the debts were discussed further.

M. Tchitcherin said it would take Russia from twenty to twenty-five years before it could be so reconstructed, even under the most favorable conditions and through aid from foreign countries, that it would be able to show a trade balance. He declared it would be impossible for the nation to pay interest on debts without having revenues above its expenditures.

M. Tchitcherin informed the entente opposition that Russia's national revenue before the war was 12,000,000,000 gold rubles ($6,000,000,000), whereas the present revenue was 5,000,000,000 gold rubles ($2,500,000,000).

"You want us within five years," he declared, "to pay interest which is bigger than our whole budget for expenditures. It will be at least twenty years before Russia will arrive at a revenue equal to that of before the war."

Russia Presents Some Bills.

M. Tchitcherin, with his colleagues, MM. Joffe and Rakowsky, decided they could not under any conditions accept the entente demands, which they called disastrous. M. Rakowsky declared the entente terms "show they do not want Russia resurrected."

Countering Mr. Lloyd George and M. Barthou's debt collection proposals, M. Tchitcherin gave the figures on Russia's claims, saying that the civil wars conducted by Gens. Wrangel, Denikin and others were merely a subterfuge of another European country which was really waging the war in order to collect the late czar's debts. Therefore he claimed the soviets had a right to collect damages for these wars and for the allied blockade which he claimed resulted in one-fourth of the land being uncultivated and 50 per cent of the agriculture destroyed. He figured these damages at $25,000,000,000.

Furthermore the Russians denied the enetnte claims for revolutionary damages, M. Rakowsky stating, "Why should we pay for a revolution which British, French and other entente diplomats in Petrograd financed and encouraged in order to get rid of the czar and Rasputin and to establish another form of government more favorable to them? Naturally the diplomats did not foresee bolshevism, but nevertheless they caused the revolution."

Fight for Debt Payments.

GENOA, April 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—The discussion between the allied leaders and the Russian delegates today centered on three points: First, debts; second, war debts; and third, restitution of private property.

With regard to the first, the Russians explained what they called the "confused condition" of their people, who believed they had made a new world out of chaos and after a terrible convulsion. If the powers asked their to pay their old debts it would blight the hopes of the Russian people.

The allied leaders explained that the pre-war debts were not due primarily to governments, but individuals, chiefly French. They insisted that no government had the right to wipe out the claims of foreign individuals.

French Less Optimistic.

The opinion was expressed tonight that no difficulty would be encountered in settling the pre-war debts. Generally speaking, the French seemed less optimistic than the British in telling of the progress of the allied meetings with the Russians. The French were of the opinion that the bolsheviki were disposed to give battle at every point raised and postpone definite answers.

In discussing the second point, war debts, the allies said this was something where the governments were in a position to negotiate. They did not want to be unreasonable, because they realized the appalling state of Russia and did not desire to press Russia unduly. But the signature of the Russian government must be respected. The Russians rejoined by citing damages caused by foreign military expeditions into Russia.

On the third point, restitution of private property, the allied leaders admitted that this would be accompanied by great difficulties; nevertheless they must insist on the principle. The Russians emphasized the difficulties growing out of the fact that everything in Russia is nationalized. They asked how it was possible to restore a mine now under water.

Plans Anti-War Treaty.

Premier Lloyd George has announced that his aim at the Genoa conference is to bring into being a pact among the thirty-four nations represented, agreeing not to invade one another's territories. It would be similar to the four power pact negotiated at Washington.

Britain is against a pact with military sanctions, it is declared, because sanctions belong to the order of ideas that an endeavor is being made to get away from, and guarantees would mean a new grouping of the powers. The military holiday idea is not practical.

In response to questions the spokesman for the British said that Mr. Lloyd George's plan resembled President Harding's idea for an association of which it was hoped would bring about limitation of land armaments.

Russia Presents Big Bill.

PARIS, April 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—A Havas agency dispatch from Genoa tonight said the Russian soviet delegation to the Genoa economic conference presented a bill of $0,000,000,000 gold rubles (roughly $25,000,000,000) to the allies late today.

The bill was made up of 35,000,000,000 ($17,500,000,000) gold rubles, said the dispatch, for damages suffered in Russia from the expeditions of Denikine, Koltchak, Udenitch, and Wrangel, and 15,000,000,000 ($7,500,000,000) gold rubles for other damages, including the loss of Bessarabia to Roumania. The dispatch added that the soviet delegates claimed that while recognizing Russia's pre-war debt they were creditors to the allies and not debtors.

Prime Minister Lloyd George, the Havas dispatch asserted, informed the Russians that their claim was unadmissible and was contrary to all reason and justice. It said he requested them to reconsider and bring in a reply favorably to the allied demands, otherwise there was no object in continuing the Genoa conference, so far as Russia was concerned.

Russia Wants Peace—Trotzky.

MOSCOW, April 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Leon Trotzky, the soviet war minister, in an order to the army and navy issued last night, quoting Foreign Minister Tchitcherin's disarmament proposals at Genoa and the refusal of Vice Premier Barthou of France to permit their consideration, declares Russia is prepared to disarm and sincerely desires peace.

The war minister expressed the hope that the nations and peoples of Europe will compel the bourgeoisie to listen attentively to Russia's proposals. Meanwhile, however, every soviet soldier must stand at his post fully ready for any eventualities, he says.

Sees Aid to U. S. Recognition.

The Tchicherin-Barthou incident at Genoa is hailed by the Izvestia and the Pravda as a victory for Russia, even though the soviet proposal was blocked. The Pravda considers it an answer to the American objections to assisting Europe on the ground that European money was being wasted on armies, and that it simultaneously reveals the real position of France. The Izvestia in its comment declares:

"If America has really credited the legend regarding soviet militarism this superstition must fall to pieces now and together with it will disappear also the obstacle to the reestablishment of peaceful economic relations between the two great republics."

The newspapers which have just received the details of the first proceedings of the Genoa conference, echoed today the criticism of official circles over the delays in transmitting the reports, charging that the "bourgeois telegraph agencies" were conspiring to smother the Tchitcherin proposals.

GENOA MAY ASK U. S. TO SUMMON MONEY PARLEY

America's Aid Needed to Restore Gold Basis.

BY JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES.

GENOA, April 15.—The currencies and exchanges of Europe fall into two distinct groups, those which, in spite of wide seasonal fluctuations, no longer suffer progressive depreciation and those which are still chaotic.

Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia and all the neutral states might claim first place in the first group. The remaining states of central, eastern and southeastern Europe comprise the second.

The conference might very well declare that for the first group a return to the gold standard at an early date is worth attempting, provided that those of them whose exchanges are more than 20 per cent below pre-war parity abandon the idea of regaining the former parity.

Fear Gold Withdrawals.

I would like to go further and draw up an actual scheme. But the discussions at Genoa have already shown that when we try to go further we meet with three chief obstacles.

First—It is difficult for Great Britain to enter any general scheme immediately because, whilst she is not ready to reestablish her gold standard in its pre-war parity. Yet she is adverse to reestablishing it upon any other, whilst the neutrals, some of whom are more nearly ripe for pre-war parity, are afraid to allow free withdrawals of gold until Great Britain allows them also.

Thus the desire of Great Britain to improve her exchange delays the rest of Europe from fixing their.

Would Seek U. S. Agreement.

The two other obstacles would involve reference to the United States, which country now holds so large a proportion of the world's gold that its policy must largely fix its value. It might not be imprudent, after some kind of understanding with the American federal reserve board; and it might even be possible to agree on certain broad lines of policy between the board and those European central banks which resume on a gold basis with the view of keeping their commodity, the value of gold, as steady as possible.

It is also necessary to act in conjunction with the United States for adequate precautions to prevent a seasonal trade balance in favor of the United States against Europe from overwhelming the new gold standards in their early days. When confidence has been reestablished this can be looked after, as it was before the war, by the movement of floating balances of international bankers from one center to another. But, at first, special safeguards may be required, and they cannot be arranged adequately without the friendly assistance of the banking authorities of America.

Sees Conference in U. S.

If, however, the view is correct that for these three reasons the Genoa conference itself can do nothing for the exchanges, then everything points to a further monetary conference issuing out of this one. It would carry the matter decidedly further if the financiers assembled in Genoa were to convey a definite suggestion to the United States government that the interests of the world would be served if, in conjunction with the federal reserve board, they would invite Great Britain, Belgium, Italy, France, Spain, Holland, Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries, the Czecho-Slovakian countries Japan, and Argentine each to send one representative of their treasury and one representative of their central bank, or office of issue, to conference at Washington, at which political questions would be excluded, for the purpose of drafting a monetary convention which would permit all those countries which could comply with its conditions to resume a gold standard.

At any rate if the Genoa conference is not to leave matters exactly where they were before, we must meet something a little bolder than what they are offering us at present from the men of very real talents collected here.

CHILDREN SHOW "EAR FOR MUSIC" IN MEMORY TEST

New Trier High and Cicero Schools Win.

Twenty-five bows scraped twenty-five fiddles. There was a low roar from the kettle drums. The deep tones of the viol spread through Orchestra hall. Frederick Stock raised his right hand, stopped the music, and turned to the audience.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Bach's Air from D Major Suite," shouted a lusty juvenile voice.

"Beethoven's Andante from Fifth Symphony," said another.

"Wrong," said Mr. Stock. "It was Schubert's 'Moment Musical.'"

And so it went. Throughout the afternoon Mr. Stock's orchestra played a few bars of a classic piece and the youngsters in the audience guessed.

Music Memory Test.

It was the first "music memory test" game ever played in Chicago by youngsters. Twenty-eight teams of five high school or grade school pupils —teams from twenty-eight high and grade schools of towns in the vicinity of Chicago—were the contestants. The contests were held under the direction of the "In and About" Chicago Supervisors of Music, of which Mrs. Marion V. Cotton is president.

The orchestra played a few bars from twenty-five classics. The students wrote down the name of the piece, if they knew it. The team that wrote the most correct answers won.

New Trier and Cicero Win.

In the high school division the New Trier high won. Thornton high was second, and Evanston high ranked third. On the New Trier team, which is directed by Mrs. Cotton, were Wallace Muehlberg and Misses Katherine Hamilton, Marie Levi, Dorothy Clyde, and Paulina Manchester.

Five little children from Cicero won in the grade school division. The Winnette grade school was second and Evanston grade school team was third.

The Cicero team is supervised by Miss Winifred Smith and the children are Jerome Belza and Misses Evelyn Bloom, Vlasta Hlava, Ruth Antink, and Sylvia Mestek. Out of a possible 950 points the team scored 946.

"It is one of the greatest things that have ever been held in Orchestra hall," said Conductor Stock. "It was wonderful."

Aid Peace Makers

ITALIA GARIBALDI. OLIVIA ROSSETTI AGRESTI.

GENOA, April 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Women have little part in the Genoa conference. There is not one on any of the thirty-four delegations as a responsible member. However, several prominent women are included on the various staffs.

Signora Oliva Rossetti Agresti, who lectured widely in the United States last year, is the chief interpreter employed in translating the Italian addresses into English. She is a grand daughter of the poet, Dante Gabriel Rossetti.

Signorina Italia Garibaldi, granddaughter of the patriot, who attended the Washington conference with the Italian delegation, has been loaned to the Russian delegation by the Italian foreign office.

BUSINESS MEN GIVE GOOD NAME TO RAIDED HOTEL

Judge Arnold Heap yesterday continued the case of John Smith, night clerk of the Hotel Plymouth, who was arrested in a recent raid on the hotel in which he and fourteen men and women were apprehended. One minister and several north side business men testified to Smith's good character and the high reputation of the hotel itself. The hotel is located at Broadway and Leland avenue.

"This case requires deliberation," said the judge. "It will be a precedent for other cases of similar nature which may follow."

Twelve of the defendants were fined $5 and costs at a previous hearing. Sophia Lang and Edward Novak asked for a separate trial, declaring they were married. Smith said he did not know defendants were not married when they registered. His case and that of Miss Lang and Novak will be heard April 29.

Pope of Oldest Christian Church Blesses America

ETCHMIADZIN, Armenia, April 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—A patriarchal blessing on the American people for their help to Armenia is a unique and striking innovation of the Easter celebration at the papal palace here of George V., head of the Armenian church, the most ancient body of Christians in the old world. Etchmiadzin lies at the foot of historic Mount Ararat.

Kellogg Corn Flake Firm Hit in Canadian Ruling

Toronto, April 15.—Justice Middleton today granted the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake company, Ltd., of London, Ont., an injunction restraining the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake company of Battle Creek, Mich., and W. K. Kellogg Cereal company and W. K. Kellogg from manufacturing and selling cereal products in Ontario in competition with the plaintiff's product. He also restrained them from advertising corn flakes for sale in cartons and boxes similar to those of the London company.

NORTHWESTERN TO GIVE DEGREE TO FRENCH HERO

Joffre Arrives This Morning for Two Days' Visit.

Marshal Joseph Joffre, who will arrive in Chicago this morning for a two days' stay, will receive the honorary degree of doctor of laws from Northwestern university tomorrow and will be the guest of the university at a luncheon and a reception.

Dr. Allen B. Kanavel, president of the Chicago club of Northwestern university, which will be joint host with the university at Hotel La Salle, will preside at the luncheon given for the marshal.

Eulogy by MacChesney.

Big. Gen. Nathan William MacChesney will briefly eulogize Marshal Joffre and France, and the marshall will respond. Followips the luncheon the marshal will proceed to Evanston.

On Joffre's arrival in Evanston he will find the academic procession awaiting him at the southeast gate of the campus. The procession will proceed to the assembly room of Harris hall, where Dean James A. James of the graduate school will present the marshal as a candidate for the degree, which will be conferred by President Walter Dill Scott.

Reception at Scott Home.

Marshal Joffre will then be escorted to the home of President Scott, 1729 Chicago avenue, Evanston, for a reception. Mrs. Scott will be assisted in the receiving line by the wives of the trustees of the university.

FRADY CLAIMS WIFE HELD GUN DURING TRAGEDY

Miami, Fla., April 15.—Edgar C. Frady, Chicago automobile man, indicted for murder in connection with the death of his wife, who was wounded fatally in their hotel apartment here several weeks ago, declared today that his wife had attempted to shoot him and in the ensuing struggle the revolver had been discharged, resulting in her death.

The statement was made in the hospital ward of the county jail, where he is recovering from wounds inflicted, it is charged, in an attempt to take his own life after the shooting.

Frady said that he was awakened by a blow on the face and saw his wife in a half reclining position with a revolver grasped in both hands. She fired, he asserted. He grabbed her hands and attempted to wrest the revolver from her, and while they struggled the weapon was discharged again, shooting Mrs. Frady.

Frady said that he had frequently quarreled with his wife. On one occasion she stabbed him three times, he declared, and on another threatened to shoot him.

AMERICAN LABOR RAPPED AT GENOA WORKERS' PARLEY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

GENOA, April 15.—Twenty-five countries and 25,000,000 organized workers were represented in the international trades union conference which met here today in an effort to influence the main conference by urging disarmament, a revision of the Versailles treaty, and recognition of Russia.

Ben Tillet, the British delegate, bitterly criticised the American Federation of Labor for its failure to send representative.

"I think the American labor attitude narrow and sordid," declared Mr. Tillet. "Samuel Gompers calls the Amsterdam international too radical and M. Lenin calls it ultra-conservative. The fact is that this organization of European labor is the most conservative group in Europe today. America is short-sighted in failing to participate in the economic and labor conference, or else tight fisted."

Steals Chickens for Easter Dinner; Jailed

Stealing chickens for his family's Easter dinner cost Joseph Kunken, 22 Vincennes avenue, $1 and thirty days in the house of correction. He admitted in court yesterday he had chickens of his own, but said he didn't want to kill them because they were pets of his small brothers and sisters.

Man Found Dead Poisoned Self, Coroner's Jury Says

A verdict of suicide by taking cyanide of potassium was returned yesterday by the coroner's jury investigating the death of William O'Halloran, 27, 803 North La Salle street, found dead Friday in shrubbery at East North avenue and the outer drive of Lincoln park.

Lured into Poker Game, Then Has His Roll Stolen

Hammond, Ind., April 15.—Nick Redik of Whiting, with a big roll, picked up two South Chicago strangers last night, who coaxed him into a poker game. A few minutes later he got a fake call to the telephone and while juggling the receiver the South Chicago couple walked out with his coat which hung over the back of his chair, containing $800.

A Comfortable, Smart Shoe

There is no need to wear shoes that tire your feet, cramp your toes, restrain and weaken your arch muscles. There is a good shoe which is smart in appearance as well as correct in shape—the Cantilever Shoe.

Its primary purpose is to make the foot comfortable. But it is also good looking, and has those excellent features which brought it the endorsement of health and educational authorities and foot specialists.

The lines of the Cantilever Shoe are so graceful that you would hardly imagine it possessed a natural sole line, room for the toes without crowding, good heels rightly placed, a flexible arch permitting free circulation and free action of the foot muscles.

The woman who risks her health by wearing poorly shaped shoes is invited to come and see the Cantilever models. Many women who have changed to Cantilevers for daytime wear acknowledge that good-looking shoes which are properly shaped are a source of satisfaction and happiness.

By wearing the Cantilever Shoe, you will have foot comfort and the peace of mind that follows when the feet are no longer a source of annoyance. Try it.

QUICKSANDS AND RIVERS MENACE ILLINOIS TOWNS

Thousands Need Relief as Levees Collapse.

Beardstown, Ill., April 15.—Alarming sanitary problems and an enormous property damage are believed inevitable when the water, which now covers virtually all of Beardstown, subsides into the Illinois river channel.

The water continued to rise today, and swift currents, racing down Main street from the river menaced foundations. Several caved in today, and walks and pavements bulged beneath several feet of water and quicksand.

Beardstown's message to the outside tonight was directed to sightseers, who, Mayor Perry announced, would not be permitted to leave the railroad station after arrival. Boat traffic in the business section is guided by officer patrols in skiffs.

Trains still crept into the city today over the tracks of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, the only remaining railway. The tracks are under water and track walkers preceded each engine. Rail traffic may stop at any moment.

The flood, regardless of its continuance, cannot shut off the food supply, merchants said. Local wholesale houses are well stocked.

Naples Mayor a Heroine.

Naples, Ill., April 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Fighting the flood, every man in his turn, Naples today lost its fight to retain its homes from the grasp of the Illinois river. The entire populace of 200 families tonight is encamped in army tents on the knoll of ground northward that Indian chiefs and Gen. Grant have made famous.

Working with all the energy and coolness expected of a man, Mrs. John Chambers, the mayor, directed the withdrawal. One levee has broken and another is threatened. When it goes, Naples will be under eight feet of water.

East Peoria Levee Holding.

Peoria, Ill., April 15.—With the Illinois river standing at 24.7 feet, the East Peoria levee is holding, and the crest of the flood is believed to have been reached. Only high winds will now cause the levee to break, according to authorities over there. Scores of men are working frantically by lantern light in a dense fog repairing leaks and building up low places in the levee.

Refugees from the threatened area are housed in improvised houses and tents. The whole district is a sea of mud and water, and even tractors, which were used to move wagons laden with household effects, were stalled.

The Peoria-St. Louis state hard road has been cut in a number of places and is under several feet of water.

State Officers Alert.

Springfield, Ill., April 15.—Adjt. Gen. Black today directed Capt. McKinley of the steamer Illinois to tow flat boats loaded with sand bags up the Illinois river as far as Meredosia, depositing a supply of bags at points where they still hope to save levees.

It is expected the Wabash river at Mount Carmel, Ill., will reach a stage as high if not higher than during the 1913 flood, which broke all records. Much growing wheat is under water and live stock is being moved out.

Citizens of McClure, in the flooded area, tonight sent a request to Gov. Small to rush immediate aid.

Rains Add to Menace.

St. Louis, Mo., April 15.—Continued heavy rains in Missouri and Illinois are expected to swell the Mississippi till it reaches its crest of 32.8 feet here by Monday, it was predicted by the local weather bureau today.

Upon the strength of the levee near Ware, Ill., 100 miles down stream, depended tonight the fate of approximately 75,000 acres of the richest farm lands in Union and Alexander counties, Ill.

A 200 feet break in the levee near Grand Tower, in the same vicinity, was reported this morning and as a result of the gap, 5,000 acres were threatened with inundation.

Indiana Streams Rising.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 15.—Rivers and streams surging over their banks continued to rise today in the biggest flood Indiana has seen since 1913.

More rainfall in some sections of the state last night and today sent lowland residents scurrying to higher ground. Hundreds of families who vacated their homes two or three days ago saw the muddy waters climbing up on the windows.

Much live stock was drowned. With oats sowing long past due, farmers look with apprehension toward summer, fearing they will have no oats crops. Wheat now in the ground has been destroyed by too much water in the bottom lands.

Lacrosse Watches River.

Lacrosse, Wis., April 15.—With the crest of the flood predicted for Sunday, water from the Mississippi, Black, and Lacrosse rivers was encroaching still further on low lying parts of the city tonight.

Lower Mississippi Alarmed.

Memphis, Tenn., April 15.—Heavy rains in the upper tributaries of the Mississippi during the last thirty-six hours today drew warnings that a third stage of high water must be expected and that the flood period would be prolonged into May. Federal and levee board engineers are speeding up efforts to strengthen embankments from Cairo southward. Reports from all points south of St. Louis say the river is rising slowly.

U. S. Acts in Illinois Flood.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Representative Shaw (Ill.) today called upon the war department and the public health service to send men to Beardstown to help supervise the relief work made necessary by the unprecedented flood of the Illinois river.

Mr. Shaw conferred with Gen. Beach, chief of army engineers, who promised to dispatch an officer at once to ascertain what supplies were needed. The health service also promised to send agents to prevent an epidemic after the high water recedes.

BOY KILLED BY BROTHER.

Sabula, Ia., April 15.—Lorense Haynes, 4, was accidentally shot and killed by his 6 year old brother George at the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Haynes, today.

FIGHTING ILLINOIS FLOOD AT PEORIA

The flood at the foot of Hayward street, Peoria. The water is in the Rock Island railroad yards, and within a few inches of flooding the depot. [Pacific and Atlantic Photos.]

At East Peoria, on the left bank, 300 families have been moved out because of the danger of a break in the levee. Reinforcing the dike at the east end of the Peoria and Pekin Union railroad bridge. A break at this point will flood a large area to the east and south. East Peoria is in direct line of this threatened deluge.

The floods have submerged the hard road to St. Louis along the right bank of the Illinois river. The above picture shows an automobile on the road near Bartonville in about two feet of water.

VIRGINIA BELLE'S EX-HUSBAND GETS LICENSE TO WED

And It Reveals Dancer Had Divorced Him.

An aftermath of the closing of Virginia Belle's academy for "recreational and instructive dancing" at 669 North Michigan avenue on the doorstep of the "gold coast," a year ago, came last night with the news that Dr. Louis Lynn Walls, former husband of the society dancing teacher, had taken out in Crown Point, Ind., a license to wed Miss Lou B. Sullivan, who is said to have been one of his patients.

VIRGINIA BELLE.

At the same time it became public for the first time that Virginia Belle divorced Dr. Walls about sixty days ago. The divorce was obtained secretly for the dancer by Maclay Hoyne, former state's attorney.

Called Physician Cruel.

Virginia Belle charged the physician with "extreme and repeated cruelty." He filed an answer, denying in general her charges, but he made no other defense. She asked for no alimony. There was, however, an "out of court" settlement and she was granted her divorce.

Dr. Walls' age was given in the license as 46; Miss Sullivan's as 38. Her occupation is given as "inspector." But since neither Dr. Walls nor his bride, nor Virginia Belle could be reached last evening no further information could be obtained.

The doctor is house physician for the Virginia, Bradley, and Alexandria hotels, all in the neighborhood of his office at 607 Rush street. He lives at the Alexandria. He and the dancing teacher separated shortly after her academy was closed up on May 1 last year. She has since then been living quietly in an apartment on the near north side.

Blamed Society's Bad Boys.

The demise of Virginia Belle's dancing academy came after she had conducted dancing schools for several years both on upper and lower Michigan avenue. She stated, when she put up her "for rent" sign at 669 North Michigan avenue, that she was closing because the young men of the upper social set "insist upon looking on my establishment as something that it isn't." She called these young men "society's bad boys."

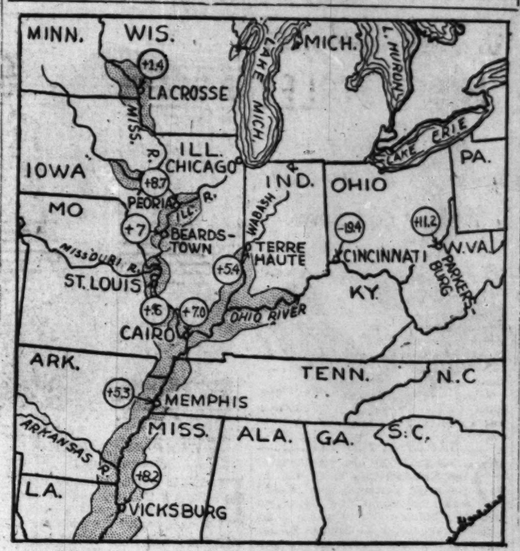
"I'm tired of it all," she declared. "They come here intoxicated and make a great deal of trouble. So I'm going to quit."

But it developed at the same time that Capt. Morgan Collins of the East Chicago avenue station was responsible for the end of the Virginia Belle studio. He had ordered her to close up, the captain said, because reports that all was not right with the academy had reached the station.

Charges Blackmail Scheme.

And then Virginia Belle's eyes flashed. She told a story of how several politicians whom she named had attempted to blackmail her of $3,000 as the price she would have to pay if she would continue to run her dancing academy. Rather than pay them, she said, she was closing up.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY FLOODS



The figures on the map indicate the number of feet of water above the normal flood level as considered dangerous. Cincinnati, O., and Parkersburg, W. Va., are shown to be below the flood level, but the rapid gain of the water in these localities indicate that the dangerous point will be passed within a day or so. At Cincinnati the Ohio has risen nearly ten feet in the last twenty-four hours. The figures of the water stages were furnished by Prof. Henry J. Cox of the local government weather bureau.

MAY WHEAT GAINS 9 CENTS IN DAY OF WILD TRADING

Big Dealers Caught Short Rush to Cover.

A wild scramble for wheat by shorts in a congested market yesterday sent the May price up 9 cents and closed it at the top. Since last Tuesday May wheat has advanced nearly 13 cents and July more than 6 cents. An effort has been made of late by foreigners and some professional traders and cash handlers to get prices down, as the milling demand and export buying have been poor and all the cash interests have lost money on their hedges.

Wheat is being bought from the Missouri river, where the milling trade has been disappointingly small and the trade has overlooked the strong situation abroad and prices in Liverpool have advanced, while they declined in Chicago. There is a strong interest in New York headed by stock speculators and others in which some of the big steel operators are said to be interested who have the largest lines of wheat bought, their holdings extending away up into millions of bushels.

Cutten Has Large Holdings.

A few local operators have more wheat bought than is in store here, or possibly can be delivered. The trade is of it that Arthur Cutten, who for months has believed in wheat, has the largest holdings, but his interest is small as compared with that of the New Yorkers.

The Armour interest is credited by the trade as being short against cash wheat bought at Missouri River points to come to Chicago for May delivery, and they were considered the largest buyers yesterday. They have sold Chicago futures against holdings in Winnipeg, and while Chicago advanced 9c yesterday, Winnipeg moved up only 4¼c to $1.39¾, or 4¼c under Chicago, while it has been selling at a premium over the Chicago market.

The whole wheat situation the world over has been one of the most puzzling that the trade has known. There is a close adjustment of world's supplies to requirements. Foreigners have cleaned up the bulk of the wheat that can be bought at the seaboard, according to a large cash handler, and the situation has suddenly turned in favor of holders, whereas for more than thirty days it has been against them. Foreign requirements the next three months are large.

Trade Too Bearish.

It is a case where the trade in general has become too bearish and the believers in wheat have taken the surplus off the market on the breaks, leaving it to the short sellers to get in the best they can. Trade sentiment is divided as to the future course of values. For months there has been a belief among strong interests that wheat is worth more money, and they have all suffered severe losses in buying in anticipation of higher prices.

James A. Patten is not in the grain markets to any extent. Four days ago he expressed bearish views on all grains and said he was short 5,000 bushels.

M'ADOO BOOM IS SEEN IN WILSON-TUMULTY BREAK

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Former President Wilson's letter repudiating the message given to the New York Democratic dinner by Joseph P. Tumulty and the consequent break between Mr. Wilson and his long time devoted secretary was regarded here by some Democratic leaders today as certain indications that William G. McAdoo is planning to become a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1924.

Mr. Wilson's repudiation of the message to the Jefferson day banquet was actuated, in the opinion of leading Democrats, not because of the wording of the message delivered by Mr. Tumulty as coming from Wilson but because of the impression created that it was an indorsement for the renomination of James M. Cox.

Mr. Wilson, his friends say, is not for Cox for another nomination and does lean favorably toward the nomination of his son-in-law, who was runner up to Cox at San Francisco in 1920. Party leaders insist that McAdoo is quietly maneuvering for the nomination and that this was one of the reasons for the recent removal of his residence from New York to California.

Oil Men Protest U. S. Drilling Out 'Teapot Dome'

Casper, Wyo., April 15.—The Rocky Mountain Oil and Gas Producers' association, comprising over 95 per cent of the producers of this region, today forwarded protests to Secretary of the Interior Fall, Gov. Robert D. Carey of Wyoming, and Wyoming's congressional delegation condemning the joint policy announced from Washington by the interior and navy departments to drill out naval oil reserve No. 3, known as the Tea Pot Dome, adjoining the Salt creek field. The action followed meetings last night and today at which resolutions of protest were adopted.

POOLROOM MAN SOUGHT AFTER FRIEND DIES

Stephen Samarage, proprietor of a poolroom at 4349 South Halsted street, was last night sought by the police in connection with the death yesterday at St. Bernard's hospital of Capt. George Sataroff, 45, former Russian army officer. The authorities claim St. Bernard's failed to report having received Capt. Sataroff last Friday night. He had a fractured skull. Investigation is being made.

Sataroff was found unconscious in front of his home, 4235 South Halsted street. He was taken to the hospital in a private ambulance.

Witnesses told the police that Samarage and Sataroff quarreled Friday night in front of Sataroff's home. Until 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon Samarage was staying at the Ross hotel, corner of Root and Halsted streets. The two had been friends.

VISITORS THRONG WHITE HOUSE TO SEE PRESIDENT

Washington, D. C., April 15.—The stream of visitors that has flowed into the White House since President Harding opened the gates and inaugurated the practice of holding daily receptions reached high water mark today, when 1,500 people shook hands with the chief executive. They filed past him in his office at the rate of from forty to fifty-five per minute. White House officials estimated that 7,500 people had shaken hands with Mr. Harding during this week.

STAR GAZER SAYS HARDING MAY GO TO GENOA

GENOA, April 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—When the economic conference opened, the poetically inclined discerned the spirit of Columbus hovering near. Now, even the stars, themselves, are helping shape its destinies, if Signor Tomba, the Italian astrologer, is to be believed.

Tomba, now in Genoa, claims particular distinction, because when Pope Benedict died he prophesied that Cardinal Ratti would be the next pope. Here are some of his conference prophesies:

One of the French delegates, he says the stars tell him, soon will fall ill. America will participate in the conference before it is over. Indeed, it is probable that President Harding himself will come over, and for his arrival the conference may be prolonged sixty days.

Youths Who Stole Taxi and Robbed Woman Sent to Jail

Declaring that it was "all a joke," Frank Goodert, 17; Milton Madden, 18, and Frank Ake, 21, yesterday sought to explain to Judge John J. Sullivan why they had borrowed a taxicab, held up John Cherry, the chauffeur, took his uniform, gave Mrs. Tillie Huck a ride, and robbed her of $300 worth of diamonds.

"I suppose it was a joke when you stuck guns against Cherry," said the judge. "Your sentences will be from one to ten years in Pontiac."

FREE FOR ALL IN EASTER STYLES ON 5TH AVENUE

Fashion Revolt Blamed on Flapper, as Usual.

New York, April 15.—Father and Mother Knickerbocker tonight were laying out their togs for the Easter parade on 5th avenue. Mother was frankly just a little nervous. Style-makers have been cutting funny capers this season, and she wasn't quite sure whether her new tailor made would be the rightest of right things or that she had selected the correct color for her bonnet.

Robert — Robert Hatfield — doorman at a giant department store for forty-two years, was frankly disgusted. Robert—who incidently never has left his post in twenty-three years except one day when he was ill and who admits he's a bit of a critic on milady's apparel—contends that style is dead.

No Style; Only Tastes.

"There is no such thing as style now. It's nothing but taste," he said.

"Something has happened and whoever it was who once said what woman should wear must be looking for a job. Maybe it's the flapper. Maybe it's the flapper's mother. Whatever it is, it is a mystery.

"Women this year are wearing exactly what they please. Look at 'em!

"Paris talks of long skirts. They don't seem very long, do they?

Avenue a Color Riot.

"They say colors are not exactly fashionable. Did you ever see so much color on this street before?

"No, style is dead. If a woman wants to wear purple, she does; if she likes black, she wears it. If she likes short sleeves, she forgets the long ones. If you go on the avenue tomorrow, take it from me, you'll see as many different varieties of rigs as you will see different women.

"Standing here every day for years, I've seen a change coming. Now it's here.

"Once there was some one the women called 'they' who sat behind the scenes and dictated what the fashion was. Last year the women began to revolt. Now the revolt is here."

HAPPY DAYS!

DAVID R. FORGAN.

DAVID R. FORGAN, president of the National City bank, was 60 years old yesterday and officers and employés of the institution made it a holiday. There was a great birthday cake bearing a candle for each decade of the banker's life, topped by a horn of plenty in white and gold. In the mouth of the horn was a card with the name of every officer and employé and the announcement that $548,675 new deposits had been obtained in the last eight weeks in a special drive as a token of esteem for their chief.

CHARLES T. BOAL.
[Koehne Photo.]

EASTER will be a happy time for Charles T. Boal and his family, for this is Mr. Boal's ninetieth birthday and he and his children are going to celebrate the occasion together at the family home in Kenilworth. Mr. Beal is still vigorous and active, despite his age. Just to prove it, he works every morning with his son, Ayres Boal, in the latter's real estate offices in the Peoples Gas building.

HAYNES REPORTS DRY INDICTMENTS BLANKET NATION

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.] — Commissioner Haynes announced today that the federal courts in the last six months have reported nearly 12,000 prohibition amendment indictments, out of which 8,000 convictions were obtained and fines collected aggregating approximately $900,000. This does not include actions and fines under state prosecutions.

The federal record in the middle western states Commissioner Haynes reports as follows:

Iowa — [Incomplete] — Indictments, 328; pleas of "guilty," 174; convictions, 184; fines, $53,150.

Illinois—[Incomplete]—Indictments, 798; pleas of "guilty," 447; convictions, 484; fines, $35,857.

Kentucky — [Incomplete] — Indictments, 466; pleas of "guilty," 249; convictions, 292; fines, $25,492.

Michigan — [Incomplete] — Indictments, 229; pleas of "guilty," 121; convictions, 143; fines, $27,500.

Nebraska — [Incomplete] — Indictments, 206; pleas of "guilty," 116; convictions, 124; fines, $19,009; civil penalties paid to revenue collectors, $12,000; bonds order forfeited, $20,000; value of autos seized, $6,000.

BRIGHT EASTER, WEATHER MAN'S PROMISE TODAY

Chicago yesterday went about the seasonal business of buying tinted eggs, flowers and new bonnets, and sending cards of greeting in preparation for a joyous Easter. The weather forecast is for a pleasant day with possible showers at 10 p. m.

The demand for Easter flowers has been unprecedented, the dealers say. The supply of Easter lilies is short, and flower buyers have been obliged to content themselves with a substitute. The egg business, too, has been brisk, and the kindly chocolate rabbit has been working overtime for the pleasure of little Tommy and Mary. Eggs were quoted at 25 cents a dozen yesterday, and there has been a big sale in the last ten days.

Special Church Services.

All churches in the city will hold special Easter services today, and some will hold two or three.

"There seems to be a very hearty response to the spirit of Easter everywhere," said the Rev. Dr. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church. "An increased spiritual interest among people in general will manifest itself in the services."

Easter services at the Edgewater Presbyterian church will mark the close of a successful campaign to raise $200,000 for a new church building. The fund has been oversubscribed, it is said. The young people of the Hyde Park Congregational churches will be in charge of a special sunrise service to be held on the lake front at 53d street.

Mail Men Overburdened.

The postoffice employés have been much aware of the Easter season. Mail has increased 26.4 per cent in the last ten days, a record, and most of it is due to the great number of Easter cards, according to the postal authorities.

Chicago Knights Templar are planning elaborate Easter services, and the members of several commanderies will march to and from churches in uniform.

One of the largest services will be that of Apollo commandery, which will be held in the Cort theater. After the musical program an address will be given by the Rev. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of the Kenwood church. In Austin the services will be held at 3 o'clock in the Kloeckner Memorial church.

Other Templar Services.

Other services will be as follows: Columbia commandery, new First Congregational church, Washington and Ashland boulevards, 3 o'clock; Sir Knights of Chevalier Bayard commandery, 87th street and Emerald avenue, at 3 o'clock; Chicago commandery, Oriental consistory, 2:30 o'clock.

The Woodlawn commandary will attend the services at the Woodlawn Park Methodist Episcopal church, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue, marching to the services at 3 o'clock with their own band. Special Easter services will be held at 3 o'clock in the First Congregational church of Oak Park for the Siloam commandery, No. 54. The Rev. William E. Barton will preach.

Services in Ravenswood.

At the Ravenswood club, Ashland and Wilson avenues, 700 Knights Templar of Illinois commandery No. 73 and the Evanston and Waukegan commanderies will line up in full uniform at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon to parade to the Ravenswood Presbyterian church for Easter services. Commander A. H. Reinhardt of commandery No. 73 will be in charge.

AMERICAN WOMAN'S MORALS ARE FINEST, WORLD TRAVELER SAYS

JELESTE J. MILLER

The American woman, in spite of her flapperish tendencies, has the highest morals of any woman on earth, is the opinion of Celeste J. Miller, who is said to be the most widely traveled woman in the world. She has just returned to her home in the Kenwood hotel after a 32,000 mile trip around the world.

But Miss Miller does not approve of cigaret smoking and drinking by American women.

"I don't believe in smoking or drinking for woman and I've probably seen more of both than any other single individual," she said.

U. S. RAIL BOARD OPENS HEARINGS TO OUTSIDERS

Receding from the stand it took last year, the United States railroad labor board yesterday opened the way for presumably disinterested persons to present evidence at hearings on wage and other controversies before the board.

This was made by the board in letters granting requests made by the National industrial conference board, the Railway Business Men's association of Philadelphia, the Illinois Manufacturers' association, and the National Industrial Traffic league. The only condition is that the party whose contention the "outsiders" propose to support shall concede part of its allotted time for such evidence.

The present wage hearing will be ended April 30. It involves all classes of railway employés, excepting the train service men.

IRISH SHIVER IN FEAR OF REVOLT ON EASTER DAY

Heavy British Forces Are Ready to Strike.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922, By The Chicago Tribune.]

ENNISKILLEN, April 15.—Easter eve in Ireland brings apprehension where it should bring rejoicing. The people are discussing the possibility of an insurrection by the radical Republicans on the anniversary of the 1916 Easter rebellion. Even the borderites seem more concerned with what may happen among the factions in the south than of any danger to themselves.

Yesterday at Newton Butler I found a curious group at a store window where a hothouse lily was displayed. Upon the waxen pallor of the bloom was a streak of blood red no wider than a thread. An omen, the people said, and they promised each other to remain about their homes until the holidays were passed.

The residents of County Fermanagh were cheered by the presence of six whippet tanks which rattled through the main streets of Enniskillen last night. There are more in reserve, it is said, and there is artillery in three vessels anchored in Belfast harbor.

5,000 Wait Near Transports.

The authorities along the border have said that Great Britain would do everything in its power to see the Free State through. The British military leaders have perfected plans in case the troops are ordered back to Ireland to maintain order and to maintain the government which the treaty provides for. It is stated that nearly 5,000 auxiliaries, all former officers of the world war who served in Ireland during the rebellion, are billeted within ten miles of Holyhead with transports available to carry them over the channel. These men are not permitted to communicate with friends in Ireland, according to the authorities here.

It is pointed out that only a small percentage of the Royal Irish constabulary has been demobilized. These forces are being concentrated in Dublin, and 500 left Cork yesterday by boat for the Irish capital. Since the treaty nineteen members of the constabulary have been killed.

25,000 British Infantry Ready.

There are approximately 25,000 British infantry troops in the south of Ireland. The garrisons there have been increased by the arrival of a regiment of Worcestershires from Belfast. The British infantry has just completed the evacuation of Dundalk, the troops going to Dublin. The greater part of the British strength in the south is centered at the two principal ports, Dublin and Cork.

It is understood here that the British do not intend to take part in the Irish trouble unless conditions get much worse unless there is fratricidal warfare and chaos and world opinion urges the British troops to get in just as hard as it urged them to get out. If such an unfortunate situation should arise, some British say, "We will move the Unionists out of the south and mop it up."

Collins Masses Troops.

DUBLIN, April 15.—[United Press.]—Picked Free State troops held every strategic point in Dublin tonight. An insurgent coup d'etat, anticipated for tomorrow or Easter Monday, anniversary of the 1916 rebellion, was to be met with all the armed forces of the provisional government.

Every point seized by rebels in 1916 was closely guarded tonight, except the Four Courts, which the insurgents held. Hotels, public buildings, railway terminals, and the postoffice, which controls all telephone and telegraph lines, were filled with Free State troops, heavily armed.

De Valera's manifesto calling upon the youth of Ireland to take possession of their country and referring to the "spirit fo 1916," has given rise to still further alarm. Roderick O'Connor, commander of the insurgent army, tonight declared he did not know De Valera's policy, but that if the rebels "would follow any political leader, De Valera is the man."

Arthur Griffith received an enthusiastic sendoff as he departed for Sligo to deliver a speech in favor of the Free State in the very heart of rebel territory.

Sligo an Armed Camp.

SLIGO, Ireland, April 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—This picturesque Irish town, where Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann is to deliver an Easter address tomorrow in favor of the Free State treaty, was full of armed men tonight, and reinforcements for the insurgent followers of Eamon de Valera were pouring in from the country. Nearly every house in the city was occupied by troops, and there was wholesale food commandeering.

It was stated tonight that the insurgent troops intend to allow no civilians on the streets after 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. In view of the presence of so many armed men, it is feared that few citizens will attend Mr. Griffith's address, which it was suggested tonight might be delivered in the county jail, the sole important building now in possession of Free State troops.

The route which Mr. Griffith will take in coming from Dublin was unknown, but it was the subject of general speculation.

Stanley Wanted to Become Motor Constable, by Heck!

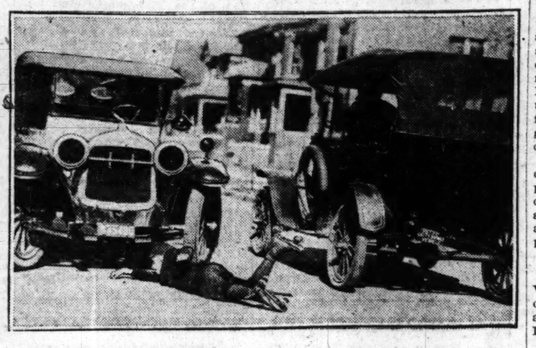
Stanley Walker of Niles, feeling the pinch of economic depression, yesterday donned a large star, mounted his motorcycle and hied himself to roads west of Wilmette. By posing as a speed cop he "shook down" passing motorists, according to the Wilmette police. The motorists complained to Wilmette authorities, who sent Motorcycle Policeman George Beck to take him into custody. When arraigned before Police Magistrate D. M. Mickey of Wilmette Walker was bound over to the grand jury on a $500 bond, charged with impersonating an officer.

HOW CHICAGO'S AUTO JUGGERNAUT ENDS YOUNG LIVES

Nine little children playing near curbs were killed last year in Chicago by motor vehicles. The photograph shows one little boy darting out suddenly from the curb in front of an approaching automobile. There is no time for the child or driver to avert an accident. Only two drivers of cars which killed children playing near curbs could be held for manslaughter last year.

Hitching on with toy wagons or bicycles cost the lives of thirteen children here last year. In the photograph the truck to which the two boys had attached their wagon is shown making a quick and unexpected turn. The lads could not release their vehicle quickly enough to swing out of the way of an automobile coming from the opposite direction.

Automobiles last year took their biggest toll of Chicago children who were running into or across the streets while playing. One hundred and seventeen of them were killed in this manner. Fourteen drivers were held on manslaughter charges. The photograph shows two boys chasing a ball into the street.



Two Chicago children lost their lives last year roller skating in the streets. They slipped and fell in front of automobiles. No drivers were prosecuted. The photograph shows what happened to a boy who suddenly darted out from behind an automobile, only to find himself in front of another car. One of the wheels is about to pass over the boy's neck and shoulders.

3 STUDENTS HELD AFTER SOUTH SIDE SLUMMING PARTY

Paul McNulty, 19, 627 Melrose street, son of Thomas J. McNulty, Chicago contractor; Edward J. O'Rourke, 19, 507 West 102d street, New York; and Eugene Kelly, 20, 555 Stratford place; Notre Dame students, were booked yesterday at the South Clark street station for disorderly conduct following a "slumming party" in celebration of their Easter vacation.

Their arrest followed a call for help made to Policeman James Coleman, early yesterday. They declared they had been beaten up by a gang of "toughs" in front of the Rex cafe, 22d street and Wabash avenue. Policeman Coleman said they appeared to have been drinking and called for the wagon.

Four companions of the boys escaped while the wagon was on the way, and the boys refused to tell their names.

ACCUSES POLICE IN HOLDUP AND DOUBLE SLAYING

A declaration that the recent South Chicago killing, in which a policeman and a business man were shot and $8,000 stolen, was the result of a frameup by two policemen, made yesterday by Walter French, convicted of safeblowing, caused Judge Harry M. Fisher to continue French's hearing on a motion for a new trial until investigation of the charges could be made.

Assistant State's Attorneys George Crane and Otto Christopher called French a "professional confessor," and declared he had crawled out of many scrapes by putting the blame on some one else.

The killing referred to by French took place a short time ago, when Policeman Ernest Cassidy and Phillip Sommers, treasurer of a building and loan concern, were shot down by bandits, who got away with $8,000 which Sommers was carrying.

SHOOTS SELF CLEANING GUN.

shall seek especially to protect the children of the city against the careless speeder.

Mrs. Lee Henry Frensdorf, president of the Cook County League of Woman's Clubs, yesterday promised that he question of protection of children from death by automobile would receive consideration at the regular monthly meeting of the executive board next Saturday.

Plan Is Praised.

Mrs. George Fred Koester, president of the Ravenswood Woman's club, said: "I am heartily in favor of THE TRIBUNE'S effort to arouse the public to the appallingly high death rate from careless driving.

Mrs. Harry S. Gradle, president of the Rogers Park Woman's club, has asked that literature and statistics be sent her for the club meeting Tuesday morning in order that the women may adopt resolutions at that time. Mrs. Samuel G. Snow, president of the Lake View Woman's club, will ask for an indorsement of the safety program at the annual meeting of her club Tuesday.

"Any legitimate methods to stop criminally careless speeders and to protect the lives of children in this city will certainly receive the approval and coöperation of the Chicago Woman's club," declared Miss Grace Temple, president of that organization.

Englewood Helps.

"You may count on the Englewood Woman's club for any help which it can give in furthering this crusade against speeding," said Mrs. Walter L. Stebbings, president of the group.

Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, vice president of the Illinois Parent-Teachers' association, was well pleased over the latest court action in regard to speeders and expressed belief that the various parent-teachers' associations under the direction of the Illinois council will pledge their support.

SHIFTER INQUIRY BY STATE TO HIT BADGE SALESMEN

Admission that Shifterism is "only a good graft" for selling jewelry made by Gus Kamin, self styled Chief Shifter, to Assistant State's Attorneys Edgar A. Jonas and Michael Kaveney is going to lead to a more thorough investigation of the "Flappers' Ku Klux Klan."

Several other officers of the order with self conferred titles are to be brought into the state's attorney's office next Monday for questioning as to the truth of allegations that the Shifters encourage lax moral standards among young people.

Representatives of jewelry firms who are said to be supplying a wholesale demand for official Shifter emblems also will be questioned.

Garage Is Part of Citizen's Castle, New "Dry" Ruling

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Judge John P. McMahon of the United States branch of the police court threw a bombshell into the ranks of the prohibition enforcement agents and police today when he decided that a private garage has the same status as a private dwelling when it comes to the search and seizure of intoxicants in the national prohibition laws, and that warrants are necessary for search and seizure.

MRS. F. K. REILLY HAS MAN SEIZED AS JEWEL THIEF

Bedford, Ind., April 15.—[Special.]—A man giving his name as B. E. Ward and representing himself to be the manager of the American Athletic Girls' Baseball club, is in jail, charged with being a fugitive from Florida. His arrest was due to Mrs. F. K. Reilly of Chicago, who, in company with Mrs. Arthur Fortune and daughter, also of Chicago, enroute to French Lick by auto to join Mr. Reilly, were waterbound here last evening, stopping at the New Bedford hotel.

While in the dining room today Mrs. Reilly saw Ward enter the hotel office. She left the room quietly and notified the police that Ward robbed her of $3,500 worth of jewelry and $200 in cash at the Carleton hotel in Melbourne, Fla., on Jan. 10, 1921.

Mrs. Reilly says Ward was a clerk at the hotel and took the jewelry and money under the pretense of placing it in the safe. He disappeared that night, she says. Mr. Reilly is president of the Reilly & Lee Publishing company of Chicago. He joined his wife here tonight, coming from French Lick by rail. Local officials are in communication with the Florida officials. Ward does not deny being the clerk at the hotel, but denies that he took the jewels and money of Mrs. Reilly.

GRAFT AND BOLSHEVISM ARE RULING MEXICO

OBREGON AGENTS WORK HARD FOR U. S. RECOGNITION

Oil Company's Gold Used for Propaganda.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
FINAL ARTICLE.
[Resume of the Mexican Situation.]

Recognition of the Obregon government is the major problem that concerns the United States and Mexico today.

For a year and a half Obregon and his agents in Washington, New York, and the border states have been campaigning for such recognition. A new, more intensive drive is now being planned, with Secretary of Finance de la Huerta as the wedge, backed by the $5,500,000 gold which the oil companies operating in Mexico recently paid in taxes. Washington has been informed that unless recognition is given the government of the United States and the American administration [illegible] the responsibility for the [illegible] condition that probably would [illegible]

The Mexican government propaganda, aided by the Americans who are doing business with that government, has succeeded in spreading the idea abroad that the Obregon government is honest and has the support of the Mexican people; that it is disposed to do the right thing by foreigners who wish to live there and invest in business.

Government Filled with Graft.

As a matter of fact, although the leaders may be honest, the government, federal, state, and municipal, is permeated with graft.

Obregon has failed to win the best elements of Mexico and is rapidly losing ground. His government is honeycombed with bolshevism, which, under the tutelage of foreign radicals encouraged by the government, has spread into the labor unions, the schools, and among the Indians, who remain ignorant, poor, and easily led as always. Under a smoke screen of fine words and promises and the "good of the people" the government is violating the fundamental rights of Mexican and foreign property owners, particularly reaching out against uninfluential Mexicans and Spaniards, whose country has recognized Mexico. Just now the sword of confiscation is withheld from many American land owners until the recognition question is settled, but it is ready to fall.

Rural Credit Broken Down.

In the preceding articles I have given the situation as it exists in various states, showing the activities of the reds, the breakdown of rural credit, in[illegible] of private properties under government sanction, the abandonment of mines, the treatment accorded Americans, British, and Spaniards under the agrarian law. Mexico, which should raise more than enough to feed itself, had to import 10,130,649 bushels of corn last year and 4,000,000 bushels of wheat. Meat and foodstuffs form the chief imports.

The farmers are not planting because they are afraid of losing their crops and lands under government expropriation. Three thousand farms have been broken up to give the Indians free land. The government cannot pay for this land because the farmers have refused agrarian bonds. They have refused the bonds because the government now owes nearly $800,000,000, with defaulted interest of nearly $200,000,000.

Bonds Seem Valueless.

"What good are these agrarian bonds?" asked an American in Puebla who had one farm taken away from him and another partially cut up. "I have government bonds now with accrued interest greater than the purchase value of the bonds."

Under the Obregon policy a trade balance of $112,407,497 in favor of the United States was recorded in 1921. Mexico had to buy this much more than she sold. This trade is looked to hungrily along the border and has given rise to a good deal of recognition sentiment. The argument rests the other way.

Financially, the Mexican government is leading a hand to mouth existence, its greatest drain being the army, which is kept in a good state of preparedness, with plenty of arms and ammunition. Oil and mining taxes form the chief sources of revenue, and the government is milking these industries for all they are worth. Profit in silver ore is figured at a few cents a ton.

[illegible] mine when asked by his men for a raise showed that he was paying the government in taxes the equivalent of $1.25 a day for each man. If this was cut he could raise wages. Oil taxes aggregate about 27 cents a barrel. Export of oil was stopped for a while last summer because the companies refused to pay a new tax. This was recently compromised at 40 per cent and the government received about $6,000,000. This, it was said, would be used to pay interest on bonds, but such promises have been made before, and the money is undoubtedly needed for the running expenses of the government.

Obregon is wasting money and has made no move to comply with the wishes of the American government in regard to a treaty covering property rights. The constitution of 1917, the most radical document of its kind in existence, is the fundamental law of Mexico, and under it almost any kind of extortion and invasion of the theory of private property may be attempted.

Why Recognition Is Withheld.

This constitution of Mexico remains the chief reason why Secretary Hughes has not been willing to recommend recognition. Here are a few excerpts from it:

"The lands and waters included within the limits of the national territory belong originally to the nation, which may transfer its ownership to individuals, forming in this manner the private properties. . . . The nation will have at all time the right to put private property to the uses which the public interests demand. . . . The nation will have direct control over the minerals or substances which in veins, masses or ore beds form deposits of a nature distinct from the earth itself. . . . The dominion of the nation is inalienable and imprescriptible. . . . Only Mexicans by birth or by naturalization, or Mexican corporations, have a right to acquire dominion over lands, waters and their dependencies, or to obtain concessions for the exploitation of mines, water power or combustible material in the republic of Mexico.

"The state may concede the same right to foreigners, providing they agree in the department of foreign affairs to consider themselves as Mexicans in all that has to do with said properties and that they will not invoke the protection of their respective governments in matters relating to these properties. . . . Foreigners may not under any conditions acquire direct ownership of lands and waters which are not distant at least 100 kilometers from a national boundary line or 50 kilometers from a coast line.

Nation Owns Churches.

"The temples destined for public worship are the property of the nation. . . . Commercial corporations or stock companies may not acquire, possess or administer agricultural lands. . . . The laws of the federation and of the states, in their respective jurisdictions, will determine the cases in which it is necessary for reasons of public utility to occupy private property. . . . The maximum amount of land of which any individual or corporation may be the owner will be fixed in each state of territory. The owner (of expropriated lands) will be obliged to accept bonds of a special debt guaranteeing the payment for the porperty expropriated. Mexicans will be preferred to foreigners under equal circumstances for all classes of concessions and for all employments, positions or commissions of the government. . . . The executive of the union will have the exclusive power to force any foreigner whose presence is judged inconvenient to leave the national territory immediately and without the necessity of previous notice being given."

Foreigners Unwelcome.

There is no welcome here for foreigners, no safety for the development by foreigners of mines, oil and lands which Mexico needs so sadly. Obregon has sought to give the impression that he would not enforce certain parts of the constitution; that at least it would not be considered retroactive. A Mexican supreme court decision in the Texas Oil company case was taken by him as settling the question of nonretroactivity. But it settles nothing. It will take at least five more decisions before any general precedent can be fixed. In the meantime the law is there.

Obregon cannot sign any treaty guaranteeing property rights for several reasons. One is that his cabinet will not let him. Secretary of the Interior Calles and Secretary of Finance de la Huerta are said to have threatened resignation when Obregon inclined to assent to the Hughes plan. Another reason is a radical congress.

There is this to say about investment in Mexico under present conditions. It is not as bad and dangerous as it looks. The laws are there, but there are ways to get around them. For instance, one American owns several tracts of land within the limits near the border fixed by the constitution. It cost him 3,000 pesos to fix up his titles. There is no guarantee of safety under the law, but there is a privilege of buying immunity and a chance to make big returns.

"If we could only get rid of this terrible grafting,' said one of the builders of the Socialist state of Yucatan, which is setting the pace for the rest of Mexico in the path of communism. This experiment in Yucatan has cost American farmers a good many millions already and probably will cost them more, for the state has a monopoly on hennequin, out of which binder twine is made. Dr. David Dubrowsky of the Russian Red Cross, who visited Yucatan a few months ago, wrote a letter in which he described the horrors of the Volga district and the reign of death there, asking help from the brothers in Yucatan, and adding piously that he hoped state Socialism in Yucatan would convert all the rest of Mexico.

Socialism Is Growing.

The next generation in Mexico may not have any scruples about taking other people's property, for the new education is along Socialist lines wherever possible. The minister of public instruction appeared on a platform in Mexico City with a Spanish Socialist and is a firm supporter of the Yucatan government. Instruction is being conformed to the "new order," whether one calls it socialism, syndicalism, communism, or by the general term of bolshevism. El Informador, an independent newspaper of Guadalajara, has a recent editorial headed "Master Bolshevik," and calling attention to the danger of teachers instructing the pupils in bolshevik theories.

The opposition to Obregon appears to be strengthening, but it does not have any particular support from the oil men or the bankers. The oil men do not agree as to what should be done. They have refused to advance money to outside Mexicans to start a new revolution. They will produce oil just as long as they can make money doing it, regardless of taxes and laws.

State Government Blamed.

The chief trouble for Obregon is growing among the farmers and business men, whose taxes have been increased to the breaking point. It is the state governors who have caused the most trouble in taxes. The farmers have organized into a nation-wide syndicate that is waiting for some kind of a man or program upon which they can unite.

Luis Manuel Rojas, who presided at the Queretaro convention in 1917 which adopted the present constitution, attended a banquet in that city last month in celebration of the fifth anniversary of the birth of that interesting document. He was not optimistic. He is quoted as follows:

"We can buy with agrarian bonds—paper—all the national territory, to give it to the poor, but this governmental proceeding is absolutely wrong. The landowners are also citizens—the best elements that form the Mexican people. New wrongs and injustice will produce a new revolution. The president of the republic has put himself in a street without a way out, and he blames congress for this. It is not true. The real responsibles are the radical members of congress. It is better to fight enemies than to work with such a class of friends. It is necessary that congress become a broad and honest representation and that members should not exhibit themselves as a lot of cheap politicians. I hope we will not need to have a new constitution."

Maderistas Favor Reform.

The new Grand liberal party, headed by former Maderistas and friends of Obregon, have come out for reformation of the constitution along the lines of the 1857 constitution. There is another movement for straight substitution of the 1857 constitution for the present document. The old constitution is that under which Diaz operated, and its supporters hold the new one illegal, as having been adopted without the sanction of the Mexican people.

Intervention by the United States is seldom discussed and is hardly considered a possibility. There is no answer to the question of "After Obregon, what?" There is a ring of outsiders looking greedily in—Gonzalez, Cantu, Palaez, Feliz Diaz—and there have been short lived rebellions in several states. Obregon rests uneasily in the seat of the man whose downfall he planned. He has failed to win the best elements in Mexico. He has no support but the radicals, and they will not permit him to take the steps that lead to recognition. That is his problem. Americans in Mexico are almost a unit in advising "no recognition without a treaty."

NEW YORK MOURNS HUB.

New York, April 15.—The passing of "Pop" Anson, grand old man of baseball, was mourned today by an army of his friends in New York. John McGraw and Hugh Jennings of the Giants, Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn club, and their players, all were grieved.

Sport writers and a great number of other persons who knew and admired Anson recalled his presence at the last world series. He was one of the liveliest spectators, enjoying himself by poking fun and swapping stories with other old timers.

Scores of messages of condolence and sympathy have been sent to Capt. Anson's family from New York.

THE NEW IMPROVED FIVE PASSENGER
HAYNES 55
TOURING CAR

The value which Haynes engineers and designers have made so dominant in every Haynes of the present season, stands out supreme in the Haynes 55 Touring Car.

With rare skill, the individual fenders, individual aluminum steps, searchlight type head lamps and exterior cowl lights have been united to create a desirable and distinct impression of style.

There is a confident reserve of dependable power in the famous Haynes-built six cylinder motor, while quality is evidenced in the cord tire equipment, genuine leather upholstery, and the inclusion of the Haynes electric button starting system.

Only the immense facilities of the Haynes factories and the genuine economies of Haynes manufacture could combine so many refinements of excellence and factors of reliability, and offer them at the price of the Haynes 55 Touring Car.

You may be ready now to buy furniture; a new home to be set up, or something added to what you have. There seems to be a lot of new homes building; and no doubt there will be the usual number of "newlyweds" to establish themselves.

One man gave his newly married son this advice: "When you buy your furniture, do one of two things; buy the cheapest stuff you can find, with the idea that in a few years you can touch a match to it, and get something good; or start with the best, even if you can't buy everything you want now."

We can't do anything for you on the first plan; but if you want furniture to live with for many years; a joy in beauty and in long usefulness, we have it.

You don't take any risk in buying Scholle furniture; because we give you our unqualified guaranty of continued satisfaction. You are always free to return to us any goods we sell you, if for any reason they're not satisfactory. We exchange the goods or refund the money.

SENATE VOTES TO EXTEND BAR ON IMMIGRATION

Three Per Cent Limit to Last Two More Years.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—The senate today adopted the resolution extending the 3 per cent immigration restriction law. The life of the present law, which expires June 30, 1922, was extended to June 30, 1924, one year longer than provided by the house. As soon as minor differences between the two houses over amendments are straightened out, the measure will be sent to the President.

In order to strengthen the restrictions and prevent aliens reaching the United States after brief residence in Mexico, Cuba, and Canada, an amendment was adopted requiring foreigners to live five years in these countries before they may be admitted to the United States. The house resolution required only one year's residence.

Fines for Steamship Companies.

Another amendment imposed a fine of $200 upon steamship companies which bring aliens to this country in excess of the quota. It also requires that the steamship company shall refund the passage money to aliens refused admission.

Amendments offered by Senator Harrison [Miss.], Democrat, to extend the operation of the immigration law for five years and to compel immigrants to travel in American vessels were defeated. Senator Jones [Wash.], stated that the merchant marine bill now being written would require that 50 per cent of the immigrants be transported in American vessels.

Senator Harrison charged that the Republicans had been discourteous towards Mrs. Lillian Russell Moore in ignoring her report on the immigration situation. He said she had been sent abroad by the President to aid the committee in making up the bill and that the committee had shown scant courtesy to Mr. Harding in not consulting Mrs. Moore.

Authority on Stage.

"I know that Mrs. Moore is an authority on the subject of the stage and possibly on cosmetics, but I didn't know she was an authority on immigration," interrupted Senator Reed [Mo.], Democrat.

"I didn't know it either until the President selected her to study the immigration question," replied Senator Harrison.

Senator Moses [N. H.], Republican, accused Senators Reed and Harrison of "ungentlemanly conduct" in thus referring to Mrs. Moore.

Discussing the effect of the first eight months of the operation of the existing law, Senator Colt [R. I.], chairman of the immigration committee, said:

"The number of alien immigrants from southern and eastern Europe admitted to the United States is only about 6,000 more than the number who have departed, and that the number of alien immigrants from northern and western Europe admitted to the United States during this time is only about 36,000 in excess of those who have departed."

SIX HURT IN TRAIN CRASH.

San Francisco, Cal., April 15.—Six passengers were slightly injured when a broken rail caused one day coach and three Pullmans of Western Pacific passenger train No. 2, eastbound, to leave the track two miles west of Winnemucca, Nev., early today, according to reports received here at headquarters of the railroad company. The injured were taken to Winnemucca.

DANCE PROCEEDS WILL AID NURSERY

It costs money to maintain institutions such as St. Columbkille's Day nursery, a room of which is shown in the photograph. But the money is spent for a good purpose, as children can enjoy themselves under trained supervision away from the menace of the streets. The alumni of St. Mary-of-the-Woods will give a dance tomorrow night at the Drake hotel for the benefit of the nursery. Proceeds will be used to keep the nursery open and to insure a continuance of the enjoyment so evident on the countenances of children shown in the picture.

STEAMER FACED BEING ENGULFED BY WATERSPOUT

Speed of the Carmania Alone Saved It.

New York, April 15.—The story of a gigantic waterspout which chased the Cunard liner Carmania half an hour and then suddenly subsided when it was almost up the hard driven ship was told by officers and passengers when the Carmania arrived today after a round trip to the near east.

The liner was about 800 miles out of New York when the spout was sighted. At first, passenger said, it appeared as a slight disturbance of water about eight miles south of the ship's stern. Then the waves were twisted and churned and hurled skyward with terrific force in an ever increasing volume, while myriad colors played through the angry mass of water.

For a time, they said, the spout stood still while Capt. G. W. Melson ordered the liner sent ahead at full speed. At almost the same moment the spout seemed to take wings and rush after the big ship.

Passengers crowded aft. Smoke belched from the ship's funnels while the Carmania strained every atom of its strength to escape. As the spout traveled it grew larger. It widened rapidly and towered high in the air, throwing off tons of spray.

At first passengers thought it just a wonderful phenomenon. They began to bet on its speed, on whether it could catch the boat, or pass it. Then as it towered in the Carmania's wake, gaining rapidly, it suddenly occurred to the passengers that it carried certain death with it—that the race was one for life.

The spout continued to gain until it was almost on the ship. The passengers huddled, awe stricken, along the decks watching the oncoming mass of water. It had only to reach out for the ship—and it subsided as suddenly as it had risen. Five minutes later there was nothing to show there had been any disturbance of the placid ocean.

THE TRIBUNE PROGRAM FOR MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT

1. A Square Deal in Congress for the Middle West.

GOVERNMENT.

It rained on primary day, and the political reporters estimated that 100,000 voters remained away from the polls for that reason. Voting is a duty, a privilege, a habit, a pleasure, a chore, a protection, or whatever the citizen thinks it is. The American is taught that he derives his institutions from it, and that they sustain him. He may be much or only a little befogged when he goes to the polls. He may have friends on the ticket, or he may know nothing of any one. He may vote prejudices or convictions. He probably is most effective when he is withdrawing support from a party because he opposes its policies and performances and is giving it to another in hope of better.

Then he is a check upon government, and in this fashion he does modify and direct. But what is his government? The things that affect him most are not affected by what he does in the polling place, or, if they are, the effect is so indirect that he cannot trace it.

Important government, as a direction and modification of American life, is made up of other things. Samuel Insull does a good deal of governing in Chicago by running the electric lights and the elevated and the gas utility. If he ran them on the hit and miss principle of political government he'd start a revolution in a week.

About the sixth time the householders missed their dinners because there was no gas for the stove Mr. Insull would be hitting only the high spots on the prairies to the west. A few lightless nights would produce a million armed springers. The packers do some governing by providing meats. They could create a situation which the citizens would feel by failing to stock the butcher stores. Mr. Wrigley might cause more trouble than Thompson can, good as our mayor is in causing trouble.

Moving picture exhibitors, by getting poor features and comedies for their houses, make more of a ripple in life than most of what is done in the city hall, the county building, and all the various local offices. Vicious pictures might corrupt and stupid ones would annoy the populace.

Political government could make a stir by letting the water works break down, letting the police wholly disintegrate, or by sending out the fire department with rotten hose, but most of the activities of political government pass over the head of the citizen so that he cannot tell from personal experience whether government is good or bad.

Its results touch him so indirectly, one way or the other, that generally his indignation over bad government is only a state of mind. It must be bad enough to enter his home as bad government before he recognizes it. That happens to individuals occasionally, but it does not frequently come to the appreciation of masses.

That probably is why 100,000 voters, who would not have remained away from a show for which they had tickets because of such rain as there was Tuesday, found that sufficient reason for not going to the polls.

COMPARATIVE PRICE COMFORT.

The retail cost of food, according to the latest report of the federal bureau of statistics, dropped only 1 per cent in Chicago in the month ending March 15. There is no great comfort for consumers in that, particularly in view of the fact that the average decline for twelve months has been only about 9 or 10 per cent.

Comparing the average cost of table supplies today with the average before the war we still find ourselves paying about 42 per cent above the old level. Evidently if we are seeking comfort we must look around a bit in search of it. Thus we may find cold comfort, but something.

For instance, statisticians who recently computed the cost of living in 1,000 English homes of government employés earning $2,500 a year and upwards found their costs covering 123 necessary items of consumption average about 100 per cent above pre-war figures. That makes it clear that readjustment of the cost of living is twice as far along in the United States as in England. And the economic condition of England admittedly is vastly superior to that of any other European country which took part in the war. However badly off we may consider ourselves, we must realize that comparatively we are well off. Let Americans get what comfort they can out of that when the monthly bills come in.

CENSORSHIP AND NORMAL HUMAN NATURE.

New York state's official censorship has banned an attempt by a moving picture concern to illustrate evils of our fire hazard. A picture was made which shows how a fire may be started by focusing light on curtains, the intention being to demonstrate the need of care to prevent fire and illustrate our prevailing carelessness respecting fire. The censor held that the picture might tempt children to mischief.

The point of view is that of official censorship as we have observed it. The assumption of all censors seems to be that human nature is incorrigible and that presented with the means of doing mischief it will always adopt them, not avoid them, no matter what the consequences. This is a significant reversal of viewpoint from that of our forebears, who, while theologically insistent upon the perversity of man and his proneness from the fall to evil conduct, believed that an exposure of the unhappy consequences of evil would act as a deterrent. "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" was confidently produced by temperance societies as a powerful and wholesome exposure of the truth that the way of the transgressor is hard. But the reformers of our day would unhesitatingly prohibit it lest weak human nature might be led astray. They seem to believe that our suggestibility to evil is unlimited and that our sense of causation and fear of consequence are almost nil.

Perhaps they are more right than their forefathers. We think they are one sided and have allowed their preoccupation with the weakness of human will and the force of human desire to pervert their common sense. Probably the trouble lies in their concentrating upon the weakling minority, the subnormals who undoubtedly are hypersuggestible and lacking in a perception of consequence. But ought public instruction and entertainment to be restricted within the limits of defective intelligence and emotion? Suppose, in the case cited, some child was tempted to light a fire with a burning glass, is it not proper to consider that the result would be more than compensated by the teaching of caution to others?

A certain amount of control in the interest of normal children is necessary considering the movies' general appeal and patronage by children. But the normal child should be the test. That would require considerable limitation, since the spirits of normal childhood are almost unlimited and its sense of consequence not greatly developed. But a consideration of defective tendencies should not be the basis of censorship.

OUR NEED OF A MERCHANT MARINE.

Chairman Lasker of the United States shipping board, arguing before the joint senate and house committee considering the ship subsidy legislation, made some points which should be impressed upon the public in order to develop an intelligent support of the United States merchant marine.

Americans in general are opposed to subsidies. Except perhaps in the matter of protective tariffs for infant industries we are inclined to say that if a business cannot stand upon its own feet it should fall. That is not a very bad theory if only the individual business is to be considered. But where such a business may have a vital influence upon the success of hundreds of other lines of business, and even upon the safety of the nation, the circumstances alter the case.

It is so with the merchant marine. The modern merchant marine is an infant industry in the United States. It labors under the disadvantages of inexperience and of laws which make profitable operation difficult by increasing costs of operation. It labors under a burden of competition with experienced shipping countries which not only do not have such burdensome laws but which accord their merchantmen a subsidy in various forms. If our merchant fleet is to survive it must meet this competition. The only practical method of meeting it is to provide the subsidy asked.

If the fleet were to be confined to the present main ocean routes, centering chiefly in the port of New York, and if the chief advantage were to come to shipping interests in New York City, the assurance of its prosperity might not be worth the price asked. But it will do more than that. President Harding, approving the subsidy plan, also approves the St. Lawrence seaway development. The seaway will bring our merchant ships to Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth, and other ports on the Great Lakes, affording direct carriage for our grain, meat products, steel, and other manufactures to the ports of the world. It will give the great middle west a direct interest and a direct profit from the merchant marine which we help to subsidize. It will scatter the advantages as it distributes the cost of the fleet. The subsidy and the seaway should come together.

What is equally important to the country as a whole, and what should be a convincing argument against those who object to a subsidy which they believe would help only a few ocean ports, is the value of a modern merchant marine to our national defense. The limitation of arms treaty has fixed the number of our ships of war, as it has fixed the number for Britain and Japan. But it has not fixed the number of merchant ships. In event of any war fast merchant ships would be an important branch of naval power. They would be used as scout cruisers, supply ships, transports, and auxiliaries of various kinds. Britain will have plenty. Japan will have plenty. The United States should have plenty if we wish to retain our relative position upon the sea. The annual cost of a subsidy which will give us this assurance of safety is but little more than the cost of one superdreadnaught such as we have saved ourselves from building in the next ten years.

HOW TO CHECK CRIME.

Many valuable suggestions were made at the sessions of the American Bar association's committee on law enforcement. Some were general and only to be attained by a correspondingly general change in our social or political conditions. Of these may be cited the recommendation of the police commissioner of Detroit, that politics be excluded from the administration of criminal law. Commissioner Inches asserts that this has been accomplished in Detroit with a consequent reduction of 58 per cent in the year's record.

We heartily indorse the ideal, but we confess that Chicago seems very far from its realization. Our community seems as yet too indifferent to the conditions which foster criminality, while politics has such widespread and powerful ramifications in our law enforcing machinery that nothing but a revolution of the civic conscience could destroy them. That undoubtedly is going to come some day, but it is not here yet.

Of concrete proposals, Mr. Sims, head of the Chicago crime commission, made several that seem to us useful and at the same time obtainable. We cannot predict how much opposition would be met by his recommendation that the statutes making juries judges of the law in criminal cases be repealed. Undoubtedly it would meet a good deal, but not, we think, from those who have studied the practical workings of criminal administration and who are believers in our principles of social progress.

We mean by this that in practice making juries the judges of the law results too often in reversing the American principle that ours shall be a government of laws and not of men. It results too often in the substitution of private for public justice, of the vague or violent promptings of momentary sentiment, for the reasoned considerations which in the long run protect both the individual and society from the malefactor.

Our legal system is extremely considerate of the rights of the individual and has multiplied safeguards for his benefit to such an extent that the commission of crime has become a hazard which almost any one disposed to crime can afford to accept. The evasion of law is a most successful science in our country and the effect is everywhere apparent in the prevalence of law breaking. We do not think, therefore, that reposing the duty of judging the law in our elective judges is likely in the least to endanger the liberties of the individual.

But especially, we think, Mr. Sims' proposal should be urged on the ground that it preserves the basic principle to which we have referred—namely: that ours is a government of laws and not of men. Whatever peace, freedom, and progress our nation and our race have been able to create and preserve are more directly the fruit of this principle than of any other. The distinction between our freedom and the universal oppression and stagnation that have prevailed in countries where oppression has been the immemorial fate of their people has depended upon our devotion to government by laws and our refusal to accept as rule the vagrant will of an individual.

What we need is a more intelligent sense of the necessity of the strict enforcement of law. We have got into a habit of weak pity for the wrongdoer who is in danger of suffering punishment, and we forget our own safety as well as the justice due the victim of crime. The victim is gone and we forget him. We forget, too, those who suffer from his fate, the widow, the orphan. We forget that we may be a victim in time, and we weakly seek or condone leniency to the wrongdoer. This is a perversion of justice and of human kindness. It is a disintegration of the fiber which makes a society strong, wholesome, really just and secure.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

There are rows of unnicked days on the ticket, days that have gone but have not been punched off. The collector who daily takes his tax from the expectancy and delivers the commuter as a poorer risk to the future has passed these, but the Great Collector has not. The evidence of their reprieve from the common fate of days is sardonic. It is evidence, say, of a major experience intruding into the minutiæ of routine which order life as a placid event.

The symbol of the commuter's days does not bear witness to this inroad. Sickness is the commuter's great adventure into strange lands, where more of the world is explained than comes to the perception of the clock ruled life, precise in its forced attention to the finely drawn plan of days.

It is the great adventure with the great forces which send the hawk after the thrush. The thrush has not only his song for the sunset. He has also his cry of fright and pain. The Great Collector finds even the ruby throat and leaves it crumpled by a blossoming honeysuckle. The white oak holds its brown dead leaves in its arms, but they will drop at the soft urgence of new birth, although the north wind in January could not tear them down.

Hepatica blossoms above its own dead leaves which held the new born in their dead arms. A skull in a Rhodesian gravel pit, a thigh bone in a cave, the leaf that falls to the newly spaded ground, the commuter with his ticket, the cardinal in the elm top, and the whippoorwill calling in the dark of the night are but a moment from each other in the design of the Great Collector.

DESTROYING BEAUTY IN RUSSIA.

When the bolshevists took over Russia they looted the churches. Radicalism holds that religion is the opium of the oppressed, administered by the exploiting classes to the exploited to dull its sense of wrong. So the Russian churches were promptly stripped of the gold and other ornamentation with which the piety of centuries had adorned them.

One of the results was that what was formerly the possession of the people, in the true sense of possession which is enjoyment, passed to capitalists. The jewel or work of art which the mujik and the peasant once could enjoy adorns the bosom of the dowager or the palace of the multimillionaire in some capitalist country.

Of course this strange paradox would be justified by the bolshevik on the ground that the money obtained from the sale of these valuables went to the proletariat state and was used to further the cause of the revolution. We suspect that a good deal of it did not, but such of it as did has but gone into the general ruin. Bolshevism has destroyed about everything in Russia which can be destroyed, and with it has gone much of that inheritance of beauty which the people possessed in their ancient churches.

Men who hate religion and all its forms and manifestations will not think this a serious loss or, indeed, anything but a gain. But the normal mind will realize that when these resources of beautiful color and form, to say nothing of their spiritual associations, were destroyed or sent out of Russia the Russian people, and perhaps especially the Russians of the masses, suffered a great loss. The destruction of art has always taken place when barbarism has erupted, but no amount of radical sophistry can hide the fact that it represents loss and not gain to mankind, darkness and not light, reversion, not progress.

Editorial of the Day

THE BUNGLING OF BOLSHEVISM.

[Chicago Journal.]

Grain and other foods furnished by the "capitalist" peoples of the world, especially those of America, have been pouring into soviet Russia for months and have saved millions from starvation. But in spite of this unprecedented effort thousands, perhaps millions, have died because the food which would have restored them to health could not be got to them. The wretched condition of Russian railways has held up the delivery of food that was ready and waiting, and that at a time when delay meant death.

Writing not long since of the difficulties of relief, Herbert Hoover said:

"The neck of the bottle in relief to the drought area is port facilities and transportation inside Russia. . . . Already the soviet authorities have requested that the rate of dispatch (now about 5,000 tons daily) should be slowed down, owing to their inability to handle such large quantities, and already there have been congestion and delays at some points. American transportation and port experts have been sent in the hope of increasing the volume of movement. Both Finnish and Polish governments have offered free railway transport during the last few days, and some increase can be had by using their ports."

Five thousand tons would make a full load for 125 American box cars. If the provisions were in bulky form a somewhat larger number of cars would be required, but what shall be said of a government which to save its own people cannot move twice or ten times that number of cars?

"Capitalism" brings food half way round the world to save the deluded victims of a proletarian dictatorship from starving; and the dictatorship is so hopelessly incompetent that it cannot transport the food thus given. Neighboring "capitalist" governments, which but recently had to fight for their lives against bolshevik aggression, give free use of their ports and railways to aid the starving; and soviet bungling makes even this aid insufficient. Can these communist blunderers do anything except wreck and destroy?

Apparently not. There are unjust things about the industrial system—or lack of system—that prevails among western nations, but at least it produces and distributes food effectively enough to keep people from starvation. That present day industrialism needs reform is not to be doubted; but to seek to better it by any infusion of bolshevism is calling in bubonic plague to cure a mild case of measles.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, of matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. "SIAMESE TWINS."

ONCE upon a time a human monstrosity reached this country bearing the label "made in Siam."

An American showman made a combination with the monstrosity and straightaway every man, woman, and child in the country had heard of the "Siamese twins."

So effectively was the work of the showman done that since that time any human monster in whom there are two separate heads and two trunks that are for the most part separate goes by the name of the "Siamese twins" whether born in Tipperary or Timbuctoo.

This is what happens when "Siamese twins" are developing before birth time:

Two eggs are fertilized and placed in the uterus for development. At the beginning they are neighbors but entirely separate. The eggs start out to make two children. They push neighboring cells out of the way or absorb those in the way that cannot be moved.

Presently the developing edge of one child has pushed itself against the developing edge of another. Things are moving fast. What gets in the way is run over or grown over or pushed away or eliminated.

Decidedly, the hurriedly growing child has the right of way. There is much growing and developing done. It is a long way from a single cell, too small to be seen, to a ten pound child with millions of cells and many organs—and nine months is a short time to do the job.

We are dealing now with twins destined to make "Siamese twins." The two edges of the two growing children come up against each other. At some period of contact they grow together. At the point of growing together the compound may develop but one set of organs to be used jointly by the two of them.

In a recent case the report says that the two sisters had one lower bowel and one set of generative organs to serve the two of them.

In that case the cells on the way to develop into pelvic organs grew together, pooled their efforts, and made one set of organs.

The cells destined to make the arms, the legs, the head, and all the structures of the trunk above the pelvis kept apart and made a full set of organs each for its child or its egg, dependent on whether we label it by the final product or by the beginning cell.

Although the two children shared the one set of pelvic organs, in all other particulars they were as individual as any other twins.

Have you never seen two trees growing together at the trunk near the ground, but otherwise as separate as though ten feet intervened between them?

The process in three legged children, two headed children, and other monstrosities like that is just the same.

In such a case one twin has overgrown the other. Every developing part touched by the dominating twin has been destroyed. The extra leg that sticks out of the body of the dominant twin is the only part of the dominated twin that has survived the contact.

It has developed just as fully as though the remainder of its body and limbs had not been devoured by the cannibalistic dominant.

As everybody has noticed in ordinary twinning, one of the twins is not infrequently superior in size and weight to the other. In some of these cases the larger is larger because it took more than half the available blood and food and growing energy.

BOOKS ON TUBERCULOSIS.

J. G. E. writes: "1. What is the difference between acute pulmonary tuberculosis and chronic pulmonary tuberculosis?

"2. In acute pulmonary tuberculosis is there any danger of hemorrhages?

"3. What is the best climate for a man in the first stages of pulmonary tuberculosis, that is, carrying one to two points five in the evenings?

"4. I would like very much to know all about acute pulmonary tuberculosis, as I am a victim. The disease was discovered six months ago. My sputum has shown bacilli in several tests, so anything you can tell me about this disease will be highly appreciated."

REPLY.

1. The acute form progresses rapidly and is attended by considerable fever. The chronic form lasts longer and progresses slowly. Periods of inactivity separate the periods of activity.

2. Yes.

3. Such men should stay where they are. It is all right to go to a sanitarium nearby.

4. Write to your state tuberculosis society at Topeka for its bulletins. Also for a list of books which you should have and which the society will order for you, or write the National Tuberculosis society, 370 7th avenue, New York City, for pamphlets and list of books on sale.

HINT TO SKINNY FOLK.

G. M. writes: "Will you please tell me if it is harmful to eat my breakfast and go right to bed? I work nights."

REPLY.

No. That's the way a cow works it. It is somewhat fattening, however.

WEAR BROADER SHOES.

A. B. O. writes: "I have a soft corn between my toes. Will you please tell me the cure for this?"

REPLY.

Apply spirits of camphor daily. Lessen rubbing by wearing broader shoes.

AN ACTIVE LIFE ADVISED.

Mrs. O. H. E. writes: "1. Please print a good diet for an expectant mother.

"2. What is your advice for a stubborn case of constipation?

"3. What kinds of exercise are not too strenuous for the expectant mother?"

REPLY.

1. An expectant mother should eat about what any normal woman should. Many theories on this subject are wrong. One is the theory that she must eat for two. This has done harm because it has caused some women to overeat until they upset their digestion.

Another is that the woman eat sparingly lest the baby be large and her labor difficult. This has caused some women to eat too little and thus imperil the supply of breast milk.

2. Unless plenty of bran, vegetables, and fruit and water will correct the habit the case is one for the doctor.

3. I think an expectant mother will do well to lead an active life. Walking, horseback riding, golf, swimming should help, not harm.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters for this department must be signed with names and addresses of the writers.

WAGON PARK GOES.

Chicago, April 9.—[Friend of the People.]—Will the city compel a coal dealer to park his wagons and trucks in his yard, instead of leaving them in a court? There are always five or six wagons in the street in front of our place. Some of them are old and never used. The garbage and ash men cannot get around to collect my garbage and ashes on account of these old wagons. T. F.

Notice has been served on the dealer to remove the wagons and to discontinue parking them on the street.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

COLLECT FROM COMPANY.

St. Joseph, Mich., April 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am a citizen of Chicago. I was injured here in Michigan last July in a street car wreck in which I was made helpless by injury to the spine. I have not brought suit against the car company. I was in a hospital in Chicago. Could the hospital send a bill for my care to the car company here for collection, and collect the bill? J. S.

They could send the bill, of course. Payment could not be forced without legal proceedings. Try to get a local attorney to handle your case on a contingent fee.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

START A PETITION.

Chicago, April 9.—[Friend of the People.]—I live on West 59th street, and am interested in learning when Marshfield avenue, north of 59th street, will be opened up as a cross street from 59th to 58th street. C. G. S.

We have nothing in our records at the present time for improving Marshfield avenue, between 58th and 59th streets. A petition to the Board of Local Improvements by the property owners will serve to start a proceeding for the improvement desired.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN,
Secretary of Board of Local Improvements.

SOLD FOR TAXES.

Niles, Mich., April 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—If a piece of vacant property in the state of Illinois is being sold for its taxes, what does the owner get out of that property?

2. How many years must elapse before such action is taken by the authorities? M. P.

1. Ordinarily, tax deeds are not valid to defeat the owner, but are merely a cloud on the title. He gets nothing from the tax sale.

2. Two years.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

REPAIRS PROMISED.

Chicago, April 9.—[Friend of the People.]—I have reported a hole in our street in front of our property which is very annoying, but it has not been taken care of. Will you please give it your attention? It is in the 2900 block of Arthington street. P. J. N.

Instructions have been issued to our asphalt repair forces to make the necessary repairs which will be done within the next two weeks.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

MEMORY TESTS Can You Answer These?

Answers to these questions will be published tomorrow.

1. In what mineral is Illinois the richest?
2. Where is the longest railroad in the world? How does it compare with the roads of the United States?
3. Where is the United States naval academy located?

Answers to Yesterday's Questions.

1. Who is the author of "Nations do not die from invasion; they die from internal rottenness"? Abraham Lincoln in a speech on "Danger of Foreign Invasion" at Springfield, Ill., in 1837.
2. What are the ten chief commodities exported by the United States? Raw cotton, wheat, coal, automobiles, leaf tobacco, cotton cloth, wheat flour, lubricating oil, bacon, and lard.
3. What plant family contains a beautiful flower, a deadly poison, and two favorite vegetables? The nightshade family, of which the petunia, deadly nightshade, potato, and tomato are members.
4. When was the Statue of Liberty unveiled in New York harbor? Oct. 28, 1886.
5. Who was "le bon chevalier, sans peur et sans reproche"? Pierre de Terrail Bayard (1476-1524), a French knight, celebrated for his valor and loyalty.
6. What is the "glottal stop" or "glottal catch"? A sound made by bringing the vocal cords together, closing the breath passage, and then letting the breath burst out, just as we make a "p" with our lips. We use this sound unconsciously in speaking English, also in coughing and laughing, but have no letter for it in our alphabet. In some languages it plays a large rôle.
7. What are five synonyms for the word aberrant? Erratic, devious, divergent, restitution, and desultory.
8. Who is United States minister to Finland? Charles L. Kagey of Beloit, Kas.
9. What races make up the people of Japan? The people of Japan are three extractions, the Anus, a primitive white man; the Malays and the Mongols. The Anus are the aborigines, the Malays came later, and lastly the Mongols, via Manchuria and Corea.
10. What are the divisions of the animal world? The animal world is divided into ten parts, known as vertebrates, insects, crustaceans, mollusks, worms, star fishes, corals, jelly fishes, sponges, and protozoans.

LEGAL REFORMS TO CHECK CRIME

De Witt, Ia., April 6.—Our jury system ought to be amended so that six persons will constitute a lawful jury, in either civil or criminal cases, and two-thirds of that number agreeing should render a verdict. This would eliminate 50 per cent of the expense and waste of time under present conditions. Our present laws permit one juror, who may be ignorant, prejudiced, stubborn or bribed, to block a verdict and thereby delay justice and waste the time of the courts, all of which, to the mind of any sensible man, is horse play pure and simple. The time and money wasted in trying the Arbuckle, Burch and Obenchain cases is a shining example of the weakness and foolishness of our present jury system. Twelve men should be amply sufficient for a grand jury who could work with more speed and 50 per cent less cost to the taxpayers. In criminal cases let the jurors be selected in chambers and their names and addresses kept strictly private.

The parole system and the indeterminate sentence should be abolished. If any man's crime warrants twenty-five years in the penitentiary then let him stay there just that long and not be back in a few years committing more crime.

Let every bootlegger and other violator of the prohibition laws be sent up for ten years for the first offense, and a few convictions would make them bone dry beyond a doubt.

A law to send every auto thief up for twenty-five years would soon break up that business and a law to hang every bank, train or house robber, holdup man, bomb thrower, black hander and kidnaper would surely place a check on these crimes of almost daily occurrence.

No bail bonds should be accepted in any criminal case, except in actual cash, and then made heavy. Any auto owner found driving his car when intoxicated should have his car confiscated. Any drunken chauffeur should have his license revoked. W. S. C.

PROHIBITION AND THE SALVATION ARMY.

Chicago, April 11.—Has it ever occurred to Miss Evangeline Booth that if prohibition were to accomplish what she thinks it is designed to the Salvation Army's occupation would be gone? The best work that army has ever done has been in raising the victims of the demon rum who are so often "down but never out." Moreover, does not Miss Booth endanger the source of the army's supplies when she draws the line against the class to which Mr. Speyer belongs? I will venture the guess that three-quarters of the contributions to the Salvation Army come from American and English subscribers who, like Mr. Speyer, "consider the prohibition law harmful." They may be a "rum lot," but when it comes to helping a fallen brother they lend a hand with something in it more grateful to erring humanity than a prohibition tract.

DELUSIONS OF THE AGED.

Edgewood, Ia., April 7.—There are two pet delusions of the aged. One is that the winters were cold and more snow fell years ago and the second is that the morals of the young people were better years ago. There is nothing to either theory. The average winter is as cold and as much snow falls as fell during the average winter of fifty or twenty-five years ago. The rail fences that caught and held every drifting snowflake and made noticeable drifts have been abolished, so little snow lodges in the highways. People have warmer houses, better heating systems and warmer barns, so the cold is not so noticeable as it was fifty or twenty-five years ago.

Young people were always naturally wild. The advent of the automobile has made it easier for them to cover more territory with their wildness and make it more noticeable. The girls have more sense these days than to wear skirts that drag on the ground.

JOHN MCDONOUGH.

FOR BONUS LIMITATIONS.

Chicago, April 8.—I am of the opinion that men who spent 25 per cent of their time in the guardhouse should not be paid any adjusted compensation.

The man who was sentenced for disobedience of orders or crime did not help while he was in jail, and the man who was watching him was kept away from work of a more valuable nature.

I believe that some men obtained honorable discharges in spite of the fact that they were confined over half of the time.

Many men will be opposed to any payment to men who were convicted of theft.

"LEST HIS WORKS SHOULD BE REPROVED."

South Bend, Ind., April 6.—G. Small's frantic efforts to postpone his trial remind me of the words of an old book. "For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, and cometh not to the light, lest his works should be reproved. But he that doeth the truth cometh to the light that his works may be made manifest."

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW.

TO THE DANDELION.

By James Russell Lowell.

Dear common flower, that grow'st beside the way,
Fringing the dusty road with harmless gold,
First pledge of blithesome May,
Which children pluck, and, full of pride, uphold,
High-hearted buccaneers, o'erjoyed that they
An El Dorado in the grass have found,
Which not the rich earth's ample round
May match in wealth, thou art more dear to me
Than all the prouder summer blooms may be.

Gold such as thine ne'er drew the Spanish prow
Through the primeval hush of Indian seas,
Nor wrinkled the lean brow
Of age to rob the lover's heart of ease;
'Tis the spring's largess, which she scatters now
To rich and poor alike, with lavish hand,
Though most hearts never understand
To take it at God's value, but pass by
The offered wealth with unrewarded eye.

Thou art my tropics and mine Italy;
To look at thee unlocks a warmer clime;
The eyes thou givest
Are in the heart, and heed not space or time.
Not in mid-June the gold cuirassed bee
Feels a more summerlike warm ravishment
In the white lily's breezy tent,
His fragrant Sybaris, than I, when first
From the dark green thy yellow circles burst.

How like a prodigal doth nature seem,
When thou, for all thy gold, so common art!
Thou teachest me to deem
More sacredly of every human heart,
Since each reflects in joy its scanty gleam
Of heaven, and could some wondrous secret show,
Did we but pay the love we owe,
And with a child's undoubting wisdom look
On all these pages of God's book.

LAST SERVICES FOR 'POP' ANSON THIS AFTERNOON

Interment Is Deferred Till Tomorrow.

Men high in the councils of baseball, players of the past and present, and fans of this and other generations will pay final tribute today to Capt. Adrian C. "Pop" Anson, who died Friday afternoon following an operation for glandular trouble. Funeral services for the one time great batter and manager of the Chicago White Stockings will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Jordan's chapel, 164 North Michigan avenue.

Burial, which will be private, will take place at Oakwoods tomorrow, the day on which Anson would have reached his seventieth birthday.

In memory of the man who helped to bring baseball through its infancy, flags were at half staff in all major and many minor league parks yesterday. Further evidence of the esteem in which Anson was held came in the form of hundreds of messages of condolence. Members of the family received these from all parts of the country.

Baseball Men Attend.

Practically all the baseball men in Chicago will attend the services this afternoon. Charles A. Comiskey and his White Sox ball club will be present. The Detroit Tigers will accompany the Sox. To make this possible, the game scheduled for the south side park will start at 3:30 instead of 3 o'clock. Commissioner K. M. Landis will represent organized ball. The Old Timers' Baseball association, of which Anson was a member, will be represented by Tom Foley, Frank Keefer, Dan O'Leary, and others.

Ban Johnson, president of the American league, will be present if his train from the east arrives on time. In Washington yesterday Mr. Johnson paid tribute to Anson as "a great ball player—a great man in every way, who did more for the game than many can realize."

Mr. Comiskey, who managed the St. Louis Browns against Anson's White Stockings in the world's series of 1885 and '86, attributed much of Anson's popularity to his love of square play and his aggressiveness.

Idolized "Cap."

"Kid" Gleason, veteran manager of the Sox, spoke of himself as "a youngster" in referring to Capt. Anson's career.

"I was just a youngster when he was retiring," the "Kid" said. "Pop, as we called him, was the idol of young lads in those days. It was our one great ambition to play the game some time in our careers as Anson played it.'

In his career of twenty-two years with the Chicago club Anson played in 2,250 games, knocking out 3,013 hits and scoring 1,665 runs in 8,947 times at bat, giving him a grand batting average of .337. His best year was 1887, when he batted .421 in 122 games. "Pop" missed the coveted .400 class by just one point in 1881.

FUNERAL TODAY OF DOCTOR WHO DIED IN ARMY

Funeral services over the body of Lieut. Arthur F. McQuaid, which has just been brought from France, will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in St. Thomas' church, 55th street and Kimbark avenue. Services will be in charge of the Hyde Park American Legion posts. The Rev. Father Girard, former A. E. F. chaplain, will officiate.

Lieut. McQuaid was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene F. McQuaid, 5417 Drexel avenue. He graduated from St. James parochial and high school and the school of medicine at Loyola university. He enlisted in the medical corps of the United States army and was later assigned to the British expeditionary forces. He died Oct. 15, 1918, as the result of being shot in battle while in charge of an ambulance company. An order for his promotion to a captaincy was issued soon after his death.

War Disabled College Men Lease Hudson River Club

New York, April 15.—The Come Back club of Columbia university, made up of disabled ex-service men, today announced it had leased a 600 acre tract up the Hudson river to be operated as a country club retreat for themselves and disabled veterans in other schools in New York.

J. MACK TANNER DIES HERE AFTER 2 YEARS' ILLNESS

J. MACK TANNER.

J. Mack Tanner, 54, died yesterday at St. Luke's hospital after an illness of two years' duration. He was the son of the late John R. Tanner, a former governor of Illinois.

Mr. Tanner was born Nov. 10, 1868. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Patsie J. Tanner, and one son, John R. The decedent was a graduate of Knox college. During the time the father was governor of Illinois the son acted as his secretary. He was secretary of the state board of charities under Gov. Yates. He was a member of the constitutional convention, now in session. He was horticulturist of Clay county. For the last few years he has been engaged in fruit raising in southern Illinois.

The remains will be removed tomorrow afternoon from the chapel of Fred Klaner, 1253-1255 North Clark street, to Springfield, Ill. The funeral will be held there Monday afternoon and the interment will be in the family mausoleum there. Mr. Tanner was a member of Ellwood Commandery, Knights Templar, the Mystic Shrine, Oriental Consistory, thirty-second degree.

MRS. IRVING STONE, 66, a resident of Chicago for sixty years, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carl Appel, Evanston, after a four months' illness. Arterial sclerosis was the cause. She was a member of the West End Woman's club and of the old Centenary Methodist church. She is survived by her husband, Irving Stone, superintendent of the mechanical department of the Chicago Daily News, a son, Milton Stone, and a daughter, Mrs. Carl Appel, all of Evanston. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at the Rogers Park Methodist Episcopal church.

HELD AS BURGLAR'S AID.

Isaac Parker, 907 East 43d street, charged with receiving stolen goods, was held in bonds of $7,500 by Judge Haas in the Englewood court yesterday. He was implicated by Edward Collins, Hyde Park's $100,000 burglar.

POWER PLANTS OF ROME SEIZED BY COMMUNISTS

Women Storm Ministry to Get Back Flats.

ROME, April 15.—[By Associated Press.]—Communists today occupied the Rome power plants, located at Tivoli, where the celebrated cascades supply the power for lighting Rome. The occupation was opposed by the Anglo-Romano company, owners, who before ceding the plant succeeded in forcing the communists into an agreement to operate the machinery on a contract basis. No serious incident marked the occupation.

Mothers Invade Ministry.

The ministry of the interior was the scene today of an exciting rent demonstration when a small army of mothers, babies in arms and leading small children, invaded the ministry. The guards were unable to stop the onrush of the screaming, frenzied women.

Headed by Deputy Giuseppe Mingrino, a Pisa Socialist, they rushed into the office of Vice Premier Beneduce and demanded the restoration to them of apartments from which they had been forcibly ejected by royal guards on an order obtained by an apartment house proprietor because his tenant was violating the lease by subletting.

The mothers demonstrated to the minister that they were unable to pay higher rents for larger quarters than the small tenements the lessee had sublet to them and the order rejecting them was cancelled. The brigade of women then marched out triumphanly and hurried back to reoccupy their quarters.

Seize Anarchist Town.

Squadrons of carbineers have succeeded in subduing Giyntara, a fortified mountain town near Caserta, which for two years has defied the authorities with its anarchistic spirit.

The inhabitants during this period would not permit police to patrol the town, a veritable stronghold held by armed anarchists under the leadership of De Maestro, who some time ago returned to Italy after a trip to the Americas.

The carbineers advanced on the town in six sections. They surrounded the houses of the leaders and succeeded in disarming them.

Husband Shoots Dog When Wife Is Menaced; Arrested

When two dogs belonging to Emil Eisner, 1211 East 72d place, menaced Mrs. James Cooley, 1221 East 72d place, her husband came to her rescue. He was attacked by one of the dogs and shot the animal in the leg, he testified yesterday when he was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct. He presented in court a petition signed by twenty-eight neighbors asking that the dogs be either removed or muzzled. The cases of Cooley and of Eisner, who was arrested on a charge of harboring dangerous animals, were continued to May 5.

Saturday Loop Crowds See Firemen Fight Flames

Loop crowds were given a chance to see the fire boys run when flames of undetermined origin were discovered on the top floor of a four story building at 219-221 West Lake street shortly after noon yesterday. The blaze had broken through the roof before firemen succeeded in checking them. The loss was reported as being about $1,000.

Woman's Story of Attack Causes Suspect's Arrest

Following the story of Mrs. Clara Morbiti, 23 years old, 619 Liberty street, of how two men forced her into a building, where one of them attacked her, Sergts. Charles Pilling and Joseph Mooney of the West Chicago avenue station yesterday arrested Max Steiner, 1552 Girard street, whom Mrs. Morbiti identified as one of her assailants.

MILK BELIEVED CAUSE OF DEATH OF ARMOUR GIRL

"Strong Circumstantial" Evidence Found.

"A strong chain of circumstantial evidence supports the theory that Gwendolyn Armour's death was caused by the presence of virulent streptococcus micro-organisms in the milk. The proof is not absolute, however."

This is the conclusion of Health Commissioner Bundesen, who yesterday completed a three weeks' inquiry into the case. After a conference in which a dozen physicians, including Lieut. J. Warren Van Derslice, secretary of the milk commission of the Chicago Medical society, took part, Dr. Bundesen announced that the ban on certified milk from the Wern-Keystone and Wern dairy farms, eight miles west of Waukesha, will be lifted today.

Organisms in Milk.

A marked sample of milk from the Wern farm, taken soon after the death of Gwendolyn Armour, 6 year old daughter of Philip D. Armour III., on March 23, was found to contain pathogenic or virulent streptococcus organisms, which caused the exhaustive inquiry.

Dr. Frederick O. Tonney, director of the health department laboratories, made a series of disclosures in his report to the commission, delivered to the conference of physicians.

Cultures taken from the throats of thirty employés of the farm which supplied the Armour baby with milk, were found to be negative with one exception. The positive culture, from which the streptococcus haemolyticus or deadly corpuscle dissolving organism was isolated by Dr. Tonney, was traced to the throat of Fred Truscott, a milker on the farm, since discharged.

Helper a Diphtheria Carrier.

Incidentally, Dr. Tonney reported that Howard Price, a neighbor pressed into service in an emergency on the farm, was found to be a diphtheria carrier.

Two diphtheria carriers also were discovered among men who applied for work on the two farms, leading the health authorities to believe that potential diphtheria is present in the vicinity.

"We have a strong chain of circumstantial evidence," Dr. Tonney said. "First we find the organisms from which the Armour girl died in a sample of the milk. Then we find it present in the throat of a milker on the farm from which the milk came, showing that it would be possible for the milker to infect the milk by coughing or sneezing.

"Of course it is also possible the girl got the infection elsewhere."

New Safeguards Planned.

Heretofore supervision of certified milk has been entirely within the jurisdiction of the medical society milk commission. Hereafter the health department will throw the following additional safeguards around this milk, Dr. Bundesen said:

Throat cultures of all employés every two weeks.

Throat cultures of new employés before they are permitted to work on a certified milk farm.

A weekly bacteriological test of the product of all such farms.

The elimination of all hand-capping of bottles on such farms. It shiuld be done by machinery.

Dr. Van Derslice flatly disagreed with Dr. Bundesen's conclusions on the Armour case

"I don't think the girl died of a milk born infection," he said. "It would be difficult to find thirty men on the street whose throats do not contain the streptococcus. These farms have now received the unqualified O. K. of the Wisconsin health department, the University of Wisconsin and now the Chicago health department, and there can be no doubt of the purity of their products. They were investigated by their enemies."

BRIDEGROOMS TO GET ALTAR KISSES NOW WITH WOMEN AS J. P.'S

Warning to brides-to-be, who may be married in Somers, Wis.:

MRS. HARRY THOMPSON.

Mrs. Harry Thompson and Mrs. John Umland, farmers' wives, have been elected justices of the peace. It is said they intend to reverse the usual custom of kissing the bride and instead embrace the bridegroom. The men of the village, weary of politics, declined to enter the field this year, leaving it open to their wives. Two vacancies were open at the recent election. The women took advantage of it. Mrs. Thompson so successfully campaigned that she received 187 votes, to 186 for Mrs. Umland. She thus won for the two year vacancy, while Mrs. Umland will fill the one year vacancy.

MRS. JOHN UMLAND

"We'll qualify on the first of July, and make the office of justice of the peace the most popular court in the community," declared the women. "We can perform marriages just as well as men ever could."

CITIZENS' ASSN. OFFERS TO AID IN SCHOOLS INQUIRY

Would Help Sift Charges of Extravagance.

Hints of a sweeping investigation of alleged extravagant expenditures by the board of education for "incidentals," at the expense of teachers' salaries, came yesterday when the Citizens' Association of Chicago, a law enforcement body, offered to aid the Chicago Teachers' federation in uncovering any irregularities that might exist.

This development came on the heels of another revealing that the board of education budget for 1922, already prepared but not yet approved, would provide that $8,660,128, or $1,229,075 more than last year, be expended for incidentals.

The proposed increase for this item, it was pointed out, would go far toward meeting the teachers' demands for salary increases that would total $3,250,000. A copy of the budget is in the hands of Miss Margaret A. Haley, business representative of the teachers' organization.

The budget not only disclosed contemplated expenditures for 1922, but it also confirmed Miss Haley, she contended, in her belief that William A. Bither, attorney for the board of education, had made inaccurate statements as to what percentage of the educational fund was expended for teachers' salaries in 1921.

Shelby M. Singleton, secretary of the Citizens' Association of Chicago, said last night that the association became interested in reports that followed the recent massmeeting in the Woods theater of the teachers' federation.

Charge Reckless Expenditures.

At this meeting a report charging "reckless, useless, and extravagant" expenditures from the educational fund for incidentals was read. It contained the following:

"There are expenditures for such things as office furniture, chairs, desks, moving pictures, telephones, pianos, rugs, Victrolas, and equipment of every kind except the necessary things for the use of the children, such, especially, as pens, paper, and books, and other materials needed for work with the children.

Teachers Pay for Supplies.

"Teacher after teacher reported that they, the teachers, had to buy paper and other materials needed for the children, while they have seen these furnishings forced upon the schools.

"Principals have not been asked whether they wished these furnishings, or needed them—they have been called up on the telephone and told to order them."

"One of our representatives was in conference with Miss Haley today," said Mr. Singleton. "If the facts seem to disclose irregularities the association will support any effort to check them."

A split in the ranks of the board of education members on the question of teachers' salary increases has developed, according to Miss Haley.

"I have been assured," she said, "that six members of the board favor the salary increases we ask for the 8,000 elementary school teachers. And they have tried to bring the matter up at board meetings, but have been prevented from doing so."

Members for More Salary.

These members, Miss Haley indicated, are Francis E. Croarkin, Dr. B. Klarkowski, Hart Hanson, Mrs. Frances E. Thornton, Dr. Sadie Bay Adair, and J. Lewis Coath.

In this stand on teachers' salaries, it reported, they are rebels against the rule of Edwin S. Davis, president of the board, and Albert H. Severinghaus, vice president. It is said the six-to-two alignment prevails on other issues.

Trustee Jacob M. Loeb, dissatisfied with proceedings, has refused to attend board meetinges for some time. Mrs. Pauline Struwing is listed as neutral in the salary controversy.

The salary proposal is that the minimum pay of elementary school teachers be increased from $1,200 to $1,500 and the maximum from $2,000 to $2,500. High school teachers now receive $3,400.

RUSSIAN ENVOY WON'T TESTIFY IN SEMENOFF CASE

Immunity Is Claimed for Ambassador.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—A new complication over the presence of Gen. Gregorie Semenoff in this country arose today, when the senate labor committee sought to subpœna in its investigation of the case Boris Bakhmeteff, the last accredited Russian ambassador to the United States, and found its right to do so contradicted under the practice of "diplomatic immunity."

Mr. Bakhmeteff, sent here in 1917 by the Kerensky government of Russia, was not in Washington when the subpœna was issued, but it was said at the embassy that immunity would be claimed.

Senator Borah, Republican [Idaho], chairman of the labor committee, was not deterred by the statement of the Russian officials, however, saying that the question of Mr. Bakhmeteff's status would have to be determined when it arose through his failure to respond to the committee's summons. It seemed rather illogical, the Idaho senator said, for a man to claim to be ambassador of a government which went out of existence five years ago.

At the same time Senator Borah, who began his committee investigation in an endeavor to develop whether Gen. Semenoff should be deported, telegraphed New York authorities asking whether there was any way to punish the former Cossack chief "for the murder of American soldiers in Siberia."

New York, April 15.—Gen. Gregorie Semenoff, former ataman of the Siberian Cossacks, now the butt of east side hooters and catcallers, spent another day in Ludlow street jail today, where he is held in default of bail on a civil warrant, while crowds milled about, waiting for a chance to see him and howl out their anger and hatred.

Most of the day the general showed no sign that the crowd's presence disturbed him. But he refused to exercise. To do so meant he would have to go into the courtyard, while hundreds of persons on nearby roofs shouted at every move he made.

DRAFT PLAN FOR A SINGLE COURT IN COOK COUNTY

Committee to Push Idea Before Con Con.

Creation of a single court to take over the duties of all courts existing in Cook county is proposed in a report of the consolidated courts committee made public last night. This proposal, it was announced, has the backing of the Chicago Bar association, the Lawyers' association of Illinois, the Woman's Bar association of Illinois, the Woman's City club of Chicago, the Citizens' association of Chicago, the public affairs committee of the Union League club and the Church Federation of Chicago.

It is proposed to have these and other civic organizations submit the plan for a single court to the constitutional convention as a substitute for the plan tentatively adopted by the convention which provides for two courts.

Divided Into Five Branches.

The single court which it is proposed to create is to be divided into five departments, with a presiding justice over each department, and a chief justice over all. The eighty judges who are to compose the court may be transferred from one department to another by the chief justice.

The five departments and the subdivisions suggested are as follows:

1. Chancery, Probate and Juvenile—Chancery, Probate, Divorce, and Juvenile.

2. Contract [jury]—First class [over $1,000]; second class, attachments, garnishment, and replevin motions.

3. Tort [jury]—First class [over $1,000]; second class, forcible entry, etc. Motions.

4. General civil [nonjury]—Torts, contract, forcible entry, etc.; small claims.

5. Criminal and quasi-criminal—Felony trials, misdemeanor trials, police branches, ordinance cases, Traffic court, Domestic Relations, Boys' court, Morals' court.

Argument for Single Court.

In support of the plan for a unified court it is urged in the report of the consolidated courts committee:

"The value of the unification in functional departments of a single court would be best proven in the criminal department. The artificial and arbitrary division between misdemeanors and felonies, so far as judicial administration is concerned, should be abolished. This was done in the unified criminal court in Detroit two years ago, and since then a brilliant record of achievement has been made. Other cities are moving toward a similar unification of law-enforcing judges.

"A tribunal charged with the tremendous responsibility of curbing crime should not be weighted down by any other responsibility, especially by such functions as are considered 'inferior' or 'petty.'"

Made Millions Laugh

HARRY VOKES.

[Armstrong Photo.]

Boston, Mass., April 15.—Harry Vokes the comedian who with Hap Ward, entertained thousands in this country and abroad for years, died at a hospital here today. Death was due to injuries sustained in an explosion yesterday at the plant of the Beacon Oil company in Everett. He had been employed there recently as a pump tender.

Although Vokes attained his comic fame as a member of the team of Ward and Vokes, he came of a family of clowns that played in circusses. The team appeared in vaudeville from 1886 to 1904, first in variety, then in farcical sketches. "The Governors," a "Run on the Bank," and "A Pair of Pinks," were among those especially remembered.

The team split in 1904, Ward retiring, but Vokes continuing his comic rôles until four years ago. Hap Ward was at his old time partner's bedside during the night. Vokes was 55 years old.

CUT IN FREIGHT RATES LIMITED BY COMMISSION

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Proposals of transcontinental railroads to modify present freight schedules in Rocky mountain and Pacific coast territory to meet water competition in the coast to coast and coast to gulf trade were exhaustively analyzed today in a report made to the interstate commerce commission by Examiner Disque, who recommended that the roads' applications be rejected in part but granted in several particulars. The report, if accepted by the commission, will guide final decisions fixing the new status of rates.

A. J. GRONNA IMPROVING.

Rochester, Minn., April 15.—A. J. Gronna, former United States senator from North Dakota, who was operated on here Wednesday for a stomach ailment, spent a "very good night," according to an announcement made by his physicians this morning.

MARY GARDEN'S SUCCESSOR NOT NAMED—INSULL

Change Certain Next Season, It Is Said.

Following the publication yesterday in THE TRIBUNE of a story that Mary Garden would retire as general director of the Chicago Opera and that in her place Giorgio Polacco would take that post, Samuel Insull, president of the Civic Opera association, made the following statement:

"There is no foundation whatever for the statement in THE TRIBUNE this morning as to Giorgio Polacco being the new general director of the Chicago Opera company. No one has been discussed to take Miss Garden's position in the event of her retirement, and, as a matter of fact, the executive organization will be of an entirely different character should Miss Garden retire.

"In any event, before the subject of organization can be considered, the $500,000 guaranty fund has got to be completed, and to do this a substantial amount of additional subscriptions is required."

Get Independent Confirmation.

From an independent source THE TRIBUNE was again informed that Miss Garden would, in fact, retire at the close of the present season, and that next autumn, if not earlier, this fact would be announced. It also was learned that Mr. Polacco would be given an important share in the direction of the organization's artistic affairs.

The opera company will end its tour at Wichita, Kas., next Saturday night, returning to Chicago immediately afterward. It is expected that business meetings of the new organization will be taken up at once, plans made, and statements issued regarding the future.

Triple Control Predicted.

THE TRIBUNE'S prediction was that Mr. Polacco would be in charge of the company's artistic matters, that Clark A. Shaw would continue as business manager, and that there would be a third person who would establish a liaison between the two. The chances are that this one will be selected through his being in touch with both the business of giving opera and the finance committee of the new organization.

The campaign for the guarantee fund for the five year period is continuing, at least until May 1.

Michigan Justice Swift; Slayer in Solitary for Life

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., April 15.—[Special.]—Edgar Robare, convicted last night of the murder of Botdorf Norberg, near Manistique, hitting him with a club after binding him hand and foot in his room, was sentenced today by Judge L. H. Feed to life imprisonment at hard labor and solitary confinement in Marquette prison. His brother, Dan Robare, was sentenced at the same time to ten years at hard labor at Marquette for robbery.

BRITAIN CATCHING UP ON DEBTS DUE U. S.; SENDS $19,672,500

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Payment of $19,672,500 by Great Britain as the second installment on the debt of $122,000,000 created by that government's purchase of silver during the war was reported to the treasury today by the Federal Reserve bank of New York.

The payment consisted of $18,300,000 of principal and $1,372,500 of interest. A further installment of $12,200,000 on the debt is due May 15, which will cut Great Britain's debt in half.

Under the arrangements for payment by Great Britain on the silver purchases the debt will be liquidated in May, 1924, these payments being entirely apart from the $5,000,000,000 of war loans due the United States from Great Britain.

1 WOMAN CAUSES TWO ALIENATION SUITS FOR $250,000

White Plains, N. Y., April 15.—William J. Lester, Seattle theater manager, is suing George T. Williams, Wall street steamship operator, for $100,000, and Williams is suing Lester for $150,000, all over the affections of Mrs. Amanda Lester, who in her time has been the wife of both men.

And now, according to the two men, she is living with neither of them.

Williams married her in 1900 at Camden, N. J., and they lived happily until 1914, when, according to his complaint today, Lester came along and alienated her affections. Then Williams got a divorce and Lester married her.

Lester's suit, filed two weeks ago, alleges that in 1920 Williams went out to Seattle with a second wife, dropped her there, and, again wooing his first spouse, took her away from Lester and brought her back east.

CARDINAL NEWMAN once said that it was a matter of regret that the English language possesses no single word to describe a state of higher intelligence, a word on the order of "virtue." The nearest approach is the term "culture." The Permanent Opera is a definite sign of this higher spirit on the part of a city. Let us all support it.

Don't Move Your Old Piano!

Let Us Take Your Present Instrument and Give You Credit For It on An Up-to-Date Piano

Simple and Economical Plan

FREQUENTLY the delight created by the prospect of settling in your new home is dulled by the thought of moving. Your piano especially, being one of your most treasured possessions, is a cause of worry. But this need not be so. Take advantage of our plan, as hundreds of others do each year, and you will be relieved of all the bothersome worry of moving your piano. The plan is very simple and entails no expense to you.

Hundreds Take Advantage of It

Another feature which is especially appealing is the fact that you can add to the charm of your home by placing in it an instrument of the latest design and of exquisite musical quality. Briefly this is how it may be done. We will remove your present piano and give you a credit voucher allowing a liberal valuation for it. When you are settled in your new home you may come in and select a new instrument. The credit voucher may be applied against the purchase. Thus for only a comparatively small investment you obtain a new piano.

Simply Fill Out the Memo

CLIP OUT the memo shown above, mail it to us and we will send a man out to your home. He will furnish you a free estimate of the valuation of your instrument. Then, when you are ready to move, we will send our own expert men to your home to remove the piano. This is the most attractive way of solving your moving problem. It saves you time and money. Drayage and storage charges—both waste—are eliminated.

A Six Months' Rental Plan

We are at present also featuring a purchase plan whereby you may rent a piano for six months. At the end of this time if you do not care to give it up, the payments which you paid as rental will be applied towards the purchase of the instrument. It is surprising to know how many people take advantage of this method of obtaining a good instrument. It is a most economical way of purchasing. It assures satisfaction to the most prudent buyer. Students especially will be interested in this novel rental-purchase plan.

Something of the Choice of New Instruments

You may choose your instrument from a display which numbers over 15 different makes. The pianos are of high character both in construction and in musical quality. They are finished in choice of fine cabinet woods such as mahogany, oak, or walnut. The values shown are unequalled.

Among the grand pianos it will be of interest to know that a most comprehensive display of the world famous Steinway is daily attracting musicians and shoppers. It is priced at $1425 and up. The Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand at $900 is also exhibited in a number of models. Other grands which merit your attention are the Steinert and the Brambach Baby Grand at $635.

In player pianos, such well known makes as the Aeolian and the Lyon & Healy insure a tone and workmanship of a superior kind. Both of these pianos are shown in a variety of models. They contain recent improvements, are easy to pedal, and they play all standard rolls.

The display of upright pianos is a most attractive one. It includes the Steinway, the Lyon & Healy, the Washburn, and many others. This Washburn priced at $350, is a new special value. It is known throughout the world for its durability and beauty of tone. Artists are enthusiastic over it and it is the logical answer for one who is not yet ready to invest a larger sum in a piano.

TERMS: 30 months to pay. With the first payments taken care of by the credit for your old piano, talking machine or other musical instrument, the remainder is easily managed on our 30 monthly payments' plan. WHY DELAY IN YOUR DECISION?

CONGRESS WILL EASE LAW CURB HURTING TRADE

Edge Board to Amend Crippling Statutes.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Are the anti trust laws, as now interpreted, throttling American business?

SENATOR WALTER E. EDGE.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Business men generally answer in the affirmative, and the Harding administration has become so impressed by their assertions that it has indorsed an investigation to determine whether the restrictions on business needs an overhauling.

The Edge resolution, which has been approved by the administration and is scheduled for passage soon by congress, provides for the appointment of a joint committee of three senators and three representatives to conduct the inquiry.

Aims of Committee.

This committee is to "investigate existing conditions of industry and commerce in the United States and the markets of foreign countries, in so far as the same directly affect industry and commerce of the United States, including questions as to production, distribution, labor, and business methods, and to report to congress and to suggest such legislation, if any, as it may deem best upon these subjects, with a special reference to the most effective ways and means to revive industry and to stimulate foreign and domestic trade, to stabilize business conditions as to the future, to minimize the danger and distress of recurring periods of business depression, with their resultant cycles of general unemployment, and to define the rights and limitations of cooperative organizations as distinguished from illicit combinations in restraint of trade."

Hoover's Indorsement.

In indorsing the Edge resolution, Secretary of Commerce Hoover wrote Senator Jones [Wash.], chairman of the senate committee on commerce:

"I have given a great deal of time during the last year to the study of trade associations and conferences with their officials, and I believe that this department is in a position to assist in the consideration and development of legislation that will make for the advancement of public interest through these trade associations and at the same time eliminate from their organization those destructive practices that have crept into a minority of them. If the suggestion of joint inquiry and hearings by committees should be undertaken we would be able to present a great deal of information regarding the situation much more fully than can be done by correspondence."

CHARGES HUSBAND BEAT HER

Mrs. Lillian Oliver, who yesterday brought suit for divorce against Earl Oliver, a construction engineer, charging drunkenness and cruelty.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

CRUELTY, drunkenness and non-support are charged by Mrs. Lillian Oliver in her suit for separate maintenance from Earl Oliver, construction engineer for the Pitt Engineering company, 120 West Kinzie street. According to the bill filed by Attorney John Owens, on August 5, 1920, in a drunken rage, Oliver, after beating his wife into semi-consciousness, dragged her up a flight of stairs by her hair.

Mrs. Oliver asserts she left Oliver after this episode, but returned when he begged forgiveness. In less than two months, his promises forgotten, she claims, while riding in a taxicab, he pummeled her with his fists and threatened her life. Custody of their 4 year old daughter, Vivian, is sought by Mrs. Oliver.

BANDITS CONFESS HOLDUP, SLAYING FOR LOOT OF $2

Confessions were obtained by the police yesterday from Homer Baird and John Johnson, both colored, that they assaulted and robbed H. L. Bauman, 6221 Dorchester avenue, April 8. Bauman died at the county hospital from the injuries inflicted.

The arrest of Baird and Johnson was due to detective work of Patrolmen Johnston, Ewing, and Green, all colored, of the Stanton avenue station. Green is the officer who recently arrested a murderer and also killed a Negro bandit whom he caught in the act of holding up a store.

On the same night that Bauman was assaulted and robbed a colored man also was held up by Baird and Johnson at the same place. The colored victim gave the police a description of his assailants, and Baird and Johnson were arrested. They said they got only $2 from their victim and it "went four ways."

RECOGNITION FOR MEXICO ONLY BY SIGNING TREATY

Propaganda Has Failed to Influence Hughes.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—The United States is not going to extend recognition to Mexico on mere promises of protection to American rights.

This government must have something more than personal assurances of Mexican officials that all will be well with Americans in Mexico in future.

There has been no change in the American policy toward Mexico since Secretary of State Hughes stated the position of the government many months ago.

That position requires that Mexico enter into a treaty with the United States providing for guarantees of protection to American lives and property rights and providing further for adjustment of claims resulting from past outrages.

Mexico: Here Are the Terms.

Today the United States stands just where it stood at the outset of the Harding administration and recognition must come through a treaty. There will be no recognition and then the negotiation of a treaty afterward. The United States says in effect to Mexico:

"Negotiate with us now a treaty of guarantee to protect American lives and property and that treaty automatically will constitute recognition of your government."

The foregoing was disclosed here today in an authoritative quarter. The government's position was reiterated as a result of current reports that recognition of Mexico was believed to be imminent following the dispatch of a note from the state department to the Obregon government.

No "Private" Assurance.

There has been no note sent to the Obregon government, but officials admit that the state department has communicated frequently of late with Mr. Summerlin, American chargé d'affaires at Mexico City, who is in almost constant conference with Mr. Pena, the Mexican foreign minister with regard to reëstablishment of diplomatic relations with the United States.

Officials admit that these negotiations call for comment and instruction from the state department at frequent intervals, but deny that there is anything in correspondence that has been forwarded to Mexico City which has any particular significance at this time.

It was pointed out tonight that the American government is not being swayed by propaganda from many sources favoring recognition.

GUATEMALA IS RECOGNIZED.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Recognition was accorded the new government of Guatemala today by the United States.

Announcement was made in the following statement by the state department:

"The secretary of state announced today that the president had recognized the new government of Guatemala."

Judge W. R. Fetzer yesteday sentenced Mrs. Miller to the Bridewell for ten days and gave her a $29 fine for picking a man's pocket at State and Madison streets. She was arrested by a detective who had been watching her four days.

AERIAL SERVICE TO ST. LOUIS WILL OPEN TOMORROW

Aerial transportation between Chicago and Kansas City will be commenced tomorrow morning, when airplanes hop off from Monmouth, Ill., the division point of the system, and fly in both directions. Mayor Chester Smith of Monmouth will be in the plane that heads for Chicago.

It is planned to have the ships cover the distance between Chicago and Kansas City in one direction daily. The Kansas City ship will leave Chicago every other day, and the Chicago will leave Kansas City every other day. The ship will take off from Checkerboard airdrome at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Eight passenger planes are to be used.

The full schedule will be followed, whether there are "pay passengers" in the cockpits when the ships take off, or whether they be filled with freight.

Several prominent downstate politicians are to be among the passengers on tomorrow's Chicago bound ship.

Manufacturer Found with Grabiner Auto Gives Bond

John Rockelman, 3224 Wilson avenue, president of the American Boiler company, 2729 Hillock street, arrested Friday when an automobile said to have been stolen from Harry Grabiner, secretary of the White Sox baseball club, was found in his possession, was released from custody yesterday by Judge Oscar Hebel on $2,000 bonds. No charge has been placed against Mr. Rockelman. Mr. Rockelman told police he had purchased the car from "James Owens," a stranger to him.

Peddler Is Arrested for Annoying Children

For some time Christ Kocowas, 45 years old, 6614 South State street, a peddler, has been annoying school children in the Englewood district, according to complaints made to the police. He was arrested yesterday on West Normal boulevard by Sergts. William Doyle, William Coffey, and Emil Mertz, after being identified by several girls.

GIRL SIDES WITH STEPMOTHER IN DIVORCE TRIAL

Love for her step-mother led Miss Helen Mesta, 2506 Lake View avenue, to appear yesterday before Judge Soseph Sabath to testify in the hearing of the suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Isabel A. Mesta against Charles A. Mesta, president of the Mesta Machine company, 332 South Michigan avenue.

MISS HELEN MESTA [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Following the testimony of Daniel A. Hanlan of Pittsburgh, a mutual friend, Miss Mesta was called to corroborate her step-mother's charges that the girl's father had been guilty of drunkenness and extreme cruelty.

Girl's Evidence Stricken Out.

"There is enough evidence without the girl's to warrant the granting of this decree," said Judge Sabath. "Strike all her testimony from the record, so that it will not be shown that it was necessary for her to testify against her own father."

Answering questions by her counsel, Attorney Channing L. Sents, Mrs. Mesta, who lives at 4144 Sheridan road, testified she was marrfed on May 1, 1912, and separated from her husband on Oct. 10, 1921.

Tells of Being Beaten.

"In the fall of 1919 I remonstrated with Mr. Mesta about his habitual drinking," said Mrs. Mesta, "and he struck me several times, finally knocking me down. On another occasion I interfered when he chastised his daughter, Helen, and was rewarded with another beating."

Mrs. Mesta was granted $250 monthly alimony.

Charges Against Senator to Be Ignored: Daugherty

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Attorney General Daugherty indicated today that the department of justice would take no action on a complaint filed by Miss Mary C. Kilbreth against Senator Joseph I. France [Md.], charging the senator with alleged violation of the statute prohibiting criminal correspondence with foreign governments. Miss Kilbreth in the complaint as made public by her cited a number of cablegrams sent by the senator to leaders at the Genoa conference.

Frigidaire Is Economical

Frigidaire is the most economical refrigerator you can buy. It consumes less electric current than any other electric refrigerator, and the average cost of operation is less than the cost of ice.

It not only provides a lower temperature than is possible with an ice box, but it also supplies the user with ice cubes for table use and frozen ices, creams, and desserts.

The economy of Frigidaire has been accomplished by designing and building it as a complete unit. The refrigerating mechanism is all contained in a cabinet of special construction—insulated and designed to give ideal temperatures and low cost of operation.

Visit our store and let us demonstrate Frigidaire to you without obligation, or write for our descriptive booklet.

(A Business Editorial)

"AMERICA FIRST"

Today, because of waste, the losses of the world can hardly be computed.

It staggers one who gives this matter consideration.

So far as maximum production is concerned, it is comparatively an idle world.

It is a half efficient world, when genuine activity, progress, should be the order.

Nonemployment and half or two-thirds efficiency means a large percentage of idleness. This cuts off demand and ability to buy.

This is likely to continue as long as there are so many in America who consider that America has no duties, requirements, obligations to perform—who do not realize that she is absolutely necessary in the effort to right the world.

If, indeed, the world is to get to work it must be America that will put her to work. It depends essentially upon the co-operation this country gives to Europe. The man who talks isolation—whose every thought is "America First" in terms of isolation—is a provincial.

WARD F. BRIZZOLARA

WEST AND SOUTH ARE BEGINNING TO SMILE AGAIN

U. S. Official Has Good Report for President.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Optimistic reports of agricultural and financial conditions throughout the west and south are being prepared for President Harding by Eugene Meyer Jr., managing director of the war finance corporation, who returned today from a five weeks' survey of conditions in those sections at the request of the President.

Mr. Meyer declared he found a more hopeful feeling everywhere throughout the west and that the outlook for the future was encouraging. As an evidence of improvement he announced that for the last three weeks the war finance corporation has not had to pay out in loans more than it has received in repayments, the loans and repayments for the period balancing at about $15,000,000.

Money Easier in East.

He reported that easier money in the east is bringing money for land mortgages into the west for the first time in a considerable period, and the larger banks are in good condition, while the smaller institutions are depending on the outcome of this year's crop.

The crop outlook, he found, was the best in years, and, though planting has been somewhat delayed, this was more than compensated for by the moisture, which are encouraging in all sections, especially in some localities where there has been but little rain in the last two years.

The hopeful feeling is growing, he declared. Mines are reopening in Utah, Montana, and Arizona, and some railroad construction has started up in the southwest for the first time in five years.

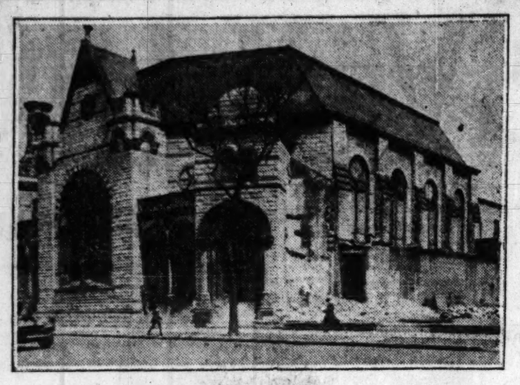
Buying Power Restricted.

The buying power of the farmers, Mr. Meyers declared, will be somewhat restricted, as they are operating as economically as possible this season and buying only necessities before returning to their normal scale of purchases. The indications are, he asserted that this year's crop will be the cheapest in years, while a satisfactory supply of labor, with increased efficiency, was in evidence.

Passenger traffic is light in the west, he continued, and merchandise shipments are slack, reflecting the decreased buying power of the farmers, but in the corn belt, where the farmers are feeding corn to hogs and cattle, he found the best evidence of improved conditions and declared the farmers there were making money.

Mr. Meyer's tour covered the states of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, Wyoming, Arizona, California, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Minnesota.

TOLL OF THE MOTOR



PLYMOUTH CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Motor row's encroachments on Michigan avenue will soon be responsible for the disappearance of another landmark. Plymouth Congregational church, Michigan avenue and 26th street, one of the most venerable edifices in the city, is being razed. The structure was erected in 1873, soon after the consolidation of the South Congregational church and the Plymouth Congregational church. It was built at a cost of $100,000 on a lot which cost $33,000. A large memorial window in the building was the gift of Joseph F. Armour in memory of his wife, Mrs. Amelia G. Armour. The organ, which cost $1,300, was one of the few in the city at the time it was installed. The first service in the church was held on July 4, 1875. The Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus was formerly a pastor of the church.

FEDERAL COURT ORDERS HALT ON STRIKE ACTIVITY

Forbids Union Action in West Virginia.

Charleston, W. Va., April 15.—Federal Judge George W. McClintick today granted an injunction to fifteen coal companies operating in the Kanawha fields, restraining further activities on the part of the United Mine Workers in this district.

The edict contains seven counts, the first two restraining the union officials or agents from interfering with miners employed in the mines of the plaintiff. The third and fourth prohibit unlawful means toward enticing men now employed to leave their work, while the fifth restricts the union men from trespassing on the property of the plaintiffs.

Threats, intimidation, abusive or violent language addressed to the employés or their families is enjoined by provisions of the sixth count, while the last prohibits assembling or meetings of the union in efforts to further their organization.

Officials of the international, district and local unions are made defendants.

Production Cut Deeply.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Complete returns of coal loaded into cars at the mines indicate that production during the first week of the strike consisted of 3,784,000 net tons of bituminous coal, or about one-third normal production, and a few cars of anthracite dredged from the rivers, according to the geological survey. The total production of all coal was 3,793,000 net tons. In the first week of the great strike of 1919 only 3,583,000 tons of bituminous coal were produced, but at that time the anthracite mines were working to capacity and produced 2,008,000 tons. The total production of all coal in the first week of the 1919 strike was 5,590,000 tons.

Soft Coal Output Falls Off.

Preliminary telegraphic returns for the last week indicate no change in anthracite, but a slight decrease in the output of bituminous coal. Reports on cars of soft coal loaded daily show that the output on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday was running consistently below that on the corresponding days of the week before. On Thursday, April 13, however, loadings increased to 1,480 cars, as high a figure as any recorded since the strike began.

Relative to stocks of coal, the geological survey says:

"Evidences multiply that the country was heavily stocked with coal on April 1. In addition to the coal held by consumers, and the coal in the Upper Lake docks and in storage at the mines, there was a heavy tonnage in cars at the mines for which no billing orders had been received by the railroads when April 1 arrived. The total quantity of coal unbilled in cars on that date exceeded 1,400,000 tons of bituminous coal and 115,000 tons of anthracite."

SEES EVERY MINE CLOSED.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 15.—[United Press.]—Every nonunion coal mine feeding eastern markets will be closed in the nation-wide strike before it ends, William E. Green, secretary treasurer of the United Mine Workers, claimed today.

He said reports to headquarters here show that union miners are making heavy inroads into the open shop regions and that even the United States Steel corporation is feeling the pinch of the suspension.

SEEK TO IMPEACH JURIST; EVICTED STRIKING MINERS

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Impeachment proceedings will be sought in congress against Federal Judge George M. McClintick, Charleston, W. Va., and Charles P. Orr, Pittsburgh, if investigation shows them guilty of "partisan and unfair" action against striking coal miners, Chairman Nolan of the house labor committee announced today.

Orr is charged with having denied citizenship papers to a number of Pennsylvania miners because they were on strike, while McClintick is held to have ordered the eviction of striking miners from the tent colonies in Mingo county.

COURT FIGHT TO HALT HONEYMOON OF OPERA SINGER

New York, April 15.—[Special.]—The honeymoon of the former Mrs. Hermann Sielcken in California will be interrupted by litigation over the $7,000,000 estate of which she is residuary legatee, it was announced today. She will return with her third husband, Joseph M. Schwarz, baritone of the Chicago Opera company, whom she married Feb. 10.

Heirs to the Sielcken estate must show cause on May 9 why the second accounting of the estate made by the Columbia Trust company, as executor, should not be judicially settled. More than $4,000,000 will go to the present Mrs. Schwarz if the accounting is accepted by the court.

65 cents
For Either
Fried Chicken (all white meat)
or
Whole Baby Lobster (broiled or boiled)

While other high-class dining places are asking anywhere from 75 cents to $1.50 for Lobster we charge only 65 cents for a whole Baby Lobster, either hot or cold with melted butter or Chili sauce. We buy live lobsters only and more than any two Chicago dining places combined and get the pick from the finest shipments coming into Chicago. So you may be sure that no matter how much more you pay elsewhere you can't get a fresher, sweeter lobster than the one we give you.

For 65 cents you may have Breast of Chicken (all white meat) with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce, or dark meat of chicken for 55 cents. And this is the only Chicago dining place where fried chicken, hot from the pan, is always ready for you—any time—any day.

Frequently we are asked how it is possible for us to cook and sell good food at prices so far below those charged by other high-class dining places. There are several reasons.

Our policy has always been to give you as much as we can instead of charging as much as we could collect. Our prices are all based on actual food costs—never on what we could get by comparison with standard "Bill of Fare" prices. Our big volume (the greatest ever achieved by any Chicago hotel or restaurant) gives us purchasing power—and it cuts our overhead. And we have eliminated all superfluities. You serve yourself and pay only for food.

Free Advice on Budgets and All Phases of Home Economics

Beginning Monday, April 17, Clara Ingram Judson, the widely known expert on budgets and home economics, will be at the offices of the American Bond & Mortgage Company, Inc., 127 North Dearborn Street, from 12 noon until 4:30 p.m., each Monday, to give free advice, not only with reference to budgets but all phases of home economics.

Married couples, young or old, June brides, business girls and all others who are wrestling with problems of home or personal finances are cordially invited to take advantage of this helpful service.

Mrs. Judson has spoken before Women's Clubs in most of the large cities of the state and scores of clubs in Chicago, many Parent-Teachers Associations, and State and County Farmers Institutes, on various phases of home economics. She has also traveled throughout the State for the Home Extension Department of the University of Illinois, speaking on home budgets and kindred topics.

Mrs. Judson's home economic articles have been one of the features of the Fort Dearborn Magazine for three years past, and she will continue these articles in forthcoming issues.

You are invited to talk over your problems of home finance with Mrs. Judson any Monday afternoon at the offices of the American Bond & Mortgage Co., Inc.

The Jewett new type clutch will let you drop into "second" at 35 miles an hour

You don't dare to try that on any car you know. Good-bye, gears, if you do. But the amazing Jewett Six clutch says "Try me"—and lo! it's done. Paige engineers have scored another triumph.

Ability to drop into "second" while traveling fast is more valuable than you think. No car before ever had this ability. So it's a point you never heard brought out before.

Dropping into "second" quickly is the best way in the world to stop a skid. It's the only sure way to brake a car when a down grade begins to get the best of you. If you need it, dropping from "second" to "first" is just as easy on the Jewett.

Going up hill, if things are too slow in "high," you can put the Jewett into "second" without a moment's loss of headway. Likewise into "first." On the level, if you must dash around a slow road hog to pass him, you're in "second" and by before he knows it.

This new Jewett clutch helps you get under way in tough going. You can change from "first" to "second" and from "second" to "high" as fast as you can move your hand. No waiting for the clutch.

10 minutes' driving a Jewett will prove to you that no car is any better than its clutch. Motor flexibility is important, but safe, quick handling depends more on clutch and gears. In 10 minutes with a Jewett you will find yourself in better control of it than any car you have ever driven. See and try the new Jewett at any of our ten salesrooms named below.

After driving 30 days, this 70 point test

Any car is stiff when it is first driven. It requires about 1,000 miles of travel to work itself in. After that the engine runs smoother—the car rides easier. But other developments also take place.

For instance, some parts may work a little too loose—others may tighten up. Factory tests cannot detect these developments in advance. But, if expert attention is given immediately, no harm is done—later repair bills are prevented.

We do not want to take any chances of a Jewett or Paige needing repairs because such symptoms were neglected. Therefore, thirty days after delivery of a new Paige or Jewett, we give it a two-day period of tests and adjustments. This is free, and every Paige and Jewett owner is urged to take advantage of it.

The inspection is thorough—it is made by experts. Over 70 items are checked. Nothing is missed. Everything is put in perfect condition. Twenty to twenty-five hours of labor are required. Our records show that it is worth while. The resulting long mileage without repairs is remarkable.

Our ten Sales and Service Stations in Chicago all offer this super-service. Compare it with your experience elsewhere. Isn't it fine to know that you can buy a car with the certainty of such after-sale care and attention?

IN OAK PARK

In Oak Park, for instance, the Oak Park Auto Sales Company maintains this handsome Sales and Service Station at 600 Madison Street. Competent mechanics—specialists on the Paige and Jewett—are always available for minor adjustments, or difficulties on the roads nearby, or complete overhaul jobs.

But Paige service is extended not only to Oak Park. Note the locations of our associated dealers named below. Wherever you live, there is a Paige and Jewett Service Station near you—a great convenience to women drivers and to their husbands as well, because the women of the family can deal conveniently and confidently with the nearest Paige and Jewett dealer.

BREAK IN RENTS BY JULY SEEN BY TENANTS' LEAGUE

Declares Landlords Are Backing Up Already.

Landlords, confronted by the stand taken by their tenants who refuse to sign leases for May, are gradually receding from their position, according to tenant leaguers, who add that the backbone of the high rent situation will be broken by July.

M. A. Walsh, secretary of the Tenants' League of Chicago, 112 North La Salle street, producing concrete examples of his declaration, placed the era for lower rents four months before that predicted by realtors themselves.

"At 5036 to 5052 Forrestville avenue," he said, "are dozens of tenants who have been threatened by a $10 increase. They have refused to sign leases, even after having been approached by the agents on four different occasions with modifications of the increase. They stood out for a decrease of $5 in rent and thorough cleaning and decorating.

Offers Cut in Rent.

"Finally the owner came in to see the league. He offered to cut his rents $5 a month, but balked at the decorating. But he will come to our terms in a few days, as the tenants will sign no leases."

The Forrestville avenue apartments are but one of many instances, Walsh said. He declared the statement of realty dealers to the effect that rents will be down by fall was merely a camouflage to obscure the springtime situation.

In a letter to former Judge Landis, Walsh, in behalf of the league's board of directors, appealed to him to review his recent wage award, which the citizens' committee is now attempting to enforce, which construes the labor situation in Chicago to be one of "open shop" in cases of unions which have not abided by the decision.

Would Relieve Situation.

"This feature is most objectionable to the unions," the appeal stated, "thereby retarding immediate resumption of building.

"With the elimination of this objectionable clause, the stimulus that would be given to building would operate to relieve the almost intolerable rent conditions now existing in Chicago."

George Williams, a Park Ridge resident, made a tour of the renting agents yesterday in search of an apartment. The result, he declared, was that all the agents advised him to delay his search until next fall, as at that time rents would be considerably lower than they are at present.

DROPS DEAD HANDLING FREIGHT.

Patrick Murphy, 60, 5431 Quincy street, dropped dead yesterday in the Grand Central freight house while lifting heavy freight. Heart disease was given as the cause.

JEWELS HER FATAL WEAKNESS

[Wide World Photo.]

Lacking a Svengali, Trilby, world's largest elephant in captivity, has fallen completely under the spell of a jewel encrusted blanket which she wears every day in the procession of the Sells-Floto circus at the Coliseum. She is never so happy as when the blanket with 6,000 gems is placed on her. She wears the garment like a dolman, for she has been watching Michigan boulevard and knows the latest styles.

SHOW ANIMALS WEAR CLOTHES OF LATEST MODE

Clothes make the animal and the success of a circus hangs on a thread thousands of miles long, according to Mrs. Aggie Egner, wardrobe mistress of the Sells-Floto circus.

This thread, thin silk No. 100, coarse cotton No. 40, black thread, gold thread, and pale blue thread, winds its way in and out over five hundred dresses for the men and women in the performance and for several hundred of the smartest animal costumes in existence.

It is harder to make one dance frock for a trained dog than it is to outfit a debutante with her spring wardrobe, says "Aggie," modiste extraordinaire to the animals.

"There's Billy Sunday, the chief elephant. He must have trappings that suit him and show off his manly vigor. Nothing dainty or jazzy for him. But the flapper ponies, they wear 'em short."

Cleopatra, the vamp, likes black garments. Mary Garden is never satisfied and tries frequently to push the hand that's hemming up her skirt when she comes in with the performing dogs.

Animals, according to the wardrobe mistress, are a bit old fashioned. They like to keep wearing the same old clothes until one of the animals in the next ring gets a new jacket or harness; then they want to show off.

BAR ASSOCIATION WINS BIG PER CENT OF JUDGE CHOICES

That recommendations of the bar and lawyers' associations on judicial candidates is considered seriously by voters was emphasized yesterday at a meeting of the Lawyers' Association of Illinois in the City Hall Square building. Canvass of the result of the recent primary election disclosed that of thirty-eight candidates for Municipal judgeships who were recommended by the lawyers in their primary twenty-six were nominated.

On the Republican ticket seven sitting judges were recommended and nominated and on the Democratic eight candidates who received bar recommendations were nominated.

Following reports that in several wards votes cast for certain judicial candidates were not counted, a "vigilance committee" to sit with the canvassers of the election returns was authorized.

Miners in West Frankfort Get Last Pay During Strike

West Frankfort, Ill., April 15.—[Special.]—The coal strike will take on a more serious aspect after today, when 15,000 miners in this county will draw their last money until the strike is over. Despite the fact that the strike may result in much suffering and personal sacrifice, miners appear to be determined to win at all hazards. Some miners have secured other work, but for the greater part they have no other employment.

TWO REPUBLICAN CONVENTIONS SET FOR TOMORROW

Rival Delegations May Go to State Meeting.

Two Republican county conventions are scheduled for Chicago tomorrow morning. One is that called by the "old" county committee, controlled by Attorney General Brundage, and the other is called by the "new" committee, which was dominated by the Thompson-Lundin machine prior to the break between State's Attorney Crowe and the mayor.

The "new" committee's convention will be held in the Great Northern hotel, beginning at 10 o'clock, and the other will start an hour later, at another hotel. The calls for both conventions state the purpose is to select delegates to the state convention at Springfield on April 21. Indications last night were, party chiefs said, that rival delegations will be sent to Springfield.

Reject City Hall Overtures.

One of the developments of the day was the report that a city hall committee, headed by George F. Harding, had proposed a harmony plan to the Brundage-Crowe leaders. It was to the effect that if both the "old" and the "new" committees would elect Francis P. Brady chairman the Brundage-Crowe group might have the other offices on the committee.

Charles V. Barrett is chairman of the "new" committee and now affiliated with the Brundage-Crowe alliance. He and others of the former Thompson committeemen who left the mayor at the time of the Crowe break are said to have been firm in their refusal to stand for Brady.

Ald. Anton J. Cermak, Democratic nominee for president of the county board, and Daniel Ryan, present president, whom he defeated, vied yesterday in throwing verbal bouquets.

"My dear alderman," read President Ryan's letter to Mr. Cermak, "as the people of the county have declared for you I wish to show that I agree with them and hasten to align myself with the popular decision. Accept my sincere congratulations on your victory, and please receive my assurance that I am whole heartedly for you and the whole ticket."

It was to this that Mr. Cermak replied in kind:

Cermak Right Back at Him.

"My dear Mr. President," his letter read, "your gracious letter of congratulation has given me such extreme pleasure, and awakened such a sense of gratitude . . . that I may be pardoned for entertaining a suspicion that, perhaps, the best man did not win, after all.

"It is always a pleasure to deal with a generous opponent."

Such are the felicitations of the local political giants—most unusual, say those who know politics as it is usually played.

Prince and Prince

PRINCE OF WALES. [Harris & Ewing.]

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, April 15.—The prince of Wales, dressed in the uniform of a Japanese general, which is an honorary rank bestowed on him, with Prince Regent Hirohito, both on horseback, reviewed 14,000 troops of the first division of the Tokio garrison today.

As the princes rode around the reviewing ground, some of the massed bands played the British anthem and the bugle bands played the Japanese anthem simultaneously.

A heavy rain yesterday prevented the princes playing golf.

FARMER DEEMS NEW TARIFF IS A FINE GOLD BRICK

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—"The tariff bill reported by the senate finance committee is the worst of the many gold bricks handed farmers by the present administration," declared Benjamin C. Marsh, managing director of the Farmers' National council, in a statement made public today.

"If the drafters of the tariff bill really wanted to give farmers the same protection they do manufactured products, the duty on wheat would have been placed at $1 a bushel instead of 30 cents; on green hides at least 6 cents a pound instead of 2; on eggs in the shell at least 35 cents a dozen instead of 8, and on wool 45 cents to 50 cents instead of 33 cents. Of course, wool being a staple product in Ohio it fared a little better.

"The whole scheme of the bill as reported in the senate is evidently to permit high priced manufacturers to continue the same profiteering which they carried on during the war."

Gen. Mosely to Command Michigan Training Camp

Brig. Gen. George V. H. Mosely, commanding general at Fort Sheridan, has been designated commandant of the citizens' training camp at Camp Custer, Mich., from Aug. 2 to Sept. 2, it was announced yesterday by Maj. Gen. George Bell J., commanding the 6th army corp area.

FIVE BANDITS INVADE GARAGE, TAKE WATCHMAN

Five bandits kidnaped the watchman at the Continental garage, 3263 West 63d street, yesterday, looted the safe of $27 and escaped in a large automobile stolen from the garage.

The watchman was bound, blindfolded and put into the car, which was driven away. He was thrown out of the car at 63d and Rockwell streets.

Pedestrians at Roosevelt road and Halsted street yesterday saw Mounted Policeman James Murtaugh fire several shots into the air and pursue Frank Gorsky, 24, 706 De Koven street, into a blind alley, where he arrested him. The policeman had seen Gorsky board a truck of Gray, Newhart & Co., from which he took several hundred dollars' worth of silks.

Five bandits robbed a clothing store dealer at 3740 West 26th street and sped away in an automobile. After pursuing a devious route they reached South Central Park avenue at West 30th street, where their automobile crashed into a store window and was abandoned.

The same gang is believed to have stopped A. G. Weinmann, 2503 West Jackson boulevard, and forced him to drive them in his car to 15th street and Kostner avenue, where he was dropped. Later the gang appeared at Kedzie avenue and 16th street, where they compelled A. S. Alexander to drive them to North Sacramento boulevard and Fulton street, where the car collided with another. The bandits fled in the car after making Alexander get out.

FLAPPER'S DAD SOFT PEDALS 'ROYAL ORDER'

Miss Margaret Persell, 17 year old high priestess of the two day old "Royal Order of Flappers," was busy all yesterday at the Birchmont hotel making appointments with prospective novices and arranging for interviews with the press. Her father, R. G. Persell, was just a bit busier, cancelling the appointments and vetoing the interviews.

In spite of a slight difference of opinion among the Persells, father and daughter, as to the dignified and lofty purpose of the new organization, it is planning to hold "business meetings" for the charter members Monday and Tuesday, preliminary to a large open meeting Wednesday. It is expected that the "400" flapperdom will be in attendance at the Wednesday meeting.

There are, however, a few girls of teen age who think they can be quite happy without joining the club. Representative girls at Lake View and Nicholas Senn High schools said they are frightfully busy just now with spring examinations, athletics, and many activities which would rather bore the flapper.

Thorne Quits Farm Bureau to Seek U. S. Senatorship

Clifford Thorne, legal counsel and director of the transportation department of the American Farm Bureau federation, resigned yesterday and announced his intention to enter politics. He will enter the primary race June 5 in Iowa for the nomination for United States senator to succeed Senator Charles A. Rawson.

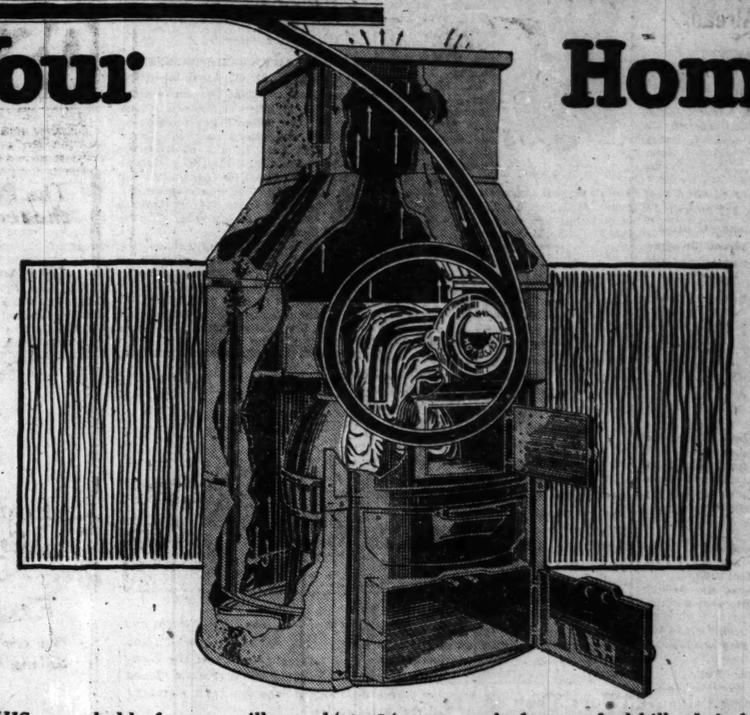
$25.00 Puts a Cole's Hot Blast Furnace in Your Home



THIS remarkable furnace will save ⅓ to ½ your yearly furnace fuel bill. It is founded on thirty years of successful manufacture of The Cole's Original Hot Blast Heaters. It is equipped with the same Cole's Hot Blast Draft and Air-Tight construction that have made Cole's Hot Blast Heaters world famous as fuel savers. It will burn any fuel—hard coal, soft coal, coke, briquettes, lignite, slack, screenings or wood, and make every ton go ⅓ to ½ farther than will any make of "bottom draft furnace."

It gives hard coal results on fuel at half the price. It pays for itself in fuel saved. It gives uniform heat day and night. Always under perfect control. Better and cheaper than hot water or steam to install and to operate. No dirt—no dust. Pure, clean, sterilized, humidified air, and plenty of it. Proper moisture or humidity at all times.

Air Humidifier

Cut to left shows Cole's air humidifier and automatic water level control for attaching to water system.

To grow from the obscure heater business of thirty years ago to the present immense Hot Blast Heater, Range and Furnace business implies an absolute soundness of principle. There is scarcely a person who at some time in his life has not been made the happier and more comfortable because of a Cole's Hot Blast Heater or Furnace. Sixty thousand Cole's Hot Blasts were used overseas.

Cole's ash spray shown in cut to right prevents ash dust from rising when shaking furnace or removing ashes.

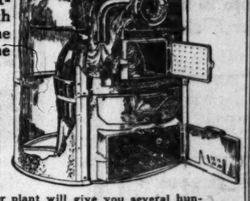
Ash Spray

Cole's Hot Blast Means a Saving of $3.00 to $6.50 a Ton for You

The above statement is based on average prices in and around Chicago of $17.50 a ton for hard coal and $8.00 a ton for soft coal.

We offer you this opportunity of putting a Cole's Hot Blast Fuel Saving System in your home with the low initial payment of $25.00.

You can pay the balance in small monthly payments. Every month this furnace is in use it will pay interest on your investment at the rate of $6.00 to $10.00 a month in fuel saved. By this time next year the furnace will have repaid practically half the original cost.



If you are building or contemplate building a new home, there is no wiser purchase you could make. The difference in cost between this plant and a steam or hot water plant will give you several hundred dollars extra for saving or putting into your home.

If among names listed below you do not find a dealer for your locality, write us for name of nearest dealer.

If your present furnace is a bottom draft furnace, the time to change to a Cole's Hot Blast is NOW. You cannot afford to go on paying out your good money for fuel for a wasteful furnace. We can stop that for you right now. Only $25 down and the balance in easy monthly payments. Get in touch with us today for name of nearest agent. Clip and mail coupon today.

COLE MANUFACTURING CO., Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:

I want to express to you the satisfaction we have experienced in our Cole's Hot Blast Single Register Furnace. We installed it in our new home a year ago last October, and have used it the two winters.

Our house is a large seven room stucco structure with a large hallway.

We have averaged less than seven tons of coal each winter, and have been perfectly comfortable at all times. Our coal bill for the past winter was only $60.00.

A neighbor of ours who has a medium sized house burned between eleven and twelve tons of hard coal which cost him about $200.00.

I consider that our Cole's Hot Blast Furnace has more than paid for itself already in fuel saved. I thought favorably of the Cole's Single Register Furnace in the first place, because of the fact that it could be bought and installed for a fraction of the cost for a steam or hot water plant.

I cannot say enough for this furnace and would be glad to recommend it to any one.

Very truly yours, J. ANDERSON.

EVEN TALK TAXED NOW TO KEEP CITY HALL GANG GOING

Each Phone Subscriber Must Pay $5.68.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Taxes have been run up so high in Chicago that the tax on talk is now more than noticeable. Every telephone talker in the city is asked to contribute $5.68 this year to aid in operating the city, county, sanitary district, parks, state and other governmental agencies. The tax must be paid or one cannot talk in Chicago—over the phone.

The mistaken theory of many that they do not pay taxes because they do not own property is shot to pieces by the tax on wire talk. No one—not even the millionaire—owns his telephone receiver and transmitter. They are leased from the company. The service contract specifically provides that the phone set remains the property of the company.

Subscribers Pay Taxes.

Yet the company's taxes this year are estimated by its experts at $3,353,362.15, and it expects the subscriber to pay them. And there is no question about any of these taxes except the amount for income taxes.

The courts have decreed that taxes are a proper operating charge, and the Illinois commerce commission will give its approval of the taxes to be paid, and the subscriber must pay them—if he desires to retain his telephone service. Yet the subscriber owns no part of the property on which he must pay taxes.

The company's estimate of its taxes means $5.68 per telephone set. Last year the taxes totaled only $4.03.

The local taxes in Chicago average more than $46 for every man, woman, and child. The average tax of $5.68 on each telephone set indicates the method by which part of it is paid into the public treasury.

Car Riders Also Pay.

It has been shown in THE TRIBUNE heretofore that the 1,000,000 daily car riders on the surface lines also pay $2.71 each this year in taxes. This added to the wire talk tax gives $8.39.

When the elevated roads are called upon to show cause why the rate of fare on them should not be reduced this class of car riders will find out how much they pay in taxes. Every one pays. Only the person who eats nothing, wears nothing, uses nothing, and lives nowhere escapes taxes.

MRS. COUNTISS TO TENDER RECEPTION TO DR. W. J. MAYO

DR. W. J. MAYO.

Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., one of the most distinguished surgeons in America, will be tendered a reception tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss at her home, 1524 Lake Shore drive. Dr. Frank Billings will assist the hostess.

Dr. Mayo will arrive tomorrow morning at 10:30 and during his one day stay in the city will be busily engaged in the interests of the American College of Surgeons, an organization of 6,000 surgeons, which is planning to build a memorial to the late Dr. John B. Murphy.

CUSTOMS BUREAU TO BE ABOLISHED, MELLON RULES

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Following a three months' investigation, Secretary Mellon has approved a recommendation to abolish the comparative valuation report bureau of the customs service as at present constituted. In place of this bureau there will be established a new organization, to be known as the customs information exchange.

This action follows charges by the American Protective Tariff league and the general board of appraisers that the bureau exceeded its authority and performed duties properly the function of the appraisers.

The investigation has been part of the general reorganization of the customs service by Elmer Dover, assistant secretary of the treasury.

3 Boys Sleep on Track; 1 Sleeping Nearby Is Alive

Fort Worth, Tex., April 15.—[United Press.]—Carl Vance Riggs, John Shoemaker, and Elmer Thill of Columbus, O., were killed by a Texas and Pacific train today. According to Edward Miner, who accompanied the boys, they lay down on the track and went to sleep while waiting for a train. Miner rested a few feet from the tracks.

ARMY FUND CUT BLOW AT MILITIA, RICKARDS SAYS

Amount Voted by House Called Inadequate.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—Declaring that the house army appropriation bill will make it impossible for the federal government to fulfill its obligations to the national guard and that it will destroy the morale of the guard, Maj. Gen. George C. Rickards, chief of the militia bureau, appealed to the senate appropriations committee today for an increase in the funds to be provided for the coming fiscal year.

The budget committees reduced the original militia bureau estimate of $43,000,000 to $30,000,000 and the house reduced it still further to $23,330,000. Gen. Rickards pointed out in his testimony, and sought to show, that such a sum is absolutely inadequate, completely tying the hands of the war department and making it impossible to train the national guard and develop it as a component part of the national defense as provided in the law.

Asks $5,405,000 more.

Gen. Rickards asks for only $5,405,000 more, this being a minimum request and calculated on the basis merely of retention of the national guard for the year 1923, without any thought of carrying out all provisions of the defense act with respect to this branch of the service.

"The militia bureau will do all in its power," said Gen. Rickards, "with whatever appropriations are made, but desires to point out that the federal duties under the law cannot be fully complied with under the house appropriation bill.

"The growth of the guard can be arrested, if such be the desire of congress, but the result, we believe, will be to destroy its morale. The militia bureau is concerned only in placing before congress the minimum requirements, so far as they can be foreseen, for the retention of the national guard during the fiscal year 1923.

Would Curtail Guard's Growth.

"The appropriation bill which has just passed the house and is now before your honorable body not only restricts and curtails the growth of the national guard, but, in its present form, will necessitate the withdrawal of a number of organizations already accepted and federalized because of insufficient funds with which to carry on the work.

"The militia bureau has endeavored to make it plain that the yearly maintenance of a soldier in the national guard costs the federal government $210, and that thereafter, under the law, he must be paid $56.26 for his annual summer training and $33.29 for armory drill pay. The balance of the $210 is expended in replacing material."

LEGION NOTES

Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, will address the Chicago Medical Post tomorrow at 12:30 in the men's grill, Field's annex.

Square post will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday in the Midway Masonic temple. There will be initiation of members.

Eaton-Priddy auxiliary has entertained the veterans in the Jackson Park hospital every Monday evening for the last four months and will continue to do so every Monday evening for an indefinite period.

The American Legion headquarters, 203 Conway building, is seeking James B. Power, formerly sergeant in Company L, 131st Infantry, 33d Division.

ROBBED HIS EMPLOYER.

Police are seeking Edward Gooding, 24, 3545 Sunnyside avenue, a baker, who yesterday while intoxicated knocked down his employer, Arthur Dickey, in his bakery at 1673 Hollywood avenue, and took $25 from the cash register.

RADIOPHONE TO SEND EDUCATION, OWEN PREDICTS

Says Colleges Will Send Lectures to Homes.

BY CHARLES SLOAN.

Bringing lectures of leading professors of the world's greatest universities to the little red schoolhouse by wireless telephone—this is but one of the developments of the near future prophesied by Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of directors of the Radio Corporation of America.

"Every schoolhouse in the country can become a college," Mr. Young says. "Boys and girls can receive lectures via radio on various subjects, may take examinations and receive diplomas for good work.

Can Study at Home.

"This can be done in the school or it can be done in the home. Mathematics, science, literature, history, art—all can be taught by the authorities on these subjects through the medium of the wireless telephone.

"These possibilities already are foreshadowed in experimental courses given by different radio colleges throughout the country. In fact, most of the colleges already have transmitting stations with which they are now conducting experimental work along these lines.

Taken for Granted.

"And have you noticed how the youngsters are accepting all these radio discoveries with perfect equanimity? It's funny, but nevertheless natural. They take them for granted. It is their day."

Tuesday the Rotary Club of Chicago is to hold a "radio luncheon" at the Hotel Sherman. Morgan L. Eastman, musical director at station KYW, is to speak. A radio program has been arranged through the installation of a receiving set in the luncheon room.

The republic of Poland has sent an expert to America to study radiophone methods here. Development of the industry in Europe is throttled mainly through governmental restrictions.

Temperamental psychology and radio will be the chief items of interest at a meeting of the Chicago Association of Credit Men to be held Tuesday evening in the ballroom of the Hotel La Salle. KYW's evening program will be heard there through a receiving set and loud speaker.

Tufts college has announced that it will soon issue by radiophone a complete course in radio construction. The lectures will be broadcasted from the station of the American Radio and Research corporation at Medford Hillside, Mass.

One of the most notable achievements in amateur wireless in Chicago came last night when station 9CT, located in the Wrigley building and owned jointly by Thorne Donnelley and J. Elliott Jenkins, established communication by radiophone with the University of Texas in Austin, more than 1,400 miles away.

WOMEN VOTERS MEET THIS WEEK IN CONVENTION

Latin America Sends Many Delegates.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—With two of the planks in its last year's platform firmly nailed down as a result of legislation enacted by congress since its second annual convention in Cleveland last spring, the National League of Woman Voters will meet in Baltimore next week to review the progress made, discuss the present situation, and decide on a legislative program for another year.

Preceding the convention proper will be a round table conference, attended by about 2,000 American and between 200 and 300 Latin American delegates, the object of which is to promote international friendliness and to bring the women of the Americas closer in their discussion of international problems affecting especially the interests of women.

Four objectives have been won since the first convention of the league, in 1920. The old National American Woman Suffrage association disbanded in 1919 and reorganized as the League of Woman Voters.

These are the victories to which the league will point with pride: The woman's bureau in the department of labor has been made permanent; an interdepartmental social hygiene board established; and, within the last twelve months, the federal meat packing control bill has been enacted and the maternity bill has been passed by congress and accepted by thirty-nine states.

Search Woods and Lake for Missing Clergyman

110,000 CHINESE REBELS CIRCLE PEKING DEFENSE

Great Battle Expected at Any Moment.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TSINGTAO, April 15.—A prelude to civil war in China is being played with troops swiftly moving into Tsingtao, but when or where the first blow will be struck it is impossible to forecast. While armed forces are gathering in the north, President Sun Yat Sen of the southern government, aided by Anfuite leaders and backed by Gen. Chang Tso-ling's finances, will launch an offensive with 70,000 men against Kiangsi province, compelling Gen. Wu Pei Fu to divert troops to Hupeh province, and at the same time making impossible the sending of forces to counteract a great invasion from Manchuria.

Gen. Chang Tso-ling, the Manchurian war lord, is sending 40,000 troops through the Great Wall and is distributing them at strategic points. He proclaims that these movements are for the protection of the capital. Some of these troops are all ready miles east of Tientsin, while other trainloads are proceeding from the Tientsin-Pukow railway for the purpose of surrounding Gen. Wu Pei Fu's Chihli troops which will be unable to receive reinforcements. A great battle is expected at any moment.

Taso Kun, the military governor of Szechwan province, has decided to support Gen. Wu Pei Fu, refusing Chang Tso-ling's demand for the demotion of Gen. Wu Pei Fu and his return to a minor command. This is tantamount to a declaration of war.

Mobilize Bandit Army.

Here in Tsingtao, under the very eyes of the Japanese, a new act in the drama is being enacted. Chang Tso-ling recently announced that Gen. Wu Pei Fu must be shorn of authority over Shnatung, so this week Gen. Wu Kuang, an Anfuite refugee and long a resident here, returned from Mukden with 150 officers of Chang Tso-ling's army. The customs officials seized the officers' army uniforms and revolvers, and appealed to Gen. Yui, the Japanese commander here, who said since the latter held passports he could not forbid their entry. The arms therefore were returned and the officers later left, ostensibly for Tsinanfu.

The general belief is that they have come to command 2,500 bandits gathered near Kiaochow, who are forming an army to prevent the Shantung governor from sending aid to the northward to Gen. Wu Pei Fu's front at Machang as requested.

Serious Fighting Reported.

Gen. Yui has received word from the commander of the Japanese garrison at Hankow that serious fighting has begun at Kaifeng, Hupeh province, among the troops which heretofore have been loyal to Gen. Wu Pei Fu. Maj. Gen. Suzuki, commanding the Japanese troops at Tientsin, has notified the Chinese troops that they must remain twelve miles from Tientsin in accordance with the Boxer protocol.

In the meantime the Peking government is increasing in impotency. Acting Premier Chow Tsu-chi is merely a dummy, since President Hsu Shih-chang fears either to order Liang Shih-yi to return to duty or to remove him, because if he does either he will find himself involved with Chang Tso-ling or Wu Pei Fu. Therefore no help is possible from Peking to prevent hostilities.

Financially the situation is growing worse hourly, the telegraph administration reporting that $16,000,000 is due it, owing to the provinces withholding the revenues. The other departments are similarly paralyzed. Gen. Wu Pei Fu realizes that he is being pushed between two sides of a vise which will close within a month. While he has the best troops in China he is far outnumbered. Offsetting this he has German experts busy in two arsenals making poison gas for his forces.

EX-AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY WILL SPEAK TONIGHT

Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, will speak this evening at 7 o'clock at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall. He will discuss present conditions in Armenia and Turkey and America's attitude on the proposed mandate of Armenia. He will leave for Constantinople upon his return to New York. The 8 o'clock meeting of the club will be addressed by the Rev. David Hugh Jones, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Evanston.

VETERANS CARRY $3,500,000,000 U. S. INSURANCE

Forbes Reports 600,000 Still Hold Policies.

Veterans of the world war are carrying insurance with the government aggregating approximately $3,500,000,000, according to the annual statement of the conditions of government life insurance made public today by Col. Charles R. Forbes, director of the United States Veterans' bureau.

Former service men and women who have converted their war term insurance into one or more of the six forms of government life insurance will receive dividends apportioned for 1922, amounting to $1,750,000, according to the statement. Without personal solicitation, the report said, approximately 600,000 service men are continuing their insurance either as yearly renewable term or converted insurance.

All Ceases in 1926.

All wartime insurance will cease March 3, 1926, and if protection is desired beyond that time, the term insurance must be converted into one or more of the forms provided, the report stated.

Application for yearly renewable term insurance were submitted by approximately 4,500,000 persons in the service, aggregating a total of about $40,000,000,000 of insurance, approximately $9,000 each. Shortly after the armistice, however, the number of insured decreased rapidly.

Claims Far in Excess of Premiums.

The government's liability under yearly renewable term insurance on account of total permanent disability and death is approximately $1,300,000,000, according to the report, and the total amount of premiums received is approximately $400,000,000, the commuted value of claims exceeding the amount of premiums received by about $900,000,000. The government will ultimately pay in benefits, $1,380 for each $1,000 of term insurance, aggregating more than $1,000,000,000 over the amount received in premiums on account of yearly renewable term insurance.

Death and liability claims in process of settlement amount to $1,822,689.

POLICE INVESTIGATE INJURY.

Patrick Mulcahy, 40, 1521 Warren avenue, found suffering from a fractured skull yesterday in a passageway at 20 South Aberdeen street, refused to tell how he had been injured, and police are investigating.

HE CURED HIS AILING PATIENTS BUT DIDN'T HAVE LICENSE; JAILED

"Doctor" Peter Sophinsky, 1414 South Sangamon street, was arrested yesterday and sentenced to the Bridewell for sixty days and fined $100 by Judge Bugee of the Maxwell street court for practicing medicine without a license.

He was arrested in his office by the Maxwell police as he was about to operate on one of his patients. There were about fifty persons waiting to consult him.

PETER SOPHINSKY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Many valuable medical books, much medicine, and physicians' instruments were seized by the police.

Sophinsky told the police he had been employed in many large hospitals in Europe and has been practicing medicine here for many months, giving satisfaction to his patients.

24 Cases with Same Title Filed in Supreme Court

Washington, D. C., April 15.—All previous Supreme court records for concurrent legal action were broken today when William R. Stansbury, the clerk, placed upon the docket twenty-four cases in each of which the entry read "Curtis, Collins & Holbrook vs. the United States." They all arose out of litigation over public land patented at Susanville, Cal., in 1902.

FORESTERS MEET HERE TO LAUNCH NATIONAL DRIVE

Plan to Plant 90 Million Acres Waste Land.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

The whole nation is becoming alarmed at the rapid disappearance of our forests, and movements are now being launched to conserve the timber that is being destroyed by fires and plant more trees on denuded areas.

In keeping with the plans being fostered by forestry interests in the central states, President Harding has issued a proclamation, which is being circulated all over the country by state and federal foresters, asking that this week, April 16 to 22, be set aside as Forest Protection week, and that April 22 be celebrated as the golden anniversary of Arbor day.

Nebraskan Originator of Day.

J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska is the originator of Arbor day. He introduced the resolution that set April 10, 1872, as Arbor day, but in 1885 this date was changed to April 22 in honor of Mr. Morton's birthday.

Foresters consider it fitting that governors, forsters, agricultural leaders, and delegates representing the various wood using industries from eight middle west states are to hold their forestry conference in Chicago during Forestry Protection week. The conference will be held Tuesday and Wednesday.

Big Task Ahead.

The soldiers' memorial tree planting work, a reforestation scheme, has been centered around Arbor day, and while thousands of memorial trees are being planted through the efforts of clubs, civic and farm organizations, this work is not to be confused with the big task of reforestating timberless areas.

The regrowing of forests on 90,000,000 acres of waste land will take the combined efforts of national, state, and private agencies to put the plan across, foresters say. It is this nation-wide problem that will be looked into by the forestry convention delegates who are being brought together here by the forestry committee of the Union League club.

JACKSON BLVD. BRIDGE TO BE OPEN WEDNESDAY

Four weeks of delays, detours and inconvenience to motorists and pedestrians, caused by the closing of Jackson boulevard to permit repairs to the C., B. & Q. building, damaged in the big west side fire, will end Wednesday, according to Walter T. Krausch, engineer for the railroad and in charge of the repair work.

"The closing of the street and the bridge was necessary to protect the public while the loose pieces of terra cotta were removed," Mr. Krausch explained. "Erection of scaffolds was necessary. The work is being done as rapidly as is commensurate with public safety."

Contrary to the belief of many motorists, the condition of Jackson boulevard bridge was not the cause of the closing order. It is ready for operation on short notice.

IDENTIFIES DEAD COLLEGE GIRL AS BUYER OF POISON

Rockford Druggist Gives Clew to Tragedy.

Rockford, Ill., April 15.—[Special.]—An important development in the inquiry into the death under mysterious circumstances of Grace M. Hoffman, Rockford college freshman, came today when Oscar Rudelius, a druggist, informed Coroner Fred C. Olson that he sold some poison early Wednesday to a girl closely resembling Miss Hoffman.

The college student died in convulsions Wednesday night in her room in Emerson hall. An examination showed she was a victim of poison. It was at first believed she had taken a deadly drug accidentally while seeking aspirin for relief from a headache. Four aspirin tablets were found on a table nearby.

Parents and friends denied she had experienced an unhappy love affair or had been troubled over her studies.

Picture Resembles Girl.

The druggist declared a photograph of Miss Hoffman looked much like the young woman who gave the name of "Marian Ellsworth" of Cherry Valley and purchased fifty-five grains of poison to kill gophers. He was not absolutely positive, however.

The signature of "Marion Ellsworth" on the druggist's register will be compared with Miss Hoffman's handwriting at the inquest on Monday. Inquiry at Cherry Valley, a village near here, has failed to reveal a young woman named Ellsworth.

A small vial, it was said today, similar to those in which poison ordinarily is contained, was found not far from Miss Hoffman's dormitory window. Letters lying in the girl's room, addressed to friends in West Branch, Ia., shed no light on her death, the coroner said.

Deny Tragic Romance.

Students living in Emerson hall at the college, questioned by the authorities, were at a loss to explain any reason why Miss Hoffman should have taken her life. She had not been unhappy, they said, and denied any notion that she had committed suicide because of some tragic romance.

RUSSIAN FAMINE BROKEN; U. S. NOW FEEDS 8,000,000

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, April 15.—"America has broken the back of the biggest famine in the world's history," was the Easter message given to THE TRIBUNE today by Walter Lyman Brown, European director of the American relief administration in Russia. "We are by no means at the end of our troubles, but we have initiated a program calling for the feeding of four times as many people as were in the American army in France at the zenith. America is now feeding 8,000,000 hungry Russians, children and adults." Tchelyabinsk, on the Asiatic border, is now the farthest east outpost on the American relief administration front, which stretches from Petrograd to Odessa, including the whole Volga valley.

OUSTED PASTOR AND SUCCESSOR TO SHARE PULPIT

Brookline, Mass., April 15.—When the congregation of the Brookline Presbyterian church meets for its Easter services tomorrow it will find two pastors prepared to officiate.

One will be the Rev. Edwin Curtis, whom the Boston presbytery refused to install after hearing reports that he had baptized a dog and offered grace by blessing French fried potatoes. The other will be the Rev. Hector Ferguson of the Scotch Presbyterian church, whom the presbytery has appointed for the Easter service.

The Rev. Mr. Curtis, supported by the majority of the congregation, was elected pastor last week. It was said today that the presence of the other pastor probably would prove to be only a formality.

MINNESOTA WILL GIVE BACK FLAGS OF "LOST CAUSE"

Stillwater, Minn., April 15.—[Special.]—"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is authorized to say that all captured confederate battle flags held in Minnesota, either by private parties or by organizations, representing or personally held by any Grand Army post of the state, will be returned to those authorized to receive them throughout the south."

This message of a new birth of love and comradeship came from the lips of S. W. Powell, department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic of Minnesota this afternoon.

Plans to return the captured confederate flags have been discussed at various times, but as these flags are very largely held by individuals definite action has never seemed to materialize.

Renewed interest in the proposition, however, was created soon after the signing of the armistice. A well known officer of the Union army, a resident of Minnesota, had an only son in France. The boy's life was saved in a desperate encounter through the heroic action of a young southern soldier. So grateful was this ex-Union general that he caused to be returned to the south a confederate battle flag that had been captured by his command.

Still added interest to this patriotic idea is the announcement made recently by the commander in chief of the Confederate Sons of the Army of Northern Virginia that this organization would honor Gen. Grant's memory on behalf of the south by attending the memorial to him in Washington on April 27.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK

Study the people you see on the streets every day. One-third of them are under weight and under nourished

Tired, worn out, inefficient: —and still in their youth!

"One hundred million people," says *Herman N. Bundesen, M. D., Health Commissioner of Chicago, "are ready for health truths; ten million of these are sick and paying in many ways for their ignorance of health fundamentals."

Worn out, "all in"—at 3 P. M.! Yeast Foam Tablets are guaranteed to be extremely rich in the energizing element which so many foods lack.

Ten million sick people!

How many other millions there are—people we meet and see everywhere—who are not actually ill but who nevertheless lack vitality and energy; people having little or no endurance.

What is the real cause of failing strength and endurance; premature old age?

Medical scientists proclaim new truths

Leading physicians and physiological experts now know that many of these so-called minor ailments are directly and entirely due to foods deficient in certain vital elements!

Scientific investigation discloses two additional facts of vast importance to thinking men and women everywhere: [1] deficient food is an indirect cause of all disease; [2] food rich in the necessary elements—food, not drugs—is destined to be the greatest medicine of the future.

What makes many foods deficient?

The element in which many foods are deficient is vitamin, the newly recognized factor which is indispensable to health.

Deficiency of vitamin is caused by various food processes such as milling of grain; refining of sugar; heating to high temperatures; discarding of water in which foods are boiled, and many other prevailing methods of food "preparation."

So, no matter what kind of food you eat or how much you eat, without vitamin you cannot be strong and energetic.

Yeast Foam Tablets correct a widespread condition

In Yeast Foam Tablets—a pure food made entirely from whole yeast cells—vitamin B is found in abundance. Add this simple food accessory to your regular diet—note its remarkable corrective and tonic effect.

A remarkable, natural tonic

Yeast Foam Tablets are extremely beneficial in such disorders as loss of appetite; indigestion; lack of physical strength and energy; anaemia; pimples, boils; nervous troubles and forms of ill health known as "run down" conditions.

"You seem so radiant and happy, my dear."
"Oh, that's good health! I feel so wonderfully well since I have been eating Yeast Foam Tablets."

Perhaps you, too, sit down to your meals without any real appetite. One of the first and most marked effects of Yeast Foam Tablets is to increase the appetite.

Be sure to ask for this pure yeast by its full name. It is sold by all druggists.

Why Yeast Foam Tablets are best

The only pure whole yeast in easy-to-take tablet form.

They contain no drugs or other ingredients.

They do not form gas nor cause belching.

They are the only pure whole yeast suitable for children; they do not cause fermentation.

Each lot is tested to insure high and uniform vitamin potency.

Northwestern Yeast Co., Chicago
Makers of the famous baking yeasts, Yeast Foam and Magic Yeast

ST. LOUIS RUNS CRUSHER OVER SOX, 14-0

WILLS-TATE GO WAY FOR TURNUP OF DEMPSEY FOE

Colored Boys Should Fight for Title Chance.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, April 15.—[Special.]—Why not a fight between Harry Wills and Bill Tate? Sounds petty good and there does not appear to be a reason in the world why these big colored scrappers should not go to it and settle their difference which started in Portland several months ago but was never satisfactorily settled.

HARRY WILLS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

For a long time the fans have been urging Harry Wills as the only boy to step in with Champion Jack Dempsey. Then along comes that Tate man with his credentials, and says how Wills ain't got no more right demanding a tilt with Mr. Dempsey than he has. In justice to Bill Tate he seems to be there with some well founded reasons.

Need Foe for Dempsey.

While Dempsey is abroad it is to be hoped that we will get some one ready for him to fight when he returns. The candidate selected to oppose the champ must have a clear title. Offhand we should say that Wills is the bird, yet you've got to take that Tate fellow into consideration.

Tate insists that he is just as good a man as Wills. He cites their last fuss at Portland, Ore. First time they crossed arms it ended in a row and the boxing commission demanded that the two giant colored men should swing into action again and fight it out to determine which was the better man. What happened on the second start? Tate stays in with Harry all the way and gives Paddy Mullins' man as good as he received.

Tate Anxious to Fight.

Tate is a tiny kid standing 6 feet 6 inches in his fighting costume. In addition to that Bill scales 230 pounds. Not so bad for a mere slip of a boy. He says that he is just as anxious to fight Dempsey as Wills is, and judging it from this side of the house it looks as though Harry Wills will have to take on Tate to establish his claim thoroughly for a scrap with Dempsey for the championship.

Lot of folks are bound to step in with that old bromide, "Why Dempsey used to lick that bird Tate every day in the week when he had him for a sparring partner. Where does he get off to think that he would have a chance with Dempsey? Dempsey would kill him."

Might Be Different.

Well, the fact that Dempsey used to cuff Tate around as he pleased when Bill was his sparring partner does not necessarily hold that he could do it in a real contest. Sparring partners as a rule must never get fresh with their bosses. If they do they get the old rollers.

Current day fans surely remember that Jim Jeffries used to do some sparring partner business for Jim Corbett, and they also know that Corbett used to knock Jeffries all around the place during the training stunts. Sure they remember; and they also remember that Jeff stepped out one day and beat the daylights out of the same Mr. Corbett. As a matter of fact Jeff had to take the handsome fellow twice before he was satisfied.

That McCoy K. O. of Ryan.

Kid McCoy did a sparring partner act with Tommy Ryan for a while and then turned around one day and upset Tommy with a couple of smashes on the chin. Willie Jackson served as a punching bag for Johnny Dundee for a spell, but suddenly broke away and returned to give Johnny the only knockout he ever suffered.

Therefore it is easy to see how that kind of an argument will not stand up. Tate might have taken everything that Dempsey had as his sparring partner, but as an opponent it might be different.

In view of that fight in Portland it would seem that Wills and Tate must go in again. Give us a winner the next time and then we will surely have the right man to face Dempsey. Wills and Tate stand out as the best pair to consider right now.

JOHNNY KILBANE IN PARIS; MAY MEET E. CRIQUI

PARIS, April 15.—[United Press.]—Johnny Kilbane, world's featherweight champion, arrived here today. Soon after he had fought his way through a curious crowd and established his party at a hotel he was visited by the manager of Eugene Criqui, French featherweight champion, and the present rage of Paris.

After the conference Kilbane said he had promised to meet Criqui after he had won the championship of Europe. Arthur Wyns, Belgian, now holds the title.

How Have Mighty Fallen! Amateur Beats Fred Welsh

New York, April 15.—Freddy Welsh, former lightweight champion of the world, was defeated tonight in a ten round contest by Archie Walker, former amateur titleholder at 135 pounds. Welsh was slow, and his punches lacked power. Walker received the judges' decision.

The Question.

Should women golfers wear knickers?

Where Asked.

At the Congress hotel.

The Answers.

Mrs. Dorothea E. Kilpatrick, San Francisco—By all means women golfers should wear knickerbockers. It gives them more freedom. And looks—I think they are wonderful; very natty, very smart, and thoroughly sensible. What other costume could be worn on the golf field that would look so smart. I can't think of any.

H. R. Drake, Siwanoy County club, Mount Vernon, N. Y., traveling salesman—A girl who is sensible will wear knickerbockers to play golf. I am out at the club much of the time, and all the girls and women wear them. Skirts bother their putting, but in knickers they have a freer swing at the ball.

Mrs. L. G. Smith, Congress hotel—I think knickerbockers are wonderfully sensible for golf, but not from the standpoint of beauty. Personally I prefer the ordinary skirt, not the pleated kind, but the ordinary, plain skirt. You get a good stance with knickers and all that, and I know that a lot of people want to wear them; but me—no!

Mark G. Harris, president Mark G. Harris & Co., wholesale tailors—I believe that women should wear knickers on the golf course. They are natty and neat and more practical. For example, there's an advantage for a woman wearing knickers and putting on a windy day that the player wearing a skirt doesn't have.

Miss Nellie B. Shaw, 4617 Hazel avenue, stenographer — I don't see any reason why women shouldn't wear knickers for golf, as long as men are allowed on the bathing beaches in the costumes they wear. Men should become accustomed to the styles of dress, both for street and for sport, that are necessary for comfort and freedom of our sex.

ENGLAND'S GLAD HAND WAITING FOR ARRIVAL OF CHAMPION DEMPSEY

LONDON, England, April 15.—[United Press.]—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will be surprised when he arrives here if he is under the impression that the British are going to give him the cold shoulder.

No other person of the political or sport world could arouse the interest over a mere visit that Dempsey has created by his coming. It is not all curiosity at all. Johnny Kilbane, world's featherweight champion, and Ted Lewis, British welterweight and middleweight champion, have been telling about the heavyweight king for some weeks.

Many Offers Await Jack.

Knowing the purses which the champion has been getting, London does not expect to see him in a real fight. The fans are hoping, however, to see him in exhibition bouts. If Dempsey wants to do stage work, he can have a very profitable visit, because he is sure to get a large number of music hall offers if he has not already signed contracts for them.

The idea of another Dempsey-Carpentier fight in London is not taken seriously. The fans feel sure that no British promoter could offer a sum sufficient to entice the two leading heavyweights into the ring and make some money himself.

Ready to Back Dempsey.

These rank and file fight fans of London are ready to accept Dempsey on the theory that he must be a real one to have gotten away so easily from Carpentier, their former idol.

RESTORE MILTON TO ELIGIBILITY; WILL RACE TODAY

San Francisco, Cal., April 15.—Tommy Milton, national automobile speedway champion, who was reported barred from future Pacific coast races, will drive in tomorrow's Golden Gate derby at the San Francisco speedway at San Carlos. Milton made this announcement on his arrival in San Francisco today. He first must obtain a racing car, however.

In support of his declaration, D. V. Nicholson, California representative of the contest board of the American Automobile association, announced he had received a telegram from William Schimpff, chairman of the board, who stated that Milton's Durant car was barred, but that Milton himself was eligible. A telegram from Schimpff last Friday stated Milton had been barred.

BY FRANK SMITH.

Cincinnati, O., April 15.—[Special.]—Eight bases on balls, a hit batsman, and some timely clouting by the Reds spelled disaster for the aspiring Cubs today in their last game of the series here, 8 to 3.

ALEX FREEMAN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Cheeves dished out four of the free tickets to first in the opening inning and was jerked after two runs had scored. Freeman wasn't much better when it came to control, issuing a pass and almost knocking Caveney silly with a wild heave. The local lads annexed three blows with Freeman's generosity and four runs crossed the pan, one of them coming in after Keen had taken up the slab burden.

Another base on balls in the fifth, a bobble by Hollocher, and a two base blow by Ivy Wingo made it tough for Keen. Two more runs were the result.

Along with poor pitching by the Cubs' slabbers, Pete Donohue, the Reds' one best bet on the mound, kept the visitors' hits scattered and never appeared to be in danger. He hurled some real baseball and went along swimmingly throughout the entire conflict.

Cubs Hit, but Scatter 'Em.

The big outstanding feature in our hour of grief was the punch the Cubs put in their hitting. They slammed the pill hard and often, but were unable to get them together for a telling count. Only two Cubs have whiffed during the three games here, indicating they have their eyes on the pill.

The Reds started after the game right from the jump. Burns plastered the first ball pitched to left field for two bases. Neale walked. Duncan clouted a single to center and Burns was out at the plate, Neale taking third. On Bohne's rap to Kelleher Neale died at home. Then Daubert, Caveney, and Pinelli walked, forcing home Duncan and Bohne. Wingo popped out, when Freeman took over Cheeves' burden.

Reds Lucky in Third.

In the third the Reds bottled up three hits with a base on balls and a hit batsman and sent Freeman to the showers. Bohne, first up, drew a pass. Daubert sacrificed him ahead. Then Caveney was hit in the right wrist. Pinelli singled to center and Bohne romped home, Caveney going to third. Wingo followed with a hit and Caveney counted. Donohue fanned, but Burns came to the front with a blow to right, counting Wingo. Burns was caught trying to pilfer second.

Keen relieved Freeman during that round and in the fifth he got himself in a hole with a base on balls, Hollocher's bobble, and a two base smack by Wingo. Daubert, first up, drew four bad balls, but was out at second on Caveney's attempt to sacrifice. Pinelli shot a hot one down to Holly, who fumbled long enough to make Caveney and Pinelli both safe. Then Wingo smacked a two bagger and two runs crossed the rubber.

Freeman Clouts Double.

The Cubs needed two innings to get their three runs. In the third Freeman pasted a two bagger to right center, went to third on Statz's infield hit, and scored when Pinelli threw out Statz on Hollocher's grounder.

In the eighth Weis, who batted for Keen, soaked a single to center, went to third on Statz's clout in the same direction, and scored on Hollocher's blow to Donohue, who didn't seem to know what to do with the pill, Statz going to third during the hubbub. Kelleher drove one to deep short and Holly went out at second, while Statz scampered across the pan.

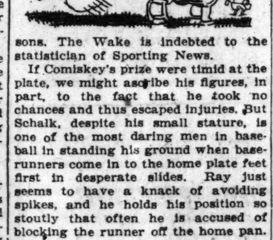
THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

RAY SCHALK, CATCHER.

RAY SCHALK, White Sox catcher, with a record of having caught in more than 100 games for nine consecutive seasons, begins 1922 with the ambition to round out his tenth century and leave a mark which backstop artists of the future will have difficulty in eclipsing.

Schalk's performance is the more remarkable when we consider that none of the great catchers of the past have equaled even his present figures. George Gibson, former Pirate catcher, caught in more than 100 games for seven years, but not consecutively. Johnny Kling, one time Cub catching ace, and Roger Bresnahan, Giants and Cubs, each totaled centuries or better for four seasons. For these comparisons. The Wake is indebted to the statistician of Sporting News.



If Comiskey's prize were timid at the plate, we might ascribe his figures, in part, to the fact that he took no chances and thus escaped injuries. But Schalk, despite his small stature, is one of the most daring men in baseball in standing his ground when baserunners come in to the home plate feet first in desperate slides. Ray just seems to have a knack of avoiding spikes, and he holds his position so stoutly that often he is accused of blocking the runner off the home pan. Here are Schalk's figures:

1913	128	1918	108
1914	124	1919	129
1915	138	1920	151
1916	129	1921	128

Poker Series—Deuces Wild.

When tempted to sit in a game of draw,
Ten chances to one I'll fall,
Exciting for one, which I've made a law
I will not consider, that's all.

I've had some years of experience;
I'd hardly be classed as a child;
But you cannot make use of poker sense
In the farce yclept "Deuces Wild."

With a natural straight, say seven high,
I flatter myself on my luck,
But alas, my brilliant visions die—
I lose to two pair and a cuck.

'Tis aptly named, I'll grant you that;
The players are as wild as the game.
And when it's suggested I hunt my hat
And go where the play is tame.

Hard Luck Bets.

The first and only time a "dream horse" threw me down I characterize as my hardest "hard luck bet." It was at the old Washington Park track. Among my acquaintances was a young lady whose given name was Florence, whom I had called Flo from childhood. My own name was Bob.

The night before the race in question, I dreamed we were at a dance, although it had been years since I had danced. Many couples participated, but left the floor one by one until only Flo and I (Bob) were left, and it developed we had won a prize contest.

I hurriedly scanned the entries the next morning to see if Flo Bob was entered. Yes! I played my dream horse only for place—hook, line, and sinker—getting evens and 4 to 5.

Well into the stretch, Flo Bob and another horse ran neck and neck with daylight between them and the third nag. Flo Bob won. I was standing in line to cash my tickets when a great shout arose. The judges had to disqualify Flo Bob for fouling the other contender to beat my dream horse.

Paging an Old Song.

Dear Wake: Reading recently of the death of a son of the late Maj. Gen. Franz Sigel, a German officer who led Union troops during the civil war, reminded me of a popular song of the time and I wondered whether any of your Helpers could furnish the original version. The lines, as I remember, ran:

He enlisted in the army,
He's a gay cavalier,
And he's gone to fight for Sigel
And his good old lager beer.

CHICAGOS SHOW FORM.

George Carlson's Chicagos won a five inning practice game, 6 to 3, from the home club at Logan square yesterday. The new travelers had pass of their all-star lineup on the field, including Ray Demmitt, former Sox outfielder.

Three Casualties During Yale Nine's Doubleheader

Macon, Ga., April 15.—Yale's nine went down to defeat in two baseball games here today, losing the first, 3 to 2, to Florida, in twelve innings, and the second, 14 to 4, to Alabama. Grant Gilis, shortstop for Alabama, broke his right ankle sliding into second, while Keman, Yale, also was injured. E. D. Blake, Florida shortstop, was spiked in the knee and sent to a hospital.

KERR HERE, BUT ENIGMA TO ALL: SOX OR SEMIPRO?

Dick Kerr, the White Sox holdout pitcher, arrived in Chicago from Paris, Tex., yesterday, and then vanished. Meanwhile rumors of whether the little southpaw had leaped to the semi-pros or back into his old playground flew thick and fast.

From White Sox headquarters came announcement that Kerr had not been seen; not even sought. From the backers of George Carlson's Chicagos, the semi-pro team with which the little lefthander has been flirting for the past months, came a statement that the athlete had been signed to a contract and that he would pitch today against the Firemen at De Paul field.

$7,000 Annually from Semi-Pros.

The announcement of Kerr's signing contained the information that his contract covers a three year period at an annual salary of $7,000. It was reported that he demanded $8,500 from the White Sox.

Although it was stated by Harry Grabiner, secretary of the Sox, that no effort had been made to corral Kerr upon his arrival here, the semi-pro promoters had a different story to tell. One of them insisted that Kid Gleason, pilot of the Sox, met Kerr at the depot and was with him when he talked business with the Carlson agents.

Gleason's trip to the depot may be an exaggeration, but it is known for a fact that Kerr and the Sox manager had a talk before the pitcher decided to take the leap.

Spurns One Year Contract.

It is said that Gleason tendered him a one year contract, naming a suitable figure. Kerr, however, wouldn't consider signing unless the document covered three seasons.

Last night agents of Comiskey were in the loop searching for Kerr. It is possible that the club, after thinking over the pitcher's demands for a long contract, decided to meet them. Kerr, however, was not to be found.

The only thing seen of the hurler after his arrival was when he showed up in the afternoon at Logan Square park. He was introduced to the crowd and announced as a sure starter for the Chicagos in today's game.

Not Yet Ineligible.

Granting that Kerr has signed with the semi-pros it does not follow that he is lost to the White Sox. Should the latter team sign him, the semi-pros would have to turn to the courts for redress, a costly process.

If Kerr pitches for the Chicagos this afternoon he will automatically bar himself from organized ball for three years. At present he is merely on the club's suspended list for failing to report on time.

LANDIS STOPS KENWORTHY IN COAST LEAGUE

San Francisco, Cal., April 15.—A telegraphic order from Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner, to prevent William J. Kenworthy, manager of the Portland team of the Pacific Coast league from playing in any official game, was received today by President William H. McCarthy of the Coast league.

Kenworthy, who was manager of the Seattle club last year, refused to report back to Seattle this year because he wanted to become manager of the Portland team. Landis then suspended him, but on March 1 permitted him to train with Portland while his status was under consideration.

BASEBALL LULL WHILE ANSON SERVICES ARE BEING HELD TODAY

WHILE funeral services are being held over the body of Capt. A. C. Anson at Jordan's chapel, 164 Michigan avenue, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, baseball activities of Chicago will be at a lull. In memory of the veteran idol, flags at all semi-pro parks will be at half mast, and members of the Detroit and White Sox teams will attend the services in a body, deferring the start of the Sox game until 3:30 o'clock today.

Leaders in half a dozen branches of sport, with all of which the big league veteran was closely identified, will pay him last homage at the services. The interment, which will be private, will take place at Oakwoods tomorrow. "Cap" would have celebrated his seventieth birthday tomorrow.

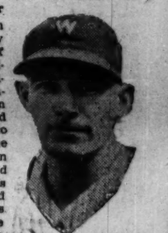
BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

There was no stopping Lee Fohl's Brownies yesterday. A touch of spring weather sent 'em plum loco and they mauled a flock of White Sox hurlers so unmercifully that Manager Kid Gleason probably would have leaped into the river if the river had been handy. The Kid saw four of his choicest mound candidates knocked for the well known "goo," and after a fifth had succeeded in stemming the deluge of clouts, the statistics showed a 14 to 0 landslide for the visitors.



FRANK ELLERBE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

All the Browns collected was a bundle of twenty-one hits. Included in this assortment were fluky hits, clean hits and long hits. Two of the latter breed went over the fence in left field. In the face of all this, Gleason's men were completely stopped and they wound up the afternoon's toil with only three singles to their credit. One Elam Van Gilder was responsible for this.

14,000 Fans See Knockout.

The St. Louis gang started the riot right in the first frame. They scored once then. In the next they did nothing, but the third round was the big one. Six runs went across and the 14,000 attending patrons immediately concluded their favorites would have to wait another day at least before notching the initial win of the season. After that noisy round the affair was just a frolic.

Roy Wilkinson was Gleason's first choice for the heaving end of the matinée. The tall boy lasted until five men in a row had reached base in the third. He was relieved by John Russell.

The next three innings were hurled by Charles Robertson and José Acosta. While they were on the job six more runs scored on ten hits and an error by Hooper. Gleason's last offering was Jaubert Lum Davenport, the Arizona left hander. Only one run was scored on him in three rounds.

Ellerbe Smacks Homer.

After singles by Tobin and Sisler had given the Browns their first inning tally, Ellerbe opened the rumpus in the third with a homer to left. Sisler doubled and so did Williams, the former counting. Jacobson was hit and Severeid singled, driving Williams home. That finished Wilkie. The first thing that happened to Russell was a double by Gerber counting Jacobson, Severid scored on McManus' out and Gerber on a two bagger by Van Gilder. Then the side was retired.

With one down in the fourth, Sisler peeled a single off Robertson's delivery. Williams did the same and Sisler went to third. He scooted home on Jacobson's long fly to Hooper. In the fifth Gerber hit for one base. So did McManus. On the latter blow Hooper's return throw squirted off into left field, permitting Gerber to tally. Van Gilder then sacrificed and Tobin's fly sent McManus home.

Trouble Always Threatening.

Acosta started the sixth and got Williams out of the way before anything popped. Then Jacobson and Severeid singled. Trouble was staved off for a moment by McClellan's stab of Gerber's line drive. Then McManus slammed the pill into the left-field seats. Three runs.

The Sox rooters got a little consolation out of the seventh round. Sisler led off by driving one of Davenport's slants almost into the right field bleachers. Hooper picked the ball off the fence. A moment later the same fielder raced in and made a successful dive for Williams' liner. After this things went along easily, the only outbreak being in the ninth when a double by Van Gilder and single by Sisler notched the fourteenth run of the afternoon.

GIANTS SCORE 11 RUNS IN FIRST; NIP ROBINS, 17-10

New York, April 15.—McGraw's Giants made it three out of four, today, from Uncle Wilburt's Dodgers, getting to the Flatbush boys in the first frame for 11 runs, adding 6 more in the final rounds and ending with 17 tallies to Brooklyn's 10. It was a wild game.

ROSS YOUNG. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Robinson sent five of his best moundsmen to the firing line but the Giants wouldn't be stopped. Fifteen of the world champs went to bat in the first inning, Bancroft, Rawlings and Groh, each tallying two runs. "Pep" Young connected in the first for a triple and single, driving in four tallies. Notes

The Tigers open a four game series at Commy's park today.

Because of the funeral services for "Cap" Anson, this afternoon's game will start at 3:30 o'clock instead of 3.

Gleason sent forth Bubser to bat for Russell in the third. The youngster took three strikes and retired.

A radio outfit has been installed in the Bards' room. It refused to work yesterday afternoon, probably because of the atmospheric disturbance caused by the Browns' bats.

Johnson gathered one of the three hits allowed by Vangilder. It was a single in the first inning. McClellan then sacrificed, but neither Collins nor Hooper could get the ball beyond the infield.

McClellan had a close call in the fourth inning. Vangilder let loose a wild one and Little Mac ducked, but he ball crashed against his right hand. Luckily it was a glancing blow and no damage was done, beyond a bruise.

The Sox had two men on base in the fifth, both as the result of hits. Sheely singled with one gone and Schalk panned. Yaryan batted for Robertson and hit to right. Johnson ended the round with a tap to McManus. Yaryan then took Schalk's place behind the bat.

NOTES OF THE CUBS

Cincinnati, O., April 15.—[Special.]—The Cubs ducked for St. Louis tonight, where they open a three game series tomorrow.

Jones probably will do the slab work for the Bruins in the initial fray, with Alexander slated to go in on Monday.

Weis and Cotter made good as pinch hitters, Weis banging a single and Cotter getting a double.

President Veeck said before his departure for home that he had been unable to place any of his surplus players.

Daubert fouled into the eaves of the grandstand in the fifth and routed out some pigeons that were making love. They circled the field and went right back to their roost.

Lindblom Rallies Early, Beating Concordia, 9-4

Lindblom beat Concordia, 9 to 4, yesterday at Oak Park. Lindblom scored four runs in each of the fourth and sixth innings and one in the eighth. Forest and Sistecky hurled good ball for the winners. Score:

Lindblom	000	404	010—9 11 3
Concordia	020	000	110—4 6 3

Batteries—Forest, Sistecky and Conley; Kemfert and Wittkoskey, Schulz.

FENGER, 18; THORNTON, 2.

Fenger baseball team downed Thornton in a one sided game yesterday at West Pullman, 18 to 2. The suburban leaguers were no match for their opponents. Score:

Fenger	350	101	440—18 17 2
Thornton	200	000	000— 2 5 5

Batteries—Tenato and Heuser; Ashly and Bieuslaus.

MICHIGAN, 8; VANDERBILT, 3.

Nashville, Tenn., April 15.—[Special.]—In a game called by darkness in the eighth Michigan defeated Vanderbilt, 8 to 3, this afternoon. Vanderbilt in the eighth had a total of 7 runs, with one man on base and two down, but despite heated protestations on the part of both sides the game was called. Schultz, who replaced Liverance for Michigan in the fourth, was pounded in the eighth. Score:

Michigan	020	123	0—8 11 1
Vanderbilt	001	000	2—3 8 2

Batteries—Liverance, Schultz, and Vick; Richardson, Withers, and Hightower.

MAAS HURLS LANE TO 3-0 WIN OVER AUSTIN

Lane Tech, champion of the Chicago High School league for the last two years, defeated Austin High's baseball team, 3 to 0, in a well played practice game at Pyott field yesterday. Alexander Black of Austin and Roy Maas engaged in a hurling duel. Two hits, combined with a walk and two errors, gave Lane the winning tallies in the third inning. Black fanned eleven, while Maas turned back ten. Score:

Beloit's 8-3 Win Shows Up Weak Spots of Purple Nine

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

A ninth inning rally, which netted five runs, two of which were scored on the squeeze play, gave Beloit a victory over Northwestern yesterday on the Purple's field, 8 to 3.

CHUCK PALMER.

The team from the Badger college trailed the Purple for five innings, tied the count in the seventh, and won the contest by timely hitting in the last session. Both teams played some bad baseball, with Northwestern the worst offender.

Northwestern got away to a nice start by three runs in the second inning. The bases were loaded when Capt. Palmer came up and cleared the paths with a dandy triple to right center. The Purple leader also pitched good ball until the seventh inning. Previous to this spasm, he gave Beloit two hits and hit a batsman.

Palmer Blows in Seventh.

In the seventh session, Beloit got to Palmer, and after three runs had been scored on four hits he was retired in favor of Ralph Pulley, a twirler with a Carl Mays' delivery. Pulley escaped the eighth inning, but was touched so badly in the ninth that he was replaced by Lefty Nelson. The harm, however, was done before Nelson took over the mound duties.

Northwestern was unable to rally in its half of the ninth, although Capt. Palmer, second man up, delivered a single and went to third when Rossebo muffed R. Nelson's high fly. Kelly and Taber were unable to deliver in the pinch.

Team Needs Experience.

With more experience Northwestern may develop into an aggregation to beat some teams in the conference. There must be more alertness and quick thinking. The outfielders must learn to get the ball back to the infield quicker, while more plays must be made surely. There were also other mistakes made by individuals which should be corrected before Wisconsin is met in the first conference game at Evanston Tuesday.

In the sixth inning Louis Trautman Purple's backstop, was at bat. At the time there were two out and second and third were occupied. Trautman elected to wait out the string instead of taking a swing at the first good ball pitched. Northwestern led by three runs at the time, but Trautman may have been instructed to play the string so that Palmer would be given the chance to clean up.

William Lynch, the right fielder, held a ball while a Beloit runner scampered from second to home with the run which tied the score in the seventh inning. In the eighth inning Johnson led off with a triple, but was sent to sure death when Williams hit sharply to Laffin, the Beloit shortstop throwing Johnson out at the plate.

Purple Infield Asleep.

In the ninth inning, when Fosse pulled a squeeze play, the entire Purple infield was caught sound asleep and before it recovered two runs had scored. It was an opportune time to pull the play, as Lefty Nelson had just taken the mound and the play pulled on the first pitched ball. It was this sort of listless play which enabled Beloit to take advantage of the openings and they were played to the limit.

Northwestern is being coached by Henry Szymanski, who has played the game in the army as well as coaching. He knows how it should be played, but to make his men carry out his ideas is another thing. The Purple mentor, however, is aware of the mistakes made in yesterday's game and hopes to correct them before Tuesday.

Charles "Chuck" Palmer, one of the best all around athletes developed at Northwestern since the days of Paddy Driscoll, is captain of the Purple team. Palmer is a fair college pitcher and a good hitter. He can play the outfield well and if he is not used on the mound will be in the regular lineup.

Trautman Lacks Weight.

Louis Trautman, catcher, is a little light for the backstop job. In yesterday's games he held up his pitchers nicely and was in the game all the time. Forrest Williams at first base has all the earmarks of a ball player, although he got tangled up badly on the squeeze play in the ninth inning. He is of the tall, rangy type needed for the job.

Robert Nelson, at second, fielded his position nicely, but failed to do anything at bat. He covers a lot of ground and appears to know how the position should be played. Albert Taber, who holds down the far corner, should develop into one of the best third sackers in the conference. He has a good arm, fields well, and can hit. The only fault noticed yesterday was his failure to come in a trifle when a left hand hitter was up. Taber took the same position as when a right hand batter was up. Armin Rembe, the shortstop, looked good in the field, but did not show anything at bat.

Right Garden Weak.

Elmer Watts, left fielder, did all that could be expected of him, as did Charles Johnson in center. William Lynch, the right fielder, must learn to get the ball back in the infield when recovering hits in his territory.

The team will be strengthened when Joe Bryant, captain of last year's team, is able to play. Joe broke a small bone in his ankle while sliding indoors, and will be ready to play in two weeks according to the coach.

Warren Furey, catcher; James Trumbo, pitcher, and Charles Kelley and Joe Dempsey, utility players, are other members of the squad.

Boy Scouts

RANGERS TO HEAR FORESTER.

ALMOST interesting as well as a most important meeting of the Scout Rangers will be held at the Union League club next Tuesday evening at 7:30. (Notice the change from Monday to Tuesday evening.) Dr. James W. Pouney, dean of the Forestry school of Yale university, will talk on forestry. Prof. Pouney started the Forestry school at Yale in 1900. Later he became dean of the school. He is considered one of the foremost foresters in America. Make it a point to come yourself and bring at least one first class Scout, 16 years old or over.

Tuesday evening the northwest district council will meet at the Church of Our Saivior, 532 Fullerton avenue, for an election of district officers.

The scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, and commissioners of the southwest district have formed an association, electing F. B. Post president, H. R. Nichols first vice president, and J. A. Black second vice president. It is hoped the benefit of closer fellowship and general helpfulness created by such an association will improve scouting in the district.

West side Scouts can pass swimming tests before J. A. McCormick at the Western Avenue Boys' club, 125 South Western avenue, on Saturday afternoons at 4 o'clock.

The west side district monthly Scout leaders' fellowship supper will be held tomorrow evening at 6:30 o'clock in the parish house of the New First Congregational church at Ashland and Washington boulevards. The commissioned officers of the district will on that occasion entertain the women. Scouting demonstrations will be given.

Southwest district, second class court, Monday, Ogden park field house.

Southwest for troops south of 91st street, first and second class court, at the Bethany Union church Wednesday.

Calumet—Court of honor for Blue Island at the Methodist church, Tuesday, 8 p. m.

Chairman F. F. Bradley of the camping committee, Scout Executive G. B. Stephenson, Capt Herman Mayhew, quartermaster, and W. H. Gunn, field executive, north shore district, are spending this week-end at Camp Owassippe making plans for the coming summer's camp. A number of improvements and new features are being built. The southwest-stockyards camp and the south shore-Calumet camp each get a mess hall and pier this year and the north shore-west side camp gets a number of additions, among them a new swimming pier. The auxiliary camp at Owassippe's grave will be located and staked out. General headquarters will be established in the De Groot house, which old timers will remember as the "haunted house." It should be an interesting summer for the camp directors—"eh, what?"

Armour Tech Ball Team Plays Badgers Tomorrow

Amour Tech will meet the University of Wisconsin nine in baseball at Ogden field tomorrow afternoon. So far the Techs have shown good work. The keystone position has been a weak place, but it is now filled by Rowe, who was shifted from short, and it no longer is weak. Capt. Schumacher, who was hurt, is now back in the game and is going strong.

Gophers Beat St. Olaf College Nine, 11 to 2

Minneapolis, Minn., April 15.—Playing its first baseball game since 1914, the University of Minnesota, this afternoon, defeated St. Olaf college of Northfield, Minn., 11 to 2. Just before the game Harry Brown, catcher, who also is a football player, was elected captain of the Gopher nine.

LAKE FOR., 12; MORGAN PARK, 5.

The Lake Forest academy baseball team defeated Morgan Park High, 12 to 5, at Lake Forest yesterday. Lake Forest started a rally in the last of the seventh inning which netted seven runs.

BUTLER BEATS PURDUE, 4 TO 3

Indianapolis, Ind., April 15.—[Special.]—Butler defeated Purdue university in a well played game here today, score 4 to 3. The Pagemen excell at base running. Pitching honors were divided by Station and Wallace. A triple by Wagner and doubles by Middlesworth and Leslie featured.

"CAP" ANSON'S FIRST PRO BALL CONTRACT PAID $66.66 A MONTH

ROCKFORD, Ill., April 15.—[Special.]—"Cap" Anson's first professional contract, made with the Forest City baseball club of Rockford in 1871, which is in the possession of a Rockford man, calls for a salary of $66.66 a month. It also stipulates that the player shall abstain from "profane language, scuffling, and light conduct, from alcoholic liquors unless medically prescribed, practice two and one-half hours each day, and always bear in mind that the object in view of every game is to win."

The only survivors of the Forest Citys of 1871 are George B. Bird, Rockford; "Gat" Stires of Byron, and "Cherokee" Fisher.

CULVER, 8; LAKEVIEW, 4.

Culver, Ind., April 15.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy won its first ball game of the season from Lake View High school of Chicago, this afternoon, by a score of 8 to 4. The Cadets outbatted the visitors, but the Lake View boys made fewer playing errors.

ADVANCE GUARD OF GOLFERS IN OPENING ATTACK

GOLF WITH HARDING

Washington, D. C., April 15.—[Special.]—President Warren G. Harding and George O'Neil of Chicago teamed in a four ball match against Senators Kellogg and Hale at the Chevy Chase course today and finished all square. They will replay the match on Tuesday.

BY JOE DAVIS.

The wealth of sunshine turned the winter of discontent into smiling summer yesterday for the golfing fans, who do not give two whoops for driving the ball into a net, when it is possible to send it flying through the ambient air.

Calls to a number of the clubs indicated that the advance guard had made their first attacks. Most of the courses were a trifle on the slow side, but conditions today will be better, and increased attendance is looked for.

Westmoreland had sixty-five players out, Glen View thirty, Edgewater forty, and so it ran at the other clubs. One hundred were out at Olympia Fields.

All of which indicates that they're off for a busy season.

Golfing Classics Start Soon.

Thirty days from yesterday the British women's championship will start at Sandwich, and from then on the golfing classics will follow.

The first big event of the Chicago season will be the amateur championship of the Chicago District association at Oak Park Country club, June 15 to 17. This will give the local players a fine workout for the western amateur championship at the Hillcrest club of Kansas City, June 26 to July 1.

Unfortunately Bob Gardner will not be able to play in the Chicago District event, as he will attend a reunion at Yale that week. Bob has taken a great interest in making this event conform to the national amateur championship, and as chairman of the tournament committee will make every effort to get out a representative field.

Indoor Course Dismantled.

In the final of the consolation tournament for the third trophy donated by F. M. Hatch for winter competition at South Shore Country club, E. I. Stephen defeated A. C. Jackson, 3 and 2. The indoor course in the old clubhouse dining room has been dismantled, and all play hereafter will be over the regular links. Several players were out yesterday, but the temporary greens were used.

The Bob o' Link Golf club opened its remodeled clubhouse yesterday and many members inspected the premises, which have been altered somewhat since the club voted to restrict women players. The course has widened well, but play on the regular tees and greens will be deferred until the ground has dried out thoroughly.

Tom Bendelow has just finished laying out the first exclusive Masonic golf course in the west, the Tripoli Country club at Milwaukee. It is located near the north shore of Lake Michigan, measures 6,600 yards in length, and is wonderfully well adapted to the purpose. Mr. Bendelow also has completed plans to remodel the course at Naperville, Ill., which has been lengthened into a full eighteen hole links with a yardage of 6,000. Trap shooting and tennis will be side attractions.

President E. D. Wheeler of the Western Advertising Golfers' association has appointed the following committee chairmen: Prizes—A. J. Irwin. Membership—R. B. Johnston. Tournament—F. F. Soule. Handicap—J. B. Hershey. Publicity—George R. Cohn. Applications from ten new members were accepted at the last meeting and the association will start the season with a record membership. The first tournament will be held May 10 at Skokie.

BRITISH GOLF MEET ENTRIES CLOSE MAY 12

New York, April 15.—Entries for the British amateur and open golf championships, in which several American players are expected to compete, will close on May 12 and June 9, respectively, local golf officials were informed today. The amateur meeting is to be held at Prestwick, beginning May 29, and the open tournament at Sandwich, June 22 and 23.

Non-British competitors must enter through the secretary of the "controlling" association in their countries.

SOUTH SHORE IS HIGH WITH 468 AT CLUB SHOOT

With a score of 468, South Shore Country club yesterday won the semimonthly shoot of the league of country clubs held over the traps of the south side organization. Glen View was second with 462, and Oak Park third with 451. Following are scores of the match, which called for 100 targets, added target handicap, sixteen yards rise:

SOUTH SHORE—T. Ross, 93—1—94; R. H. Morse, 92—2—94; C. F. Wiley, 83—11—94; R. O. Judd, 91—2—93; W. J. Mason, 71—22—93. Total, 468.

GLEN VIEW—George Henneberry, 96—0—96; L. H. Vilas, 91—6—97; A. Verage, 84—8—92; W. J. Whitney, 79—13—92; F. McNally, 70—15—85. Total, 462.

OAK PARK—C. W. Stiger, 70—23—93; G. Wilkinson, 64—37—01; L. E. Bryant, 81—0—99; W. Carr, 70—20—90; F. Adams, 74—13—87. Total—451.

25 TARGETS, 16 YARDS—G. Henneberry, 23; R. O. Judd, 23; L. H. Vilas, 23; T. Ross, 24; R. H. Morse, 23; W. C. Peacock, 22; C. Hardy, 22; C. Whitney, 21; W. Carr, 20; C. Antoine, 20.

LINCOLN PARK TRAPS

J. M. Wilcocksen won first trophy in the shoot at Lincoln park traps yesterday, breaking 98 targets in the 100 bird event from 16 yards. The trophies were awarded under the Lewis class system, second trophy going to H. L. Brubaker, who broke 91, while O. W. Johnson and R. T. Huff tied for third prize with scores of 79.

In the special challenge match, in which the shooters shot at 25 targets from 16 yards, 25 from 18 yards, 25 from 20 yards, 25 from 22 yards and 25 pair, W. G. Warren defeated Challenger E. C. Buchan by two targets. Warren broke 124 of the 150 targets while Buchan cracked 122. Warren also won the regular doubles event, breaking 42 targets of the 25 pair. Scores:

WEISMULLER ADDS 2 MORE TANK RECORDS

Culver, Ind., April 15.—[Special.]—John Weismuller of the Illinois A. C., holder of nineteen world's records in swimming, added two more to his string this afternoon in the forty yard pool of the Culver Military academy. He first did the 200 meter distance in 2:16, thus cutting 2 and a fifth seconds from his own previous record. A pause after passing the rope in the last trip probably cost him a second of time.

An hour later he went the hundred yards for a time of :53 3-5, a record for a pool of forty yards but lacking three-fifths of a second of equaling his record in a seventy-five yard pool. The swim was held under A. A. U. auspices.

NET FAVORITES LOSE IN WOMEN'S FINALS IN SOUTH

Pinehurst, N. C., April 15.—Miss Helen Gilleaudeau of Mamorneck, N. Y., paired with Miss Martha Bayard, Short Hills, N. J., today defeated Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, Wilmington, Del., and Miss Edith Sigourney, Boston, in the final round of the women's doubles of the north and south tennis championships, 6—1, 6—2.

The final in the men's singles, between G. C. Shafer of Philadelphia and Howard Voshell, Brooklyn, was called because of darkness with the set score 2 all and the game score of the fifth set 9 all. Shafer took the first two sets, 6—2 and 8—6, and the third and fourth went to Voshell, 6—4, 6—3.

Voshell and Shafer left tonight for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where they will complete their match on a day not yet determined.

PURPLE TENNIS STARS READY FOR INDOOR MEETS

Northwestern university tennis stars are training for conference meets on an indoor court at Patten gym. Paul Newey, Chicago; Harold Brown, Wilmette, and Vincent Thompson, Evanston, are leading candidates. The first match, against Chicago at the Midway courts, is billed for April 25. The rest of the schedule:

April 29—Wisconsin at Madison.
May 1—Southern California at Evanston.
May 6—Illinois at Evanston.
May 8—Chicago at Evanston.
May 13—Ohio State at Columbus.
May 20—Purdue at Evanston.
May 22—Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Spain Selects Team for Davis Cup Competition

New York, April 15.—The Lawn Tennis Federation of Spain, according to word received here, has selected Manuel Alonso, Count de Gomar, J. M. Alonso, and Edouardo Flaquer as its representatives in this year's Davis cup competition.

Alonso and Count de Gomar, it is indicated, will shoulder the burden of both singles and doubles and the others will be held in reserve.

Gould and Ear Retain Amateur Court Net Title

Boston, Mass., April 15.—Jay Gould and J. W. Ear of Philadelphia, playing through champions, won the national amateur court tennis doubles championship again today. They defeated G. R. Fearing and D. P. Rhodes of Boston in the final round, 7—5, 6—0, 6—1.

Frenchman Gobert Keeps British Tennis Laurels

LONDON, April 15.—A. H. Gobert of France, the titleholder, defeated the South African tennis crack, B. I. C. Norton, in the challege round today of the Amateur lawn tennis championship at the Queen's club covered courts, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2.

Toledo Man Wins Golf Trophy at Pinehurst

Pinehurst, N. C., April 15.—Harold Weber of the Inverness club, Toledo, O., won the president's trophy at the end of the final contest in the annual mid-April golf tournament at Pinehurst today, defeating Frank T. Keating of New York, 4 and 3.

GLENN HARTRANFT, WORLD'S GREATEST ATHLETE

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

I HAVE just seen a youngster who looks to me like the greatest athlete since Jim Thorpe's best days. Some of his performances far surpass the best work of the great Indian, of Martin Sheridan, and of former all around champion and record holder S. H. Thompson. Moreover, as he is a college boy, only 19 years of age, and in his first successful year in athletics under good college coaching, unless some accident prevents, within another year or two he will far outclass any all around athlete ever known and will have broken at least half a dozen of our present world records.

Even now he is a better shotputter than Ralph Rose in his day, better than Sheridan and Duncan with the discus.

His name is Glenn Hartranft. He is a sophomore at Stanford university. He was born and brought up at Fullerton, south California, and had his first athletic experience at the Fullerton High school, where he ran hurdle races, threw the discus, and put the shot with fair success. Later he wore the colors of the L. A. A. C.

Coach Predicts Records.

Last year Hartranft won places in the junior and national championships, with performances that were good, but in no way sensational. Bob Weaver, A. A. U. president, looked him over then and predicted that under Coach Templeton of Stanford he would become a champion and a record breaker.

Hartranft was rather diffident about giving out details of his athletic performances for this story. He is modest and unspoiled. Fame seems to embarrass him. But he can't escape fame. The Pacific coast is going to send him with Bud Houser as a teammate, to the national championships that will be held in the great new stadium at Van Cortlandt park, New York City, this summer.

Hartranft and Houser are both likely to break world's records with the shot and discus. Houser, a high school boy, won the National shot putting championship last year with 48 feet, beating the once invincible Pat McDonald. And Hartranft has run ahead of Houser's records.

Looks Like Statue of Phidias.

Glenn Hartranft is a tall lad, 6 feet 3 in his stockings. He weighs 210 pounds stripped. He has light blond hair that flops around the top of his head in bunches and is close clipped over the ears. His neck is strong, his shoulders of unusual width, his arms long and muscular, chest both broad and deep far beyond the average, waist small, thighs equipped with round, bounding muscles, calves rather light in proportion, and insteps high like thoose of a sprinter and jumper.

In physique Hartranft is a perfect reproduction of the great athletes of ancient Greece, as they were perpetuated in the marble statues of Phidias and Myron. He is the best built athlete I have ever seen in action.

Rose was 6 feet 6, heavy, thick waisted. Arlie Mucks, another giants of nearly equal height, broad, ponderous, built only for weight throwing. McGrath, Pat Ryan and McDonald are thick men. Martin Sheridan was better proportioned than any of the other weight throwers, and he could run, jump, or do anything, like Hartranft.

Resembles Sheridan.

The Stanford boy is another Sheridan, but three inches taller, thirty pounds heavier, every bit as supple, and in proportions nearer to the athletic ideal of the Greeks, who held their Olympiads for over 1,200 years without a break and ought to have known what an athlete was.

Last year he was good for about 42 feet with the shot, 135 with the discus and fair time in sprints and hurdles. This year, with college coaching, he has come forward with an amazing leap.

In the spring interclass meet at Stanford a few weeks ago Hartranft put the 16 pound shot from a seven foot circle 49 feet, 6 inches. He threw the discus 144 feet, too, winning both events. In between he ran in the 100 yard dash in 10 seconds flat. A week later in the meet with the Olympic A. C. of San Francisco he put the 16 pound shot 50 feet ⅜ inch.

Astonishing Performances.

For a 19 year old boy this was an astonishing performance. Only Ralph Rose, holder of the world's record of 51 feet, ever bettered it. In his first year of competition on his college team, with two more well coached years ahead, Hartranft is within a foot of a world's record that athletic prophets have considered unbreakable except by some other giant like Rose. And Hartranft is not a giant. He is no larger than three or four of his teammates. When Rose made the world's record of 51 feet he weighed 315 pounds, just 105 pounds more than Hartranft's weight today.

I watched Hartranft in the meet between Stanford and the University of Southern California. He won three events and finished third in the fourth—a race he had never tried before. First he won the 16 pound shot put with 49 feet 7½ inches. The ground in the ring was soft and dusty. With a hard clay footing he would certainly have gone well over 50 feet. With the shot he has perfect form. He crouches low for the leap, drags his right toe along the ground as he makes it, shifts feet and drives the shot with a full round swing of body and shoulder behind it and a final flip of the fingers. He uses the full circle every time, stepping within an inch of the front board, and has no inclination to foul.

Ready to Break Record.

I think, from his action and the tremendous bound he holds in leash, his cool deliberation and perfect timing, that he could easily break the 12 pound shot record any day, and will put over 51 feet in the Nationals, if not before.

While the shot put was going on Hartranft answered the call for the 100 yard dash. And here was the most amazing performance of the day. The track was a dusty dirt track, not wetted down and rolled like eastern tracks, too soft, and decidedly slow. This was the track on which the great Paddock trained, but not where he made his records.

At the pistol fired by Starter Bob Weaver, Hartranft left the mark "like a bullet," as Weaver describes it, and at twenty-five yards had a clear two yard lead over his rivals. He was running with such a stride as I never saw any other sprinter take, a series of tremendous bounds, a long, lunging stride that showed unlimited power. It looked like a slow stride, but every step was two feet longer than the stride of the average sprinter.

Another Tommy Burke.

I'll tell the old timers what he reminded me of—a Tommy Burke (unbeaten quarter miler of a quarter century ago), but a Tommy Burke speeded up to the limit.

At eighty yards Hartranft glanced over his shoulder and saw his rivals well behind. From there he ran to the tape half turned around at the waist and looking back. Even at that, winning easily, he covered the 100 in 10 seconds flat. It might have been :09 4-5 if he had been pressed at all—and on a slow track. No 210 pound man ever showed such speed before.

After the hundred the Stanford boy went at the discus, winning with 147 feet 2¾ inches, a new coast record. This was from a soft, dusty ring, too, a seven foot ring. Hartranft's disappointment after both shot and discus events was so evident that I asked him what he had been doing in practice.

Not Satisfied.

"I expected to do much better," he said. "In the last few days of training I have been throwing 155 feet up against a bank. I should have done better with the shot, too—much better. I don't know what's the matter, but I'm not getting it right today."

When I was throwing the discus from scratch with Martin Sheridan in 1910, I never thought to see another Sheridan in action. Martin was so supple that he stood facing the direction of the throw, and in swinging the missile twisted at waist and hips until his shoulders were turned in the opposite direction.

Hartranft is the only other athlete I ever saw throw the discus in Sheridan's style. He faces his throw, and with slow deliberation twists as far as Sheridan ever did, comes around with an easy turn and shift of the feet, and heaves the weight with the full drive of his legs, and body behind it.

HARTRANFT FLU VICTIM

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., April 15.—Glenn (Tyne) Hartranft, star Stanford university athlete, who has been putting the shot within less than a foot of the world's record, is in the hospital today, and may not be able to compete in the big meet against California next Saturday. Doctors think he has influenza. Stanford had been counting on Hantranft for points in the shots, discus and the sprints.

The pins were almost evenly divided between them, Anderson having only a one pin margin over his partner. F. Atwood and W. Bossman on the same squad went into a tie for third place with 1,214.

They were the only new leaders to show last night. The Western Electric No. 17 continue to top the main event with 2,953, made the opening night, and E. Bates is the high man in the singles with 662, made during the second night of play.

Seals Team Second.

The Seals from the Cousumers company grabbed off second place in the main event last night with 2,816. H. Berger did the heavy work for the team with 640. The Illinois Bell No. 13, on the same squad, landed fourth position with 2,803.

Some good pin getting showed in the individual event, with W. Ollerman as the top man with 633, which is fifth high to date. Nine scores passed the 600 line, B. Crow running second to Ollerman with 628, followed by L. Bein with 623. Leading scores:

PESEK TO MEET PETERS ON MAT TOMORROW NIGHT

John Pesek, contender for the heavyweight crown held by Ed ("Strangler") Lewis, and Charles Peters, Omaha sheriff, will meet in the main bout of the wrestling show to be staged by John ("Doc") Krone at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium tomorrow night. It will be a best two in three falls match.

Although the Pesek-Peters match is billed as the feature, the four round bout between Lou Talaber and Bennie Reuben, both of the west side, should be the best of the card. Both are contenders for the middleweight title held by Johnny Meyers. The men will wrestle four rounds or forty minutes to a fall or decision.

Talaber has done all his training at the Arcade, while Reuben has worked at the Chicago Hebrew institute, where he learned the game and developed into one of the best amateur wrestlers of Chicago.

The program will open with a six round bout between Stanley Pinta and Young Zbyszko, local heavyweights. John Freberg and Steven Savage will take holds in the six round semi-windup to a fall or decision.

The first bout will start at 8:15 o'clock and tickets can be secured at 129 North Dearborn street.

GREAT LAKES ARENA AT WAUKEGAN TO BID FOR PATRONS OF BOXING

WAUKEGAN, Ill., April 15.—Waukegan soon will again hold boxing contests, after an enforced absence due to the state anti-boxing law.

Plans have been completed at Great Lakes Naval Training station for a naval reserve armory to be erected on the naval reservation at the harbor mouth here, and the reservists are planning to help finance their activities by staging matches in the new drill hall.

They hope to equal the success of the naval post of the American Legion at Chicago, which cleared $27,000 for the relief of wounded soldiers and sailors last year by staging bouts on the U. S. S. Commodore, safe from state interference.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS

THE card to support the ten round battle between Bud Taylor and Stanley Everett aboard the U. S. S. Commodore Friday night, has been announced. There will be three six rounders bringing together Eddie Taltine and Sammy Frager at 124 pounds, Patsy Rocco and Jimmy Flynn at 145 pounds, and Joe Ketchell and King Rollo at 118 pounds. Taylor is doing his training at the Arcade gymnasium, while Everett is getting into condition at Peoria where he meets Herbie Schaeffer in a ten rounder Wednesday night.

George K. O. Sweeney, local middleweight, returned yesterday from Lawrenceville, Ill., where he knocked out Willie Topper in one round Friday night.

Joe Burman, the west side bantamweight, started training yesterday for several pending matches. Joe's first bout may be with Stewart McLean at Minneapolis April 25 or 27. Jim Mullen is trying to sign Burman and Carl Tremaine to box the ten round semi-final to Malone and Downey at Fort Sheridan May 5.

Frankie Whitney, the "Fighting Carpenter," who was the only boxer to stop Ad Wolgast, was a visitor in town yesterday. Whitney lives in Cedar Rapids, Ia., and is in business.

Jack Blackburn, the veteran welterweight, will tackle a colored giant, named Bonecrusher McNally, of Texas, in a ten round tussle at Clinton, Ia., April 25. On the same card Jabber Young, the local welter, takes on Archie Ammons for ten rounds.

Boxing Promoter Asks Guardian for Wolgast

Los Angeles, Cal., April 15.—J. J. Doyle, boxing promoter, today filed a petition in the Los Angeles Superior court asking that he be appointed guardian of the person and estate of Ad Wolgast, former world's lightweight champion. The petition asserted that Wolgast is incompetent to transact business affairs and has been spending money recklessly.

PRIZE ROLLER MEET PLANNED BY SPORTSMEN

A six day roller skating meet, sponsored by Samuel Green Sr., local sportsmen, will be held at Broadway armory April 25 to 30. Unlike other ventures of this nature, the meet will not be held for profit.

Money derived will go into a fund to purchase prizes for the amateurs and make the purses worth while for professionals. The sponsors, who are known as roller skating "bugs," have agreed to donate $5,000 in prizes and prize money.

Sam Mincer is a Board of Trade man who has made this sport his hobby. After seeing boys and girls race on north side streets he conceived the idea of putting on a meet which will bring the best amateurs and professionals together.

Mincer Suggests Idea.

Mincer suggested his idea to Green, who is well known in local tennis circles. The latter immediately agreed, with the result one of the best roller skating meets ever held in the city should result.

"The amateur should be encouraged," Mr. Mincer said. "Everything is done for the professional and little for the skater who is unable to compete for money prizes. Something must be done to encourage the latter to train, and in the end attain the efficiency of our best professionals."

To Encourage Youngsters.

Green, besides being an ardent tennis fan and player, is a follower of amateur sports, anxious to take a personal part in encouraging the younger generation to take part in some wholesome exercise.

A goodly list of professional and amateur skaters is practically assured. Fliers who took part in the recent events at Riverview will be seen in action, including Roland Ciont of Akron, world's pro champion. Prominent men in local athletic circles, such as Julian T. Fitzgerald, Eddie Mahlke, Frank Kalteaux, Otis Taylor and George Smith will be asked to help handle the races.

Include Team Contests.

The opening night will be Board of Trade night. During each night races will be held over various distances, including team contests.

The meet will close on April 30 with a grand American marathon team race, the winners to receive $500. On each night there will be exhibitions of fancy skating, and the rink will be open from 2 to 5 in the afternoons and 7 to 10 in the evening for public skating.

Skaters wishing to enter should send applications to Elmer Eckman, Broadway armory, Broadway and Thorndale.

BIG ENTRY IN WOMEN'S MEET

Toledo, O., April 15.—Indications that more than 100 teams have been entered in the women's national bowling tournament, to be held here ten days, beginning April 29, were announced today by local officials. The Toledo entry consists of thirty-five, and Cleveland will enter twelve teams. Chicago, Buffalo, St. Louis, Dayton, Indianapolis, and Kansas City are among the other cities named.

Georgetown Wins 9 to 6 Victory Over Princeton

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Erratic work by the Tigers' infield largely was responsible for the 9 to 6 victory Georgetown U. registered over Princeton here today. In the second and third innings the local collegians made seven runs with the aid of only three infield hits. Score:

BOB BECKER

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH THE ESOX TRIBE.

THE Esox tribe, which boasts of such distinguished members as the big pickerel (great northern pike) and the muskellunge, is one that nearly every angler has had something to do with at one time or another. You can browse around in many places from Alaska, the upper Mississippi valley, and through the east and be pretty sure to run into some member of this family. In fact, the big pick is one of the most widely distributed fishes in the catalogue. He's a cosmopolitan sort of a cuss and can be encountered in the fresh waters of northern Europe, down through Greece and Italy, as well as in this hemisphere. They grow 'em big over there, too. According to reports, the record weight of a pickerel taken in European waters is 145 pounds—a lot bigger fish than most of us would care to tackle with the usual pickerel fishing outfit.

In Europe the pickerel is more highly esteemed than in this country. Izaak Walton devotes an entire chapter to it, declaring that when "roasted he is too good for any but anglers and honest men." But it is a different story in this country, where all kinds of harsh names are given this long fish, the commonest one being, perhaps, snake. In Canada the Cree Indians have a very delightful name for the pick, as they call it "eithinyoo-cannoosheeoo." A trifle long, but not bad at that, and the next time a big pike grabs your lure and proceeds to play ring around the rosy with you, finally winding up by snagging your line and getting away it might be a good plan to call him, among other things, this Cree name. It may do some good.

But in spite of all the harsh names given the big northern pike, it has some good qualities—we have to admit that. In the first place this fish is so common and widely distributed that it furnishes sport for a lot of fellows who cannot travel hundreds of miles for a session with the finny tribes. Then, too, some of the big fellows put up pretty good scraps. This point, along with its size, makes it a fish which is much prized by many fishermen.

"Mere machine for the assimilation of other organisms" is the way one fellow has described the members of the Esox tribe, and that description just about fits the greedy, voracious pike and muskellunge. In fact, the pickerel is such a greedy cuss and consumes so many small fishes, including highly prized game fish like the bass, that in some parts of Canada attempts were made to destroy it. Not much chance for a small fish to escape a big pick if once this speedy hunter launches after it, as the pike is a strong, active swimmer, and when its prey is spotted it shoots out like an arrow and then good-by bass or sunfish.

As for the food of the big pickerel, there isn't much that the old boy won't take and relish. Bass and sunfish are found quite frequently in the stomachs of them. Frogs, crawfishes, and large insects are also on his menu and his fondness for insects makes it possible to take some of the big fellows on the fly. Fish experts have also reported finding mice, reptiles, and even young ducks in adult pikes, which would show that the big pick likes occasionally to mix 'em up in the feed bag.

Spawning time comes early for the pickerel in the middle west and in it has been known to spawn as early as March. Shore water about a foot and a half deep is selected and a single female may deposit as many as a hundred thousand eggs. The young hatch in about fourteen days.

BOY SCOUTS GET REAL COACHING IN WATER SPORT

Under the direction of Tom Robinson, swimming coach at Northwestern university, Evanston Boy Scouts now are taking a course in life saving preparatory to the opening of their summer camp at Duck Lake, Mich., July 10.

"Any boy who cannot swim must wear a huge fish line sinker around his neck until he learns," Dr. E. D. Kelly, scout executive, said yesterday. "With numerous life guards and boatmen on duty during swimming periods the boys will be safer than if they were swimming at home."

FLEET RAYS RACE AS BIG FEATURE OF DRAKE'S MEET

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Matching of Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C., greatest middle distance runner of modern times, and Ray Watson, formerly of the Kansas Agricultural college, for a one mile race to be decided in connection with the Drake university relay games in Des Moines, Ia., on April 29, practically assures success of this established event.

"TUG" WILSON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The race should be the most interesting ever held between these two distance runners. In former years Watson has come east to race Ray and has always been defeated. Friends of the Kansas runner have frequently asserted Watson has been at a disadvantage because he had to travel and run over strange courses.

The situation will be just the reverse on April 29. Ray has not run on the Drake track, while Watson has run some of his best races over the course, which is among the fastest in the Missouri Valley conference. Climatic or track conditions are of little or no concern to Ray. He is a foot racer and a natural competitor.

Race Attracts Attention.

Matching this pair as an added attraction to the games is a move in the right direction to insure success in the games which are being promoted by Kenneth "Tug" Wilson, a former University of Illinois Athlete, who is athletic director at Drake university.

Track and field athletics are promoted successfully in the east because athletes are imported from other sections to meet the best in the district in which the events are held. The intersectional rivalry attracts attention of the athletically inclined public, who are always attracted by an event in which intersectional supremacy is at stake.

For years Ray has been going east. He runs as many as four or five races each year in New York City and seldom fails to put in an appearance in the big meets in Boston and Philadelphia. Every time he steps on the track he is greeted with tremendous applause. Those who promote these meets know Joie's drawing powers and they always match him with the best the east can produce.

Ray a Magnet to Fans.

Ray's appearance in the Drake stadium will be the magnet for fans who would not attend the games otherwise and Director Wilson and Drake university are to be congratulated on making this move. Ray will bring more than enough in at the gate to defray his expenses besides making the games more popular.

Watson has a great opportunity, although he hardly can be expected to beat the fleet tricolor club star. Many an athlete has been made over night and Watson will be the most talked of amateur athlete in the country if he is successful in breasting the tape ahead of one of the greatest runners this country has ever seen.

The former Kansas Aggie runner had better make up his mind to get in shape to run the mile in 4:20 or better. If he cannot cover the distance in this time he will not have a chance. Practically every time Joie runs a mile race, it is a safe bet he will do a 4:20 pace or better. If he does not have to run another race on the same day and if conditions are favorable, 4:16 or better is not hard for him.

Watson a Good Runner.

Ray holds the world's indoor one mile record at 4:14 3-5. He made this mark in Chicago in 1919. The outdoor record is 4:12 3-5 and was made by Norman Taber at Cambridge in 1915. Joie has come within fractions of a second of Tabor's mark, but he has never cracked the record, which is the goal of his ambitions.

Watson is a good mile runner. He was a consistent point winner for his college and considered one of the best intercollegiate performers in the country during his college career. He may give Ray a great race for part of the distance, but he will be compelled to show more speed and endurance than he ever did before to beat the Chicagoan.

Aside from the match race between Ray and Watson, other events scheduled for the universities, colleges, and high schools should make this year's Drake games the most successful ever held. In fact, so many nominations have been received for the prep school events that Drector Wilson has decided to run two events for the high schools.

Big Ten Teams in Meet.

The majority of Big Ten universities will send teams or representatives to the games, while the Missouri Valley will support the event almost to a college. The Penn relays will be held on the same day.

WILL MEET IN SPECIAL RACE

JOIE RAY. RAY WATSON.

12 TILTS CARDED FOR SOCCER TEAMS TODAY

With the races in all three of the leagues narrowing down, interest in the play of the contending soccer teams is increasing. Twelve games are carded today, four in the Chicago league, three in the Chicago District league, and five in the International league.

The Olympia team, Chicago league leader, will tackle the Thistles at 47th avenue and 19th street, and as these teams will meet in the semi-finals for the Peel cup, today's match will afford a line on the future meeting. Manager Hepburn will take the Bricklayers to Riverview park to tackle the speedy Swedish-Americans. The schedule is as follows:

CHICAGO LEAGUE.

Olympia and Thistles at 47th and 19th; Bricklayers and Swedish-Americans at Riverview park; Canadian club and Pullman at Pullman; Rangers and Harvey at Harvey.

CHICAGO DISTRICT LEAGUE.

Ulster United and Jugo-Slavia at 79th street and Drexel avenue; Y. M. H. A. and 112d field artillery at 16th street and Avers avenue at 3 o'clock; Maple Leafs and North Shores at Lemoyne and Cicero avenues at 3 o'clock.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE.

FIRST DIVISION—Hungarians and Norwegians at 46th street and Fullerton avenue; Sparta Union and Victoria at 19th street and 52d avenue. SECOND DIVISION—Norwegians II. and Hungarians II. at 46th and Fullerton at 1:15; Victoria II. and Sparta II. at 19th street and 52d avenue at 1:15; Vikings and Sparta at Lake Forest at 3 o'clock.

POCKET BILLIARD TITLE TO PINDLE

Madison, Wis., April 15.—The Wisconsin 1922 pocket billiard tournament was won last night by Pindle of Appleton, with eight games won and none lost. Zander of Beloit took second, winning six out of his eight games, with Soley, Eau Claire third and Hueber, La Crosse, fourth. High run of the tournament was made by Cain or Rhinelander with 44.

AUGIE A CINCH FOR CITY CUE LEAGUE CROWN

The defeat of Moreau by Le Gros on Friday night practically eliminated the young Madison Square player as a contender for the Blake trophy, emblematic of the championship of the Chicago Billiard league. Augie Kickhefer, with seventeen wins and two losses, will have to lose all three of his remaining games to give Moreau a chance to pass him. The race for the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth prizes continues close.

Following is the standing:

	W.	L.	HR.	BG.
Kieckhefer [60], Recreation	17	2	11	51
Moreau [42], Madison Square	15	4	8	52
Le Gros [50], Casino	12	7	9	48
Helberg [42], Schillings	11	8	8	57
Capron [52], Recreation	11	9	12	47
Holzer [42], Schaefers	10	10	7	55
Henry [42], Leflingwells	9	10	8	39
Fredick [50], McGarrys	8	12	7	55
Lookabaugh [50], Readings	8	12	7	68
Hubbell [42], Harts	8	13	6	52
Harris [48], Haights	6	13	6	77
Johnson [42], Sing. & Spokes	2	17	5	59

The schedule for this week follows:

Monday—Helberg vs. Johnson at Singer & Spokes.

Tuesday—Kieckhefer vs. Harris at Haights. Tuesday—Le Gros vs. Lookabaugh at Readings.

Wednesday—Harry vs. Moreau at Madison Square.

Thursday—Johnson vs. Holzer at Schafers. Thursday—Le Gros vs. Kieckhefer at Recreation.

Friday—Harris vs. Helberg at Schillings.

Veteran George Sutton is following the younger experts in huge runs. In a practice game last week he counted 619 at 18-2 balkline. Eight years ago he made 604.

Jake Schaefer and Welker Cochran have arranged all the details of their match for the 18-2 title at Orchestra hall, May 16 to 18. They will play under the same conditions which prevailed in the Schaefer-Hoppe match, the winner taking 60 per cent and the loser 40 per cent of the net gate receipts. Both players will play golf in preparation for the match. Cochran is considered the better man on the links.

CALIFORNIA ATHLETES BEAT MISSOURI, 85-45

Berkeley, Cal., April 15.—University of Missouri track athletes were defeated by the University of California Bears, 85 to 45, in a dual meet here today. Capt. ILLINI SWAMP RICE ATHLETES; TAKE ALL FIRSTS

Houston, Tex., April 15.—Rice Institute track team was defeated by the Illinois university in the dual track meet tdoay, 113½ to 17½. Rice failed to capture a single first place. Before the first seven points had been run, Illinois had won all places in four events.

To the disappointment of Rice fans, who witnessed the meet, Lindsey of Rice failed to take first in the 100 yard dash, Ayres beating the Rice star. Lindsey had set a record of :09 4-5 seconds prior to this year.

Parsons Through as Sport Director at Colorado

Colorado Springs, Colo., April 15.—C. L. Parsons, director of athletics at Colorado college for three years, was informed by President C. A. Duniway today that his contract would not be renewed at the conclusion of the present school year. No statement in explanation of the action was made.

Albion Opens Season with 4-1 Victory Over Olivet

Albion, Mich., April 15.—[Special.]—Albion college opened the M. I. A. A. season here this afternoon defeating Olivet college in a tight game, 4 to 1. Perkins made his deput for the Methodists and held the visitors to four hits. Dowe for the Crimson was touched for eight hits. The Albion fielding was fast, only one error being chalked up.

Wolff Receives Tickets to Herman-Ryan Tussle

Sammy Wolff, who will conduct a special train to the Kentucky derby at Louisville, May 13, has received a batch of tickets for the fight between Pete Herman and Tommy Ryan the night before the turf classic. The train will leave on the night of May 11.

Vassar Alumnæ Win from Smith Girls at Basketball

New York, April 15.—Vassar's basketball quintet defeated the Smith college five here today, 27 to 18. The gate receipts were divided, 60 per cent to Vassar and 40 to Smith for their endowment funds. The teams were composed of alumnæ of the colleges.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. METCALFE.

DOUBLING A NO-TRUMP BID.

DO not double a bid of one in either no-trump or in any suit except when holding a better hand than the minimum requirement for a no-trump bid. Unless this rule is scrupulously followed the partner of the doubler is unable to act freely as he should. The deal which follows is an excellent example of this point.

West secured ten tricks.

The deal was mostly made of bidding, the declarer having no difficulty in securing game. The spade holding of west was ridiculous, but became formidable from the information secured up to the time the bid of three spades was made. On the first round of bidding the heart suit looked magnificent. When east repudiated hearts, west reasoned that his partner held a straight no trump hand confined entirely to spades, clubs, and diamonds. As east apparently did not have a suit long enough to make a bid desirable, it was nearly certain that he had some length in the spade suit. With this reasoning the bid of three spades became not only reasonable but imperative. All that was necessary was for west to have confidence in the original double made by east. The next deal shows a new idea in playing.

West secured seven tricks.

DUMMY A LEMON.

The declarer had a strong no trump hand and the dummy was a lemon. The declarer, therefore, should not have won the odd trick and south was entirely responsible for the failure to defeat the contract.

At trick 8, south should have been able to count his partner for the two remaining diamonds, the ace of spades alone and the king and one heart. North could not have held five spades originally as in that case he would have opened spades at trick one instead of diamonds. The declarer could not have held both the ace and king of hearts as in that case he would have taken his three tricks immediately. South therefore should have overtaken his partner's queen of spades with his king and led a heart. This procedure would have given north and south the odd trick to which their cards entitled them.

South thought he was making a good play in leaving the lead with his partner because the latter had two good diamonds to make but the diamond tricks were never in jeopardy and south simply failed to reason out the whole situation.

PENN OARSMEN CONQUER YALE

Philadelphia, April 15.—The University of Pennsylvania varsity crew today defeated the Yale eight by a length of open water in the annual duel regatta on the Schuylkill river. Pennsylvania's time was 6:53; Yale, 7:02.

The Red and Blue made a clean sweep of the dual regatta, winning not only the varsity but the junior and 150 pound events. The only consolation for the Eli oarsmen came this morning when the Yale alumni eight defeated the Penn graduates in a special event.

Penn's junior eight won by two and one-half lengths in 7:02 2-5. Yale's time was 7:08 2-5. The 150 pound crew beat Yale by three and one-half lengths, doing the American Henley distance in 6:48, twelve seconds better than the visitors.

2 FREE THROWS ON PERSONAL FOULS IN BASKET GAME

New York, April 15.—Alteration of the foul rule in basketball, including the extension of the foul line across the playing court and allowing entries for a basket to victims of personal fouls in a designated foul area, was adopted today by the national board of approved basketball officials.

It was the first radical change of the rule to be made by a governing basketball organization in twenty years, and was decided upon after a two day discussion, during which certain officials recommended abandonment of the basket from foul and other drastic alterations.

Change in Dribbling Rule.

The board ruled that personal fouls should be declared in event of deliberate pulling, pushing, charging, or tripping, delaying the game, coaching from side lines, and unsportsmanlike conduct.

For minor offenses, such as violations of the running, hand behind back and dribbling, the ball will be given to the opposing team out of bounds. When the ball is held within the foul area, it will be tossed up on the foul line.

In connection with dribbling the board ruled that a player may take one step and must get rid of the ball before the back foot leaves the floor.

Reelect All Officers.

All officers of the national board of approved basketball officials were reelected at the annual meeting this afternoon. They are Chairman William H. Ball, M. C. A., New York; Secretary George T. Hepburn, A. A. U., New York, treasurer; Ralph Morgan, K. of C. A., Philadelphia, editor of rules book, and Oswald Tower, Andover academy.

Tigers Beat Virginia and Johns Hopkins on Track

Charlottesville, Va., April 15.—Track athletes of Princeton easily carried away the victory in today's triangular meet here with University of Virginia and Johns Hopkins. Points were scored as follows: Princeton, 85 1-3; Virginia, 21 2-3, and Johns Hopkins, 19. Thomson of Princeton was the principal point winner, having a total of sixteen points and winning first places in the high hurdles, discus, and shot put, and third place in the broad jump.

Efficiency That Can Be Acquired Only by Inherent Perfection

The prowess of the Stutz—with the "D-H" Engine and Compensating Spring Suspension—is inherent. It is not acquired artificially by adding intricate auxiliaries to the fundamental power unit.

The Stutz is the first fine car to rely solely on the mature refinement of its basic design instead of multiplication of parts for its splendid versatility.

As a result, the Stutz, we believe, is more nearly 100% efficient throughout the entire range of motor car performance than any one car built today.

Its attainments are the sort that can be acquired only as the result of inherent perfection of design.

WHEAT PIT WILD AS SHORTS FORCE MAY PRICES UP

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Heavy buying of wheat credited to foreign and eastern account and short covering carried prices up rapidly and the close was at net gains of 1¾@8¾c with May leading. Coarse grains derived the greater part of their strength from wheat, corn gaining 1¼@1½c and oats ½@¾c. Rye was up 2¾c. Trade in provisions was light with lard 7½@12½c and short ribs 20@22½c higher.

Congestion has become quite apparent in May and July wheat. Prices were on the upgrade a good part of the week, and with less pressure than recently wheat gained 5½@10½c as compared with a week ago. At no time were corn and oats lower than the close of the previous week, corn gaining 2¾@2¾c and oats 1¾@1¾c, while rye was up 5@5½c. Provisions were unsettled, with lard 15c and short ribs 7½@15c lower for the week.

Big Change in Wheat Market.

A material change has occurred in the wheat market. Prices opened higher and kept on the upgrade a good part of the day with houses with eastern connections good buyers of both May and July, part of which was attributed to foreign account. The report that Russia had agreed to pay its old debts was believed to have been the main factor in inducing the buying. There was also free buying of May and selling of July to close spreads and the difference widened to over 16c, against 10c early in the week.

Foreign markets were closed on account of the Easter holiday, but reports from there regarding the European crops were somewhat more bullish. Milling demand here continues slow and 25,000 bu were bought at Omaha to come to Chicago. Crop reports from the southwest show no change, with western Kansas generally claimed to be in poor shape.

Other Grains Follow Wheat.

Strength in wheat was mainly responsible for the strong upturn in corn and oats, and commission houses were also good buyers of corn, although there was little change in the cash situation. Domestic and eastern demand continues slow, but there are no prospects of an increase in the movement, and the trade is commencing to show apprehension over the extensive floods in Illinois and other states, which may affect the total acreage under feed grains.

Action of wheat had some effect on rye and, while trade was not large, prices advanced readily. Little was heard regarding export demand.

Provisions were rather dull, the strength in grains offsetting to some extent the easier tone in hogs. Cash demand shows signs of improving. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A big export business was under way in wheat, despite the Easter holidays abroad, sales of 600,000 bu durums and 500,000 bu Manitobas, in addition to a large amount of new crops being sold in various positions. Some business was put through in corn, but quantities were not given.

Domestic demand for grains remains relatively light, with sales at Chicago of 23,000 bu wheat, 30,000 bu corn, and 45,000 bu oats.

Milling demand for cash wheat at Kansas City was good. Fancy there sold at a new high for the season, prices being 3@5c higher for the day. St. Louis was up a like amount, with a fair demand and limited offerings. Omaha was 4c higher early and 6c higher at the last. Minneapolis premiums unchanged for choice and easy for other kinds.

Receipts of wheat at Chicago are mainly from Missouri river markets. Offerings on spot are small, with No. 2 hard May ½c over. No. 2 red was nominally May to 2c over. Receipts 28 cars.

Cash corn prices were ½@1c higher at Chicago, with the basis about steady. No. 2 mixed brought 1c under, yellow ¼@½c under, and white May price. No. 3 mixed was 2@2½c under, yellow 1¼@2½c, and white 1@1¾c under. Receipts 135 cars. Outside markets up 1@2c from Thursday.

Demand for cash oats only fair, with light offerings and strength in futures, sample values were ¼@½c higher, with No. 2 white 1¼@2c over. No. 3 white ½c under to ½c over May. Receipts 101 cars.

Range of cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

ASKS PERMIT TO ISSUE PAPER.

The Central Vermont railroad applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to issue and sell $728,000 in equipment trust securities, with which it will purchase rolling stock.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

May wheat was a wild affair. The largest local shorts were credited with buying many millions of bushels. The surplus was taken off the market early and at no time was there any pressure of offerings. When the price touched $1.40 it was impossible to buy and it jumped from there at the rate of ¾@1c between trades, with sales at $1.42¼ and $1.43 in different parts of the pit at the close.

The advance has been so rapid that a reaction would not be out of place. While foreigners have been good buyers, the immense line of hedges still out makes the markets susceptible to sharpe advances with any concentrated buying, while an absence of support and a little selling might easily make a good setback.

Local traders who recently thought it a good spread to sell May and July wheat at 10@12c discount for the July were active in closing their spreads yesterday, the May premium at the extreme being 17c over the July. The entire wheat situation in the east and abroad is said to have changed in the last week. The cash wheat has been well taken care of at the seaboard and abroad. As is generally the case when prices advance, the news is bullish. Impression of the close observers is that wheat has been depressed too low of late.

It was said at the close that leading holders who have not been disturbed by the recent decline did no selling on the advance. May wheat is up over 13c from the recent low point. A rumor that Liverpool futures were up 4d on the curb and that the spot wheat was up 9d had a great deal to do with stimulating the late buying. A Broomhall cable said the Liverpool wheat futures market is closed, but some importing houses are transacting business as usual. Manitoba parcels are firmly held at 1s advance and plates for prompt shipments are up 9d per quarter, while offers from the Argentine for distant shipment are very limited. The trade evidently confused the 9d per quarter as meaning 9d a bushel, which in reality is only 1½c.

Buying in of hedges on more than 1,000,000 bu of May wheat against sales of Durums and Manitobas was a big factor in absorbing the surplus offerings in the pit early.

There were 175,000 bu of wheat bought at Omaha to come to Chicago yesterday. Indications are that local stocks will show a small increase for the week, but they are not heavy. In pre-war days a stock of around 3,000,000 bu of wheat was considered entirely too light to induce short selling to any extent. The trade of the present day, however, looks at the market in a different light.

Elevator interests were active in buying May and selling July corn and oats, the spread on the latter being 2¾c to 2¾c, and on the former 3¾c. There was not so much of the spreading in oats as heretofore.

The steamers Otto and Richard Rice and the Clemmons are to leave Chicago for Buffalo today there being one cargo of oats and two cargoes of corn. The J. L. Rice is to leave Manitowoc for Buffalo with a cargo of corn. In all these boats carry about 1,000,000 bu of grain.

There were export sales of rye at 9¾c over Chicago May, free on board Baltimore. Seaboard exporters were large buyers of May rye, while Duluth and local holders were the principal sellers. Recently the spread between wheat and rye was 27¾c and yesterday at the close 34½c.

"Several times recently there has been superficial evidence that importing countries were long our new crop deliveries," says Thomson & McKinnon. "The action of the old crop delivery today strongly suggests some such ownership of the May. Ideas of lower prices have been so severely upset by today's market that it will take something radical to turn prices down permanently. It is advisable to avoid May delivery."

HAY RECEIPTS LARGER

The demand for hay absorbed all the 35 cars of timothy, 2 cars alfalfa, 3 cars southwestern, and 7 cars Nebraska prairie, with 1 car rye, 2 cars oat, and 1 car wheat straw. No. 1 timothy was $25.00@28.00; other timothy, $17.00@25.00; southwestern and Nebraska prairie, $16.00@18.00; alfalfa, $17.00@28.00; packing hay, $12.00@14.00; rye straw, $16.00@17.00; and other straw, $14.00@16.00.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Cotton goods steady with the demand for unfinished goods broader. Print cloths slightly higher on a basis of 7½c for 38½ inch 64x60s, and sheetings sold more freely for the bag manufacturing trades. Yarns in moderate demand at the low prices current. Burlaps steady. One line of fine all wool overcoatings advanced 3 per cent. Dress goods of worsted very quiet. Silks quiet except in sport styles and colors.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Numerous of the leading oil companies operating in the eastern, middle western, and southern states have advanced the price of gasoline 1@1½c a gallon wholesale. Further advances are looked for as summer draws near. As a result of this, Wall street has taken to speculation in a group of oil stocks which it has characterized the "gasoline oils." By this the street means that the stocks which have been accumulating gasoline during the winter months and now have large stocks on hand at low prices will benefit most from the advance in prices. It is intimated, however, that there must be an advance in crude oil prices accompanying the move, as producers will desire to share some of the prosperity.

With the estimated income account of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé for 1921 showing an about $13.80 a share earned on the common stock, keen interest is being shown in the financial district concerning the monthly showings of the road this year. For the first two months this year the actual net was $1,933,604, January being $561,103 and February $1,372,501. According to reports today from interests closely associated with the management, March is expected to make a better showing than February, and is looked to total $1,500,000 net. The annual report of the company will be released Tuesday.

Yesterday was the first half holiday since May 10, 1919, when sales passed the "million share mark." On that date the total was 1,029,425 shares. Another million share Saturday within recent years was on Nov. 18, 1916, when the total was 1,015,785 shares. Million share Saturdays, although rare, have been witnessed as early as 1909, the total on Dec. 22 of that year having been 1,006,179. In 1917 Saturday sales were in close touch of the mark, with a total of 992,631 on Feb. 3. On Sept. 23, 1916, also a Saturday, the total was 994,940. The first million share day in the history of the stock exchange was on Dec. 15, 1886, but that was a five hour day.

As a result of the further advance in pig iron and steel plates the average price of eight leading iron and steel products registered another gain this week, the figure being $44.05, according to a compilation from the Iron Age, compared with $43.71 a week ago and with $42.12 on Feb. 28, the low point reached on the decline, which started in September, 1920. On Aug. 3, 1920, the average was $85.03, the peak reached since the signing of the armistice.

The presence in this country of the chairman of the Royal Dutch-Shell corporation has been construed to mean that the corporation may attempt to sell a loan in the United States. Such a plan is entirely feasible, it is the general belief, although no announcement on such a project has been made by either Sir Henry W. A. Deterding or the bankers for the corporation in this country.

The board of directors of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie Railway company were restrained yesterday from paying a proposed semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent to preferred and common stockholders, in two restraining orders issued by Judge Wilbur F. Booth of the United States District court in Minneapolis. A hearing on the orders will be held in federal court next Saturday. The dividends were to have been paid out of profits accumulated prior to 1919.

"The signing of a contract for the development of the Teapot Dome oil fields for the United States government is the most important event in the history of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation," said H. F. Sinclair. "And in my opinion no more far-reaching step has ever been taken in the oil industry."

United States District Attorney Davis, at Detroit, announced that suit will be brought in the federal court there Thursday by the government against the Lincoln Motor company to recover $6,000,000 in alleged overpayments on war contracts.

The Du Pont Chemical company, organized at the close of the world war to take over and dicpose of the Du Pont company's abandoned war plants and excess war materials, has finished its work and is arranging to distribute its assets to its stockholders.

Secretary Mellon announced subscriptions for the 3½ per cent treasury certificates, dated April 15 and maturing Oct. 16, closed yesterday. Preliminary reports indicate that the offering, which was for $150,000,000 or thereabouts, has been oversubscribed, and that total subscriptions aggregate over $300,000,000.

A banking group has purchased a block of Eastman Kodak company stock, which will be offered to the public for subscription some time this week. Details as to price, etc., have not yet been determined, but an official announcement regarding the matter is expected shortly. This offering will be the new stock recently created for the purpose of exchange for the old stock of the corporation.

Price reductions amounting to 12½ per cent in boilers and 5 per cent in radiators have been announced by the American Radiator company. These cuts establish prices about 33 1-3 per cent above the pre-war level.

There were 516 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 562 in the preceding week and 850 during the corresponding week last year.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending April 12, by 200 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $857,330,000, compared with $1,074,479,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $857,330,000, compared with $871,505,000 for the corresponding week last year.

EUROPEAN WHEAT REQUIREMENTS

European wheat requirements until next harvest suggest the necessity of continued liberal buying. Reports yesterday said Greece will need 1,295,000 bu monthly; Finland needs 800,000 bu rye; the Baltic states in general are dependent largely upon American flour. Belgium is subsisting from hand to mouth on foreign grain purchases until the next crop. France requires 18,500,000 to 22,200,000 bu of wheat. Roumania has suspended shipments of grain due France and Switzerland under contract. Italy has suspended the import duty on grain until June 30 and stocks of wheat in that country are estimated at 33,300,000 bu, which are said to have deteriorated and are being distributed at $4.75 per quintal of 220 lbs, a price considerably below Argentine and American wheat, thus destroying the free market. Unless distibution of government stocks is suspended by reversal of state policy, the Italian wheat requirements during the next six months will be small.

THE INVESTORS IDEA

THE SERVICE rendered by an investment house to its clients should, to fulfill its obligation to the public, be of such character as to inspire people to save and invest. Safeguarding the investor's interests and discharging efficiently the routine details of investing—while always of utmost importance—are not alone sufficient.

One of the basic principles underlying the growth and success of The Investors Company has been an effort to make saving and investing so attractive, convenient and understandable that thousands of people who might otherwise never do so will be led to invest, with great benefit to themselves. This effort has gradually evolved into a method of conducting business that has a distinction all its own and which we have decided to call The INVESTORS Idea.

In order that The INVESTORS Idea may become available to a greater number of people, we are about to open a ground floor office in the loop. This office will represent the perfected result of our years of effort to popularize investing—it will inspire you to make greater progress towards financial independence.

Prior to the opening of our new loop office we will publish several advertisements explaining briefly The INVESTORS Idea. Watch for these advertisements—they may give you a conception of investing that will enable you to become a better saver and investor.

It Costs Only $6,500 to Sell Us $500,000 of Thirty-Day Accounts

Our Customers are rated up to ONE MILLION dollars and over.

MR. MANUFACTURER: It will cost you only $6,500 to sell us $500,000 of Accounts averaging payment in thirty days—no commissions, no interest, no exchange. Not so much is it?

Wouldn't you give your customers 2% discount, or $10,000, on $500,000 of Accounts if they would pay in ten days? Our charge, as stated, to buy those Accounts would be only $6,500, and we would give you the money at time of shipment and we would let you collect the Accounts, as usual, without disturbing your customers or your business organization.

The best way is to try out our proposition—if it is to your advantage you will want to continue—if not, you need not sell us any more accounts, and any accounts sold us will soon pay out and the transactions closed, without having disturbed your customers or your business.

The enormous volume which we do should be sufficient proof as to the value of our service. It costs nothing to find out what benefit our plan would be to you.

Wooled lambs sell about $2.00@2.50 per 100 lbs higher than above quotations.

Closing hog prices showed a further decline of 10c, with the general average at $10.10, lowest in practically three weeks. Packers were weak in their views, and left about 3,000 in the pens, some of them held by speculators since opening day of the week, when they cost 40@60c more than quotations current at the week's close.

Receipts of hogs for the week at 121,600 were second smallest in six months and 6,300 below the ten year average, but as an offset shipments from Chicago last week totaled only 16,300, the smallest for any week in practically a year. Packers naturally took advantage of the small shipping outlet and hammered the market.

Hog Average Is Lighter.

More underweight hogs numbered among the week's arrivals the estimated average weight at 240 lbs, falling two pounds below the previous week, standing one pound heavier than a year ago and six pounds heavier than the ten year average for corresponding week since 1911.

Closing cattle prices were 10@40c higher than the previous week's finish. Largest export orders of the season were a strengthening factor, together with a marked falling off in receipts, which totaled smallest of the year at 44,500.

Sheep and lambs met a satisfactory trade early last week, but declined sharply during closing days, with values late standing 25@50c lower than a week ago on aged sheep and 50@65c lower on lambs and yearlings, with wooled stock in both classes suffering the greatest loss. Top aged lambs early in week $16.25, with "springers" up to $26.00.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 13,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs, and 16,000 sheep, against 19,787 cattle, 29,549 hogs, and 17,143 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 49,000 cattle, 125,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep, against 60,266 cattle, 142,121 hogs, and 93,772 sheep a year ago.

Estimates on Monday's probable receipts of hogs range from 39,000 to 51,000. J. M. Waterg marked 39,000; George Chandler and W. H. Overman, 40,000; H. H. Moore and Lester Armour, 42,000; F. R. Burrows and E. R. Gentry, 43,000; E. S. Waterbury, 44,000; Edward Morris, 45,000; and F. W. Waddell, 51,000.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

"Through this territory there is much good wheat, also lots of very thin poor fields," wired George M. Le Count to Stein, Alstrin & Co., from Hutchinson, Kan. "General prospects from here west disappointing. Early wheat making splendid growth. Soil thoroughly soaked and general condition will improve during rest of the month."

Hungerford, the Logan & Bryan crop expert, wired from Pratt, Kan.: "Ford, Hodgman and north half of Gray county, wheat uneven. Very thin stand with 40 per cent abandoned. Condition about 40 on balance. South part of Gray a little better. Finney county uneven; generally thin. Garden City territory has some of the best growth I have seen in the west. Great Bend, Scott and Lane counties very poor condition. Dodge City to Bucklin, poor. Bucklin to Pratt, somewhat better."

F. F. Thompson, in his crop report to J. E. Bennett & Co. from Denver, said that condition of wheat from Salina west to Ellsworth, Kan., was good, but from Ellsworth west it was more spotted. This condition continues west to the Colorado line, where there is an improved prospect. Eastern Colorado and west central tier of counties in Kansas have had good snows during last few days, which were of material benefit to the growing crop."

Winter wheat in the poor sections of Kansas is not making much progress and fields are weedy, according to the Modern Miller. Green bugs still a menace in Oklahoma. Nebraska condition improved by recent rains but is still below average. Missouri, Indiana, Illinois and Ohio look good, and percentage of abandoned acreage will be small. Field work northwest delayed by excessive moisture.

Remington Head Charges Outsiders Seek Control

New York, April 15.—That a group of "outsiders" was trying to obtain control of the Remington Typewriter company., Inc., was the charge made today by Frank N. Kondolf, president. The charge was made after Supreme Court Justice Delshanty issued an order for the company, its directors and subsidiary companies to appear Monday to show cause why they should not be restrained from voting 21,149 shares of Remington stock belonging to the insurance fund at the annual meeting, April 19.

"We never intended to vote that stock," said Mr. Kondolf. The suit was brought by Francis C. Williams, owner of 1,100 shares of stock.

8% Exceptional Profit-Sharing Non-Callable SECURITY

72% The average annual earnings of this company for past six years have been over 72% on the net worth of the business. The major portion of these large earnings—more than 4 times the yearly interest requirements on this entire issue—were re-invested in the business.

Splendid Outlook for This Company

The enormous future possibilities of this business will be realized when it is considered that about 20% of all machine shop work consists of boring and reaming operations. We now serve about 98% of the steam and electric railroads in the United States and Canada, but this field represents but a small fraction (less than 6%) of our prospective market.

Our waiting field, which can be reached through increased production, consists of approximately 106,000 plants, factories and machine shops in the automotive and general industrial fields.

George W. Goethals & Company, the world-famous Industrial Engineers, headed by Major General George W. Goethals, reports: "A careful analysis of the future demand for these tools has been made, and it is estimated that future sales will exceed those of the best past years."

In view of our exceptionally large past earnings from very limited capital, it is evident that those who now supply the new capital for expansion of this firmly established business into the greater waiting fields should reap very large returns on their money.

E. E. DAVIS, President

This new and attractive form of security not only assures you a perpetual income of 8% a year, but in addition shares equally in the profits of this prosperous business.

In view of the consistent record of earnings for the entire life of the company since 1903, it is conservative to estimate that investors in this profit-sharing security at par —$100 per share—would not part with their Davis Boring Tool holdings two years hence for $300 per share.

Largest Business of Its Kind

The Davis Boring Tool Company started 18 years ago with $1,000 capital. Today it is the largest concern of its kind, with an uninterrupted growth that has resulted almost entirely from earnings. Only $10,000 of outside capital has ever been brought into the business.

Each year the plant capacity has been enlarged from profits, but the volume of demand has grown so rapidly that it is now desirable to provide additional capital to care for the large number of profitable orders that have heretofore been declined.

Cadet Knitting Company

10-Year 7% Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

Business The Cadet Knitting Company manufactures hosiery and sweaters, selling its products direct to 8,000 retailers. Sales in 1919, 1920 and 1921 aggregated over $2,000,000 annually. Judging from orders now on hand sales in 1922 should exceed $3,000,000. The principal plant of the company is in Philadelphia with branch factories in Chicago and Manitowoc, Wis., and sales branches in twelve principal cities.

Security These bonds are a direct obligation and the only funded debt of the Cadet Knitting Company. Total tangible assets exceed $3,200 per $1,000 bond; a wide margin of safety.

Earnings For the past three years earnings available for interest charges, after inventory losses and depreciation, have averaged in excess of seven times interest requirements on this issue.

The Cadet Knitting Company manufactures a staple commodity which supplies a large consumer demand through a widely distributed dealer organization. The company has shown a consistent and constant growth. Bonds backed by a business of this high character offer the investor a very desirable opportunity. Get the complete facts regarding this issue. How do you read bond ads?

WHEN you read bond advertising you follow one of two courses.

Either you are attracted by the high interest figures which appear at the top of the one class of advertisement:

or

You look for the signature of a bank or bond house that has always relied upon safety, rather than high interest yield, to sell its issues.

To follow the "Safety First" course may require superlative conservatism and far-sightedness. Its rewards, however, are worth it.

This bank has for sale 6% Real Estate Gold Bonds and First Mortgages of exceptional merit in denominations of $100, $500, $1000.

The security for these investments is a first mortgage on improved Chicago Real Estate of twice the value of the total issue. These investments represent the utmost in safety.

Write, phone, or call for a copy of our booklet "6's or 7's." It explains why some bonds are better than others.

The New York Times.

New York, April 15.—[Special.]—An unusually large accumulation of buying orders gave the impetus to opening prices on the stock exchange today and for the first time since May 10, 1919, when the rise of that period was becoming excited, the total business done in the two hour Saturday market went beyond a million shares.

Apparently there was extensive speculative profit taking, as well as new buying, for the day's net advances were not large, gains of 2 or 3 points being in fact exceptional and mostly restricted to the oil shares and highly speculative industrials. But the market at no time displayed a reactionary trend, and some of the most active stocks closed at the day's highest prices.

Bonds Active and Higher.

Transactions in the bond market were on a similarly large scale, with the upward movement quite as marked. Foreign government bonds, which went into new high ground for the year, covered as varied an assortment as the Argentine 7 per cent, the Czecho-Slovakian 8s, the United Kingdom 5½s of 1927, the Japanese 4½s, the Mexican 5s, and the French City 6s.

Upwards of two score domestic company bonds went above their previous high prices. In that list railway securities were conspicuous, although railway shares had hung back in the stock market. To a market which recalled the mysterious weakness of the various Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul bonds during the autumn when the general market was advancing, one of the interesting facts about today's movement was that nearly all of that group of securities went above their highest prices of 1921.

Bonds Make Largest Gains.

The week's changes, as indicated by comparison of Saturday's final prices with those of the week before, were on the whole more striking in bonds than in stocks. The week brought many ret advances of 2 to 4 points in prices of active shares, but the number of investment bonds which have risen 2 to 5 points is much the longer. With Liberty bonds the comparison is remarkable. Although few of them closed today at the week's highest, the net changes of the week range from ⅜ to 1½ points. Even from the low prices of the present year the advance has in most of them ranged between 3 and 5 per cent.

Foreign exchange moved only fractionally, probably the European holiday interfered with business, but the market held firm.

Bank Loans Show Increase.

An increase of $32,578,000 in the loans of the New York banks is shown in today's weekly clearing house report. Demand deposits rose $52,516,000 and time deposits, $16,218,000. Surplus reserve decreased $12,715,540, leaving only $1,946,-410 in excess of legal requirements. Details of the statement, with comparisons, follow:

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

[Copyright: 1922: By Fairchild News Service.]

NEW YORK.—Gradual improvement is reported in all blouse markets, from wholesale to retail selling. There is a sudden change to optimism among New York wholesalers. Better grade merchandise is increasing in demand. Fairly firm prices are expected after Easter.

NEW YORK.—In the broad silk market crepe de chine still leads for "spot" business. Manufacturers are discussing the heavy "flat" crepe de chine as a fall proposition. Prices eliciting business are running from $1.15 a yard for lightweight to $2.75 for "flat" or broadcloth crepe.

NEW YORK.—Reconstruction of the dress industry is progressing rapidly. Voluntary dissolutions, firm separations, new combinations, financial revisions, and general realignment are reported. Complaints of a profitless season are general.

NEW YORK.—Voiles are now in fair demand, cotton goods houses report. The same is true of dotted Swisses, striped and checked dimities, and batistes. Belief is strong that organdies will not be in general demand.

NEW YORK.—The National Retail Dry Goods association reports department stores now constitute 10 per cent of the licensed radio telephone stations in the United States. Scores of other stores have filed applications for licenses.

DETROIT.—Detroit wholesalers will hold their first cooperative "buyers' week," beginning May 1. About 25,000 retailers in Ohio, Michigan, and Indiana will be invited to attend.

PATERSON, N. J.—The local silk hosiery market is brighter. Some orders are being placed for fall. There has been a little buying for spring, 1923, delivery. The drop in the price of pure silk has not affected the price of silk hosiery.

ARMOUR & CO. REVIEW.

Armour & Co., in their weekly trade review, say: "Trade in meat products this week has had a little better tone, and especially interesting has been the revival of buying for foreign account. Easter week has been felt in all lines, with marked effect on beef trade. Supplies of fresh beef low, also supplies in the cattle market. Under normal conditions that would have resulted in a brisk trade with probably higher prices.

"Demand for fresh pork has been fair during the week, with the volume of trading in food proportions. Prices for the fresh product have been firm. Trade in cured product is seasonal. England was in the market this week for meats and some lard. Collections continue fair."

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST

The official forecast for today and tomorrow and yesterday's table of records follow:

Missouri—Increasing cloudiness Sunday, with probably showers by night; cooler in west portion; Monday unsettled and cooler.

Wisconsin—Increasing cloudiness Sunday, with probably showers by night; Monday unsettled and cooler, with showers in east portion.

Minnesota—Rain Sunday; colder in south and west portions; Monday partly cloudy; colder in southeast portion.

Iowa—Increasing cloudiness Sunday, with showers by afternoon or night; cooler in west and central portions; Monday unsettled, with cooler in east portion.

North Dakota—Cloudy Sunday, unsettled in southeast portion; Monday fair with rising temperature.

South Dakota—Cloudy Sunday, with rain and cooler in east and central portions; Monday fair with rising temperature.

Nebraska—Rain and cooler Sunday; Monday fair, rising temperature in west portion.

Kansas—Unsettled and colder Sunday; Monday probably fair, warmer in west portion.

7% NEW BONDS

The Washington Boulevard Arms Apartments, illustrated above, secures one of our two new 7% First Mortgage Serial Gold Bond issues. Located at Washington Boulevard and Lamon Avenue. A highly desirable West Side issue.

To the left you see the Kenmore Arms Apartments, located at 5111-17 Kenmore Avenue, one block north of Argyle, securing a new North Side offering, the kind you get too seldom.

Count yourself fortunate if you obtain a bond of either of these new 7% issues, for there is an increasing shortage of such safe 7% securities.

6% SEASONED BONDS

At a time like this, when there are not enough 7% bonds of our standard to supply all who await each new issue, our list of Seasoned Bonds, always inviting, becomes especially attractive to investors.

These bonds, of course, yield 6%—the standard interest rate for the First Mortgage Bond. As we have pointed out in our advertising again and again, 7% yields with such safety as our bonds invariably offer are temporary, due to conditions that may never return, and fast drawing to a close. The slightly lower yield of these Seasoned Bonds is more than offset by an unequaled margin of security—each issue having been reduced by serial payments of principal—hence these bonds are preferred by the most conservative investors.

Every bond we have ever sold has proven a safe, prompt-paying investment. The rare combination here offered of new 7% Bonds and 6% Seasoned Bonds—all thoroughly secure—constitutes an attractive opportunity. Let us give you fully illustrated, readable information about it.

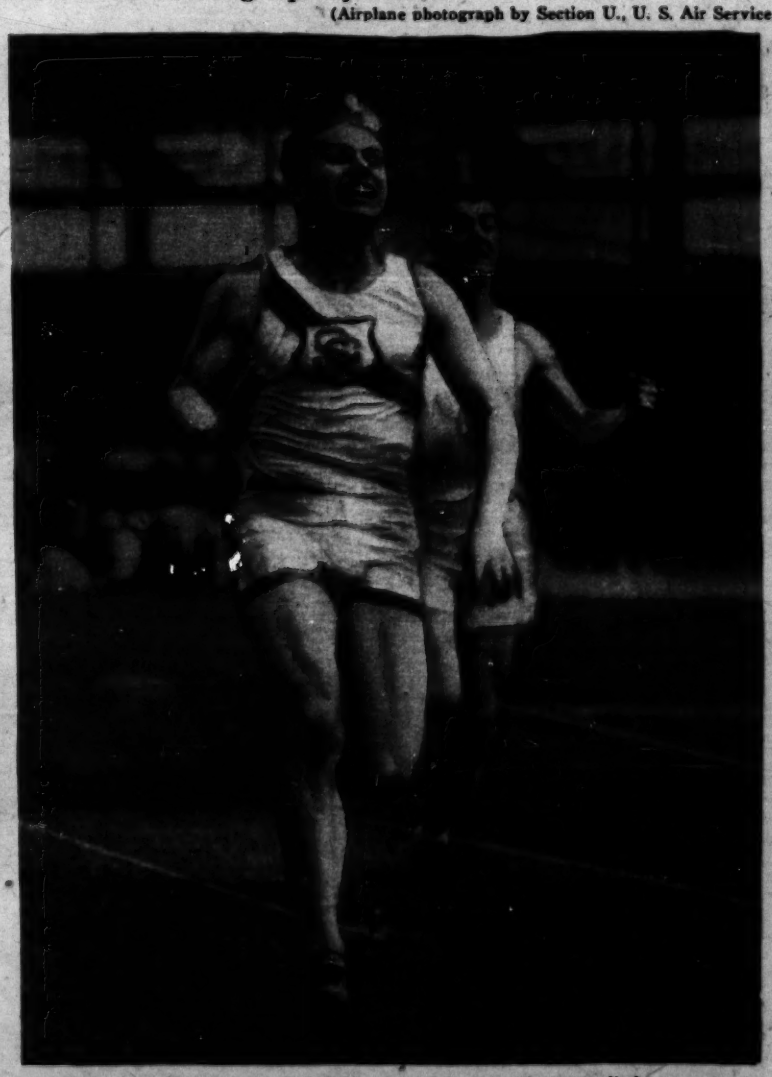
PERSHING STADIUM, JUST OUTSIDE OF PARIS, PROBABLY WILL BE THE SCENE OF THE 1924 OLYMPIC GAMES, although Americans say it is "about all in." The stadium hasn't been touched since 1919, when American army engineers built it, and now it seems the French committes is a couple of million francs shy of the amount it figured on for the meet, while it hadn't counted on the stadium repairs at all. Critical Americans say the track is short, the drainage is poor, and the whole stadium is inadequate for the world games, as regards both athletes and spectators. It has a seating capacity of 22,000.

(Airplane photograph by Section U., U. S. Air Service, A. E. F.; from The Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

LARRY BROWN, captain of the University of Pennsylvania team, gave sporting followers on the other side of the pond the first glimpse of his flying heels on the Penn team's invasion of Britain this month. His steady successes make Brown a sure pick for the next American Olympic team.

(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)



CHARLEY PADDOCK, the "fastest human," jumped to the athletic spotlight last summer when he stepped the 100 and 220 yard dashes in world's record time, tying the century, and establishing a new furlong record. This husky, red headed flash is Los Angeles' favorite son for the 1924 United States Olympic outfit.

(Photograph from International.)

JOIE RAY, veteran mile racer of the Illinois A. C. of Chicago, who has been running against the existing world's mile mark for three years, probably will take his quest to Pershing stadium when the time for the 1924 games rolls around.

How Famous Movie Stars Keep Their Hair Beautiful

What Any Woman Can Do To Make Her Hair Improve Her Looks

STUDY the pictures of these beautiful women and you will see just how much their hair has to do with their appearance.

Beautiful hair is not a matter of luck, it is simply a matter of care.

You, too, can have beautiful hair, if you care for it properly. Beautiful hair depends almost entirely upon the care you give it.

Shampooing is always the most important thing.

It is the shampooing which brings out the real life and lustre, natural wave and color, and makes your hair soft, fresh and luxuriant.

When your hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because your hair has not been shampooed properly.

When your hair has been shampooed properly, and is thoroughly clean, it will be glossy, smooth and bright, delightfully fresh-looking, soft and silky.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why leading motion picture stars and discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and it does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your hair look, just follow this simple method:

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water. Then wet the hair and scalp with clear warm water. Pour the Mulsified evenly over the hair and rub it thoroughly all over the scalp and throughout the entire length, down to the ends of the hair.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, rinse the hair and scalp thoroughly—always using clear, fresh warm water. Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before.

Two waters are usually sufficient for washing the hair, but sometimes the third is necessary.

You can easily tell, for when the hair is perfectly clean, it will be soft and silky in the water.

Rinse the Hair Thoroughly

THIS is very important. After the final washing, the hair and scalp should be rinsed in at least two changes of good warm water and followed with a rinsing in cold water.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find the hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it is.

If you want to always be remembered for your beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage—and it will be noticed and admired by everyone.

You can get Mulsified at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

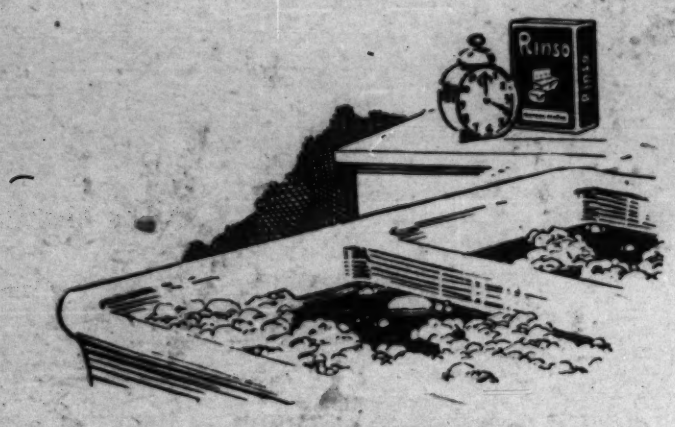
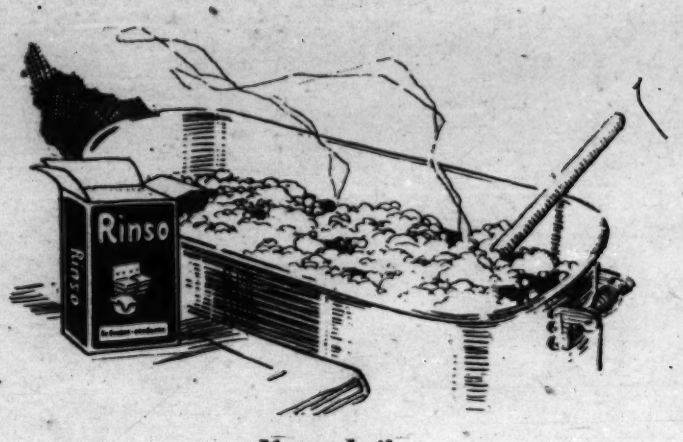
Takes the place of bar soap



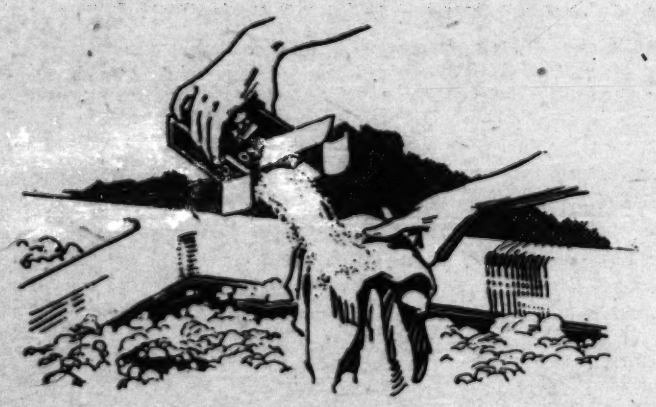
Just soaking in big lasting Rinso suds does away with almost all rubbing

The most ground-in dirt is loosened without injuring a thread. Only the dirtiest places need a light rubbing. Dissolve Rinso in boiling water. Use enough to get big lasting suds. Soak an hour or more—overnight if you wish. (Colored clothes only half an hour.)



If you boil

Boiling isn't necessary when you use Rinso, but if you like to boil your white cottons, let the safe Rinso suds boil through and through them. Use enough Rinso dissolved in boiling water to give you the suds you like. No other soap—no washing powder—is needed with Rinso.



For the very dirtiest places

A little dry Rinso sprinkled directly on the dirtiest places makes even the most obstinate dirt disappear with just a light rubbing. Rinso has more cleansing power than is possible in bar soap.

If you use a washing machine

Rinso suds have enough body to get clothes clean without rubbing. Use enough Rinso solution to make rich suds. Operate your machine. You need no other soap, no washing powder with Rinso.

At every step of the family wash Rinso does the work ~ You need no other soap

Rinso

Note—In hard water it takes from ¾ to 1 package of Rinso to a tub to make good suds. In very hard water you will need from 1½ to 2 packages to a tub to get the big lasting suds that loosen all the dirt.

It's Easy to Get Thin to Music
—first lesson FREE, to prove it

4625 Indiana Avenue
Chicago

August 14, 1921

Wallace, Chicago;
Dear Sir:—

Having reduced by your wonderful music method in only eight weeks' time, it is but fair to tell you what you have done for me.

I reduced sixty pounds. My friends pass me on the street without recognizing who it is. I feel better. I appear at least ten years younger,

Gratefully,
(Mrs.) Grace Horchler

Read the above; published by permission.

MY reduction course on personally dictated records—to music—reduces any figure to normal, in surprisingly short time. This effective and enjoyable means of reducing is open to any man or woman who has a phonograph, and will give me 12 to 20 minutes daily, for a few weeks, at home.

Food Does Not Cause Fat

Some of the stoutest people eat less than a child of ten. The secret of real reduction is organizing your system to use all of your food for blood, bone and sinew, and eliminating all waste. There is then nothing left from which Nature can make fat. That is why my course gets such instant results, and never fails to bring with them a joyous state of health. You'll see and feel the improvement with the very first lesson!

My Method Lets You Eat

No thoughtful woman will seek a normal figure, supple limbs, and a buoyant state of health through such unnatural means as stinting and starving the system. My way of getting thin leaves remaining flesh firm; the skin smooth; the eyes clear and bright.

Now read a letter from Mrs. Horchler dated just three weeks after her first one:

4625 Indiana Avenue
Chicago

Wallace, Chicago: September 4, 1921

Dear Sir:—When I wrote your course had reduced me from 234 lbs. to 174 lbs. I felt that was all I could ask. But I kept on with the lessons and am now down to 160 lbs., close to correct weight for my height.

Gratefully, (Mrs.) Grace Horchler.

Ten or fifteen pounds reduction is nothing. But I wish to emphasize that my method is just as sure in the case of the woman who is 50, 60, even 70 lbs. too heavy.

I Repeat Once More My FREE Offer:

Accept my five-day offer now. I stand ready to prove my course can reduce you—before you pay a penny. Try it five days—that's all I ask! I will send you, free and prepaid, plainly wrapped, a full-size, double-faced record on which I have dictated your first lesson. Fill in the coupon now, with lead pencil. Mail it today.

I HAVE REDUCED hundreds of Chicagoans; thousands residing elsewhere. I have scores of letters to prove every claim I make. Can anyone who really wants to get thin turn this page without tearing out the coupon?

Wallace

WALLACE 630 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ills.

Please send record for first reducing lesson, free and prepaid. I will either enroll, or return your record at the end of a five-day trial. This does not obligate me in any way.

Itching and Skin Ailments

Fade away before the soothing, germ-destroying power of Kloria. So do boils, dandruff, infections, etc. Free trial.

FOR itching eczema, itching scalp, or itching anywhere, almost instant relief may be had with Kloria. For any germ disease of the skin—such as dandruff or barber's itch—the effect is both prompt and positive. Kloria destroys the germ cause, and the trouble fades away. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with Kloria; a few of these simple treatments will usually end this annoying affection. It is harmless as water to the hair.

Kloria is the new and wonderful antiseptic, discovered in the world war, which, by scientific test, is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid. This great germ-destroying ability explains its remarkable power of rapid healing.

Yet Kloria does not burn or irritate, is soothing and pleasant, and may be used freely and without fear because not poisonous.

Used as a mouth-wash, it really destroys the acid-forming bacteria which cause tooth-decay. As a gargle or spray, it ends the infection of sore throat and eases the pain at once. Test it on a boil or open sore and notice how it destroys the pus formation, ends the soreness and brings sound, rapid healing. Cuts and burns heal often in one-fourth the usual time. It is producing amazing results for sore, bleeding gums (pyorrhea), usually stopping the soreness and bleeding in one week. Harmless, yet far more effective than any poisonous antiseptic for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water, and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clear, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists, 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

Free Sample A sample of Kloria, enough for a convincing test, will be gladly sent free. Write for it. The results will be a revelation.

Corns

Are Easily Ended

TOUCH any corn with a few drops of "Gets-It" and peel it off—not in fragments, but painlessly, in one solid piece of dead skin that does not cling to the live flesh. "Gets-It" removes it all, cap and root. All hurting stops the minute it is applied. Soft corns, hard corns, old corns, new corns, all go when "Gets-It" comes. Just as good for callouses. Costs but a trifle—everywhere. Refuse substitutes.

Today you can make your frocks with the success of an expert

Home sewing has now become an entirely new thing

DRESSES that no one will believe you made yourself!

A year ago you would laugh at the idea of re-creating a Paris gown at home — today you can calmly do it.

The Deltor, now included with every new Butterick pattern, gives you the deft success of a professional in your sewing.

Every Butterick pattern you buy has been actually made up and fitted on a living model before the pattern is put on sale. Its Deltor is an exact record, in pictures and words, of that expert dressmaking which takes place in the Deltor fitting room.

With it you know exactly what to do and when and how to do it.

You select your materials like an expert. You have a list of just what fashionable materials are best suited to the lines of the particular model you have selected. A frock designed for taffeta might quite lose its style in a softer material like silk crêpe.

You lay your pattern swiftly and easily by the Deltor cutting layout that shows your size pattern laid out on your width material. In fact your chart is even for the particular view you prefer of the pattern you have bought. You do not waste an inch.

Putting your dress together never took so little time. There is none of the old uncertainty, the experimental basting, the ripping out. There before your eyes, your Deltor has every step in pictures. You put your frock together in the same knowing way the expert did.

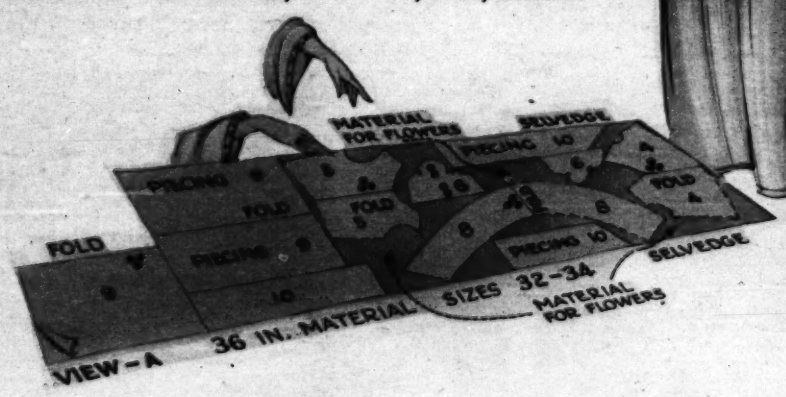
And you finish your dress with that delightful perfection you have loved in costly frocks. You no longer have to compromise because something is "too hard" for you. Whatever new fashion feature your dress calls for, the Deltor shows you how to handle it successfully.

Every bit of the Deltor applies specifically to just that particular garment on which you are working — it is really a complete, illustrated dressmaking course, for that particular garment.

When you buy a Butterick pattern you will find the Deltor in the envelope. Every new Butterick pattern (30c to 50c) now gives you this complete service. It is the greatest dressmaking help to women since the paper pattern itself.

Butterick, New York, Paris, London.

Design 3701—The fichu is seen again in Paris, and with the low waist-line, makes this frock very new.



Cutting the new way saved $7.58 on one dress

"I bought my material before my pattern and then when I got my pattern with the Deltor I found I had 1⅝ yards more material than I needed if I followed my Deltor cutting layout. Fortunately I was able to use the extra on another dress. So I saved $7.58, as my material cost $5.50 a yard," writes one enthusiastic woman.

The Deltor gives cutting layouts for every size the pattern comes in, laid out on every suitable width of material. They are made by cutting experts. You just select the picture of your size pattern laid out on the width material you are using, pin and cut accordingly. It saves you time and material.

You put your dress together like an expert

Every dress is easier to put together one certain way than it is any other way. This quick, sure way that a professional would handle its making is what the Deltor gives you. The pictures and directions are so clear, so explicit, that with the Deltor you can make clothes you never dared attempt before.

You give your dress a French perfection of finish

The Deltor shows you just how to trim and finish, in the material you are using, the particular fashion features of your dress. For every point the Deltor gives you an expert's decision and method. When your frock is done, everything about it is right, authentic.

Design 3637—The fabric trimming says very clearly that this frock is new. The Deltor shows you just how to make it.

Design 3601—A fabric flower accents the low waist-line and cascade draperies fall to an uneven hem line.

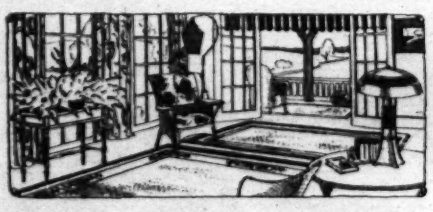
For with the first day of warm weather, what could be more charming to the eye, or more appropriate, than to replace warm winter rugs, and draperies, with cool, cheery, grass rugs and dainty cretonnes to harmonize."

In the Breakfast-Room a Waite Rug is simply charming

EVERY woman who seeks to improve the appearance of her home will want to know about the new Spring Style in home decoration. For, although an established practice east of the Alleghanies, little of its charm and beauty has been emphasized to us; nothing of its miraculous influence on the household.

As everybody knows, Spring is the season of change. For the first touch of warm weather brings Spring fever. Then all things that live—the birds and beasts, Mother Nature, you and yours—particularly the men folks—crave new surrounding. We welcome the charm of open doors and windows. And for the while we yearn for another clime, an other home, or the same home dressed in new and more appropriate clothing.



In the east, wise hostesses have learned to recognize Spring's magnetic power. Quickly and joyously they turn it to advantage. With the first hot breezes, warm wool, winter rugs and thick draperies are at once replaced by cool, cheery Waite Rugs and dainty cretonnes to harmonize. What a lovely transformation! What a tonic to the family! What a treat for your guests! For now the very spirit of Spring permeates the entire house.

Why not beautify your home this Spring? You can do it with no bother and almost no expense. The actual work of changing is delightful. For where is the housewife who is not constantly seeking to improve her home? And the cost is really nothing when you consider the saving in wear and tear on the more expensive furnishings temporarily removed. Then, imagine what a relief to weary eyes and what a balm to winter dispositions such a change will bring. Picture the delight and astonishment it will bring to the eyes of your guests.

Naturally, nothing but Waite Rugs would be appropriate in such a setting. For Waite Rugs are easily the finest rugs of their kind. They are made from genuine, American wire grass and must not be confused with any inferior, grotesquely designed, foreign imitations. Merely compare Waite Rugs with any other and the difference is plain. For not only are they designed by eminent Interior Decorators, but all style authorities recommend them. Besides, they are manufactured by the leaders in their line—American-made for American Homes and American Taste.

By invitation member of Surely, somewhere in your house is a room or few, deserving of summer clothing. The living-room, the sun-parlor, the sleeping-porch, perhaps. Or in your summer bungalow, what could be more charming than a complete expression of this vogue?

Where you find only the very best in summer furnishings, there also you will find Waite Rugs. So it will be easy to see for yourself how truly beautiful they are. Let your dealer suggest a complete Spring color-scheme and the newest designs in Waite Rugs and delicate cretonnes. With his experience and your good taste, selection will be easy.

The statue is the work of Charles Keck, who is shown standing beside the clay cast.

The most expensive way to buy floor coverings is to get a cheap rug now and have to replace it in a year or two with a "Bigelow-Hartford."

The inexpensive way is to buy the Bigelow-Hartford rug now. Then you won't have to buy any other for several years.

A large part of all Bigelow-Hartford rugs is bought on the name alone. And this is quite a logical, intelligent course to pursue in the purchase of rugs, because, for almost a century, quality has been paramount in the manufacture of these floor coverings.

The trade-mark is the buyer's protection. But there is no magic in the name—there is nothing in the name "Bigelow-Hartford" that isn't in the goods.

"Bigelow-Hartford" carpets and rugs can be obtained from almost any reputable dealer.

THAT'S the way a lot of boys are getting their Sheboygan De Lux Auto Speedsters now. Why can't you? Ask your Dad to buy this classy coaster for you and explain how you'll pay him back with the money you earn delivering packages or carrying papers after school.

Show him what a strong, well-built coaster the De Lux is. Point out its motor car features; double disc steel wheels, equipped with heat-treated roller bearings, over-size solid rubber tires, auto-type headlights, three-color Auto Gloss Enamel Finish, clinched nuts that can't come off. Tell him about the swivel steering handle and back-board cut to fit the leg. He'll soon be as enthusiastic as you are about the De Lux.

Sold by most hardware, furniture and department stores. If not on display in your neighborhood, phone or write for name of Sheboygan dealer nearest you.

RHINELANDER AIRTITE REFRIGERATOR

From 700 letters from those who are eating FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST

Doctors, mechanics, stenographers, housewives. Teachers, nurses, clergymen. Farmers, policemen, architects.

In all, men and women in 113 different occupations recently told their experiences with eating yeast for health.

THE reports came from all parts of the United States. Lawyers, artists, lumbermen wrote in. Housemaids and private secretaries. Dressmakers. Even a boxer told why he was eating Fleischmann's Yeast and what results he was getting.

Nearly 300 of those who wrote in were eating yeast to build up strength and vigor. 251 were freed from constipation by it. A great many others had digestion and appetite restored. Almost as many had been freed of pimples and boils.

Results were obtained often in less than one month. Many found the most solid improvement in from two to three months. A great many had grown to consider the little yeast cake a natural part of their daily food, and had already been eating it for over six months, some for a year or more.

"After using every known cathartic"

Hundreds of men and women depend day after day on cathartics. They are obliged to change from one kind of laxative to another. Here was a man who had used "every known cathartic" ever since he was eleven years old. At last he solved his problem. A simple food, Fleischmann's Yeast, eaten like

"Can now eat foods I haven't eaten for years"
"Have no more pimples and have gained four pounds"

cheese or butter, had stimulated the activity of the intestines and restored regular functions. Another who had been eating yeast for three months wrote, "Since eating Fleischmann's Yeast I have had no bowel trouble." A woman eating yeast for constipation and gas had "greatly benefitted" and also was delighted with the way her skin had cleared.

"A severe case of pimples"

Often men in apparent health are severely afflicted with pimples or boils. These may be due to the nature of their work, but most often they are signs that the vitality is being lowered. Often they come with constipation. Often with some not-understood digestive disturbance.

Both men and women suffering from boils or pimples—over a hundred men and over seventy women—reported rapid relief from these troubles through adding to their diet Fleischmann's Yeast, the food which is now known to correct the basic cause of these troubles. One man who had been eating Fleischmann's Yeast for over a month wrote, "I have no more pimples and have gained four pounds."

"Flu left me very weak and painfully thin—

Tried numerous remedies, even sent to Germany for serums, but to no avail. Took Fleischmann's Yeast and have greatly benefitted by it."

"Was too weak to walk, but since eating Fleischmann's Yeast am able to eat most anything, and have gained strength."

"Can now do all of my work without feeling tired."

"Has relieved and strengthened me."

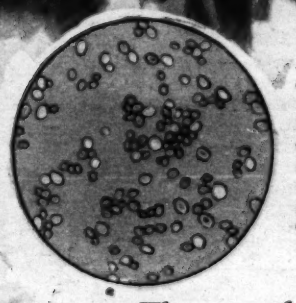
"Has made me full of energy."

"Now have the pep I need."

In cases of rundown condition—men and women—astonishingly quick response came after the addition of the health-stimulating Fleischmann's Yeast to the regular food. In some cases, improvement was noticed in less than one month.

"Dizziness disappeared"

The great problem for those suffering from indigestion is first to stimulate the appetite, and at the same time make it possible to digest the increased food the appetite demands. Almost all the men and women who wrote of having eaten Fleischmann's Yeast for indigestion noticed this peculiar benefit. Because the food elements in fresh yeast are so stimulating to the appetite and yet so digestible, they could eat more, and they got more benefit from the food they ate.



A cake of yeast consists of millions upon millions of tiny yeast cells pressed together—so small that a spot no bigger than the size of a pin point will hold 600 of them

The ways they liked to eat it best

Some of these men and women did not like the taste of yeast at first. Almost all grew to like it. Most people took it in water. A number liked it in milk. It tastes something like an egg-nog. Many of the men liked it plain. Women liked to make sandwiches with it, or they took it in fruit juices. Two or three liked it in ice cream. One took it in soup. Several liked it in coffee.

Add 2 or 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to your own daily diet and notice the difference.

Place a standing order with your grocer. 200,000 grocers carry Fleischmann's Yeast. If your grocer is not among them, write to the Fleischmann agency in your nearest city—they will supply you.

Send for free booklet telling what yeast can do for you. Use coupon, addressing THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, Dept. 000, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

Occlusia–

Banished now, in sixty minutes!

Discovery of a Skin Physic Gives Adults the Clear, Clean Complexion of a Child

SIXTY women in 100 have occlusia (occluded or clogged skin pores). People of scrupulous bodily cleanliness with facial pores swollen with waste matter. Not a pleasant condition to contemplate! Thanks to science it need no longer be tolerated. An element that purges every pore it touches has been found. An English scientist, M. J. McGowan, discovered it.

A magnified view of the human skin before and after a thorough movement of the pores would cause any dainty woman to write this specialist posthaste. If you saw just one of the fifty or more demonstrations I witnessed, you would realize the folly of any effort toward smooth skin texture and colorful complexion without first attending to this thorough cleansing underneath. It all happens in an hour. The newly-found skin laxative acts swiftly. The scientific term for it is Terradermalax. Its action is almost immediate; evacuation of every tiny opening in the skin structure is complete. Indescribable impurities are expelled—all matter—soft or hard—is passed by the pores. Skin is left relieved, relaxed, and glowing pink. The resultant natural color lasts for days.

Any skin specialist will tell you why every youngster's skin is downy-soft and fair—the pores do not become irregular except with years. Occlusia rarely sets in until one is of age. In other words, complexion at 50 can be as perfect as it was at 16 or 18 now that an unfailing aid to evacuation of pores is known.

Another important result from Terradermalax: it makes powdering perfectly harmless. The fine particles which work down into delicate facial pores are carried away with the rest.

Terradermalax is compounded in a clay of exquisite smoothness Spreading it starts laxation. Put it on face and neck—in a short hour wipe off—and behold a skin and compexion transformed. Clear and colorful to the eye; clean and wholesome beneath. Not a trace of occlusia remains, not a blackhead, pimple, or other unclean accumulation. I have seen positive proof of this at the laboratory where McGowan made his amazing discovery.

Stores cannot handle Terradermalax because the active ingredient is of limited life. The laboratory supplies enough for two months, shipped the day compounded, the label dated. The laboratory fee is only $2.50, and even this small sum may be had back if you are not delighted and astonished with results from but one application. You pay the postman when he brings your jar (unless you prefer to send it in advance). Use the handy form printed here:

IN · THE · WHITE · HOUSE

HERE IS A CLOSEUP OF THE BLUE ROOM, on its mantelpiece the clock which Napoleon Bonaparte gave to Lafayette and which the latter presented to Washington. It is more than 100 years old, but still keeps good time. In this room on New Year's day President Harding received more than 1,400 persons.

THIS IS THE FAMOUS EAST ROOM, where all of the White House receptions and balls are held. It is the scene of many notable and historic gatherings of official, diplomatic and social luminaries.

You cannot cut the cuticle without piercing through in places to the delicate nail root that lies only one-twelfth of an inch below the surface of the cuticle.

What causes hangnails?

You need never again have a raw, ragged cuticle

AUTHORITIES agree that hangnails are caused either by neglect or by wrong methods of care. If neglected, the cuticle will grow fast to the nail. As the nail pushes forward, the cuticle stretches until it can stretch no more. Then it splits—and you have a hangnail. Or, if you cut the cuticle with knife or scissors, you are likely to pierce through to the nail root and then you get the same result.

To prevent hangnails, therefore, you must constantly detach the cuticle from the nail—but you must do this without cutting or breaking it or you will have hangnails just as surely as if you neglected it.

This thin fold of scarf-skin is like the selvage edge of a piece of cloth. When it is cut or torn, the whole nail rim gradually ravels out. This is why you can never have smooth nail rims when you make a practice of cutting the cuticle.

Cutex Cuticle Remover will soften the cuticle, gently loosen it from the nail, and take off all hard, dry edges. If you will throw away your manicure scissors and begin to use Cutex regularly, you will never again have hangnails. Your very first trial will leave your nail rims smooth and even—however rough you may have made them by cutting.

Two new polishes to complete your manicure

Then for the gleaming luster that you want for your nails try the two new polishes that Cutex now offers you. Cutex Powder Polish is practically instantaneous. With just a few light strokes it gives you the highest, most lasting luster obtainable. Cutex Liquid Polish goes on with an absolutely uniform smoothness, dries instantly, and leaves a delightful luster that keeps its even brilliance for at least a week.

Cutex Sets in four sizes

To many thousands of people a Cutex Set is now an absolute toilet necessity. You can buy them in four sizes, the Compact Set at 60c, the Five-Minute Set at $1.00, the Traveling Set at $1.50, and the Boudoir Set at $3.00. Or each preparation can be had separately at 35c. At all drug and department stores in the United States and Canada.

Playing Against Odds

Alarming as the figures are, statistics show that four out of every five persons who reach the age of forty are afflicted with Pyorrhea. Unless you take proper care of your teeth the odds are four to one against you.

Are you willing to gamble with your health?

Pyorrhea is preventable. Your first duty to yourself is to go regularly to your dentist for teeth and gum inspection.

Then buy Forhan's For the Gums and use it every morning and night. The results will repay you greatly.

Pyorrhea begins its evil work by attacking the gums. If they are tender, if they bleed easily when brushed, take care! Those are Pyorrhea's symptoms.

If you neglect such warnings, you may pay with your health and with your teeth. For Pyorrhea's work is thorough. It loosens the teeth until they drop out or must be pulled, and it causes pus pockets at the roots, which distribute disease germs throughout the system.

If you are wise you will not gamble. Stop at your druggist's and get Forhan's For the Gums today. Use it just as you would use any other dentifrice. It keeps the teeth clean and white and the gums healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's—How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment.

35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

The little joke thrown in to lighten the serious side of things in the illustrated travel talk. Prof. Cress, assistant librarian of the Alsop Memorial institute, is doing the travel talking. It is about "The Rubber Gatherers of the Lower Orinoco and Their Quaint Haunts." Prof. Cress will inject a bit of homely humor now and then. He will insist on telling about how they were accosted by three natives while camping along the Tipsytoe river, who were the innocent cause of much joking on the part of members of the Cress outfit. "What," one of the party asked, "do you think of prohibition?" Quick as a wink the leader of the natives answered in the native lingo, "Hotsy Totsy wee wee," which translated means "bum." "So it would seem," Prof. Cress concludes, "that the joke was on us and not the natives."

The lady who thought it would be such a pity to waste the ticket listening to a little talk on "Constructive Idealism Among the Ancient Hindoo Poets."

Four perfectly enthralled ladies drinking in every word—nearly every word—of an address on "American Leaders of Political Thought of Today and Yesterday." The determined lady on the extreme left applauds loudly whenever Mr. Woodrow Wilson's name is mentioned. Whereupon the earnest lady seated between the two sleepy listeners will completely lose the drift of everything for the next few minutes trying to stare the determined lady out of countenance.

THE GOLD ONE
by Samuel Merwin

Shadows from the Past of a Great Fortune Flit Before Its Grim, Unbending Possessor.

STEPHENS was gray now on the sides of his head and wholly bald on top. During forty dramatic years he had served the Battles, father and son. He remembered when the house in Washington Square was bought and remodeled; a pleasantly old fashioned mansion with white window trim let into a facing of brick of the old pale red that was not to be seen anywhere along the newer residence streets uptown. And he remembered the mist of pale green foliage that softened and touched with mystery the old Square sometimes in late April and sometimes in early May.

Once—that would be the year of the blizzard—the trees had not burgeoned until after the middle of May. He had taken personal charge of the moving into the first of the Fifth avenue houses (that was a hideous brownstone front) and had been homesick there for years. But the change into the second Fifth avenue house, far uptown here opposite Central Park, had not been so trying. The fact of a larger staff of servants supported and soothed him, and he was quietly proud of the wide stairway with its railing of white marble carved into delicate tracery. He liked the elevators, too. Nothing, for that matter, seemed so trying during these later years. Failing animal heat, perhaps.

John Battle had died in this great house, as had young Mrs. Robert. But not before the flag of the Battle Shipping and Trading company had made itself known from Singapore and Batavia to Barbadoes and Pernambuco.

He opened the door softly; then hesitated. It was a delicate matter. Young Mr. Robert, once he had drawn the big leather chair around to the fire and opened his brief case and spread out that impressive array of business documents, preferred not to be disturbed. It was during these long solitary evenings that he got his real work done. He often said that. To Stephens there could have been but one Mr. Battle. This one, though upwards of fifty now, would always seem to be young Mr. Robert. He leaned slightly forward, as he always had done when speaking to one of the family, and clasped his hands before him.

"Beg pardon, sir, but young Mr. Adrian would like to speak with you, sir."

Mr. Robert gravely lifted his head.

"You understand, Stephens——"

"I quite understand, sir. But the young gentleman seemed very determined—even excited, sir—and although I——"

"Did you make it plain to him that——"

"Quite plain, sir. But I could hardly venture on discipline, sir."

rate things was covered in auties.

Mr. Robert considered the matter.

"I will not see him, Stephens," he remarked, finally; and resumed his work.

"Very good, sir."

But young Mr. Adrian burst into the room. In years he might have been twenty-five or six, very slender, with an erect carriage and a sensitive face that was flushed now.

"This is my last request of you, father!" cried the young man. "God knows I wouldn't come near you, if—I'm in terrible trouble—a thing has happened that——"

The words were tumbling in confusion over a thick tongue. Mr. Robert appeared to settle in his chair, almost to sigh. Stephens now, or perhaps a moment later, slipped quietly from the room.

"You have been drinking again."

"That's untrue!"

"Careful what you say!" Mr. Robert's nearly square, very solid face, with its roughly blocked-in shadows was taking on a not unfamiliar severity.

"I haven't had a drop for three days. This much you've got to understand—you've got to! I'm not here on the usual errand. I'm through, too! Get that straight! But a rotten emergency has come up. I'd made arrangements to leave this country day after tomorrow."

"O, you had!"

"But the hotel people have got after me——"

"Naturally."

"O, not just that." The young man's face twitched; there was anger in his eyes, a savage pride, never under control, now ablaze. "Not the old nagging. They've brought"—his voice broke into falsetto—"brought a criminal action against me."

"I confess I don't see how this concerns me."

Adrian swore, under his breath.

"O, I know I'm talking to a man without a heart—hard as nails."

"This is sheer waste of time, Adrian. There's no good in your coming here, against my wishes, to indulge yourself in personal abuse. Yours is a strange sort of egotism, not attractive."

"I didn't choose my blood or breeding!" The young man bit this sentence off sharply, walked a little way down the room; then more quietly, back. "This much I have to tell you to make it clear—I've engaged to sail Thursday on one of the Isthmus and Pacific tramps as supercargo. Understand, I've got the job!"

"Because of my name, I presume."

Adrian seemed physically to swallow this. Then resumed—"I've cut loose from all these rotten associations here. I'm starting fresh. A new footing. But these dirty hotel people have got me trapped. I can't turn around—can't stir. They're going to jail me."

"What did happen at that hotel?" the father asked, coldly curious.

The boy drew a long breath; threw back his shoulders. "I was paying five hundred and sixty a week for that apartment."

"Hum!"

"O, you can twist everything I say to put me in wrong. But I'm going to say it. You brought me up. You never gave me any idea of the value of money. I've got to find all that out for myself now. I ran weeks behind with them. Went broke. And one night a friend helped me carry my trunk and things down the fire escape. We were drunk. It seemed amusing then."

"The present idea, I take it, is that I should pay the hotel in order that you may start off on your cruise."

"That's what it comes to. I'm helpless Will you do it?"

"Certainly not."

"Well, then, by——"

"Spare me the profanity, please! No, wait a moment! Sit down. That chair—where I can see you. Let's see whether you've learned to listen a little. That would be an excellent beginning of your new life. Just to learn to listen."

With twitching face, after a bitter moment of indecision, Adrian dropped into the chair.

"I am fifty-one years old, Adrian."

The boy stirred restlessly; but then settled into quiet.

"For thirty-five years, man and boy, I have worked, first in a spirit of gratitude to my father for giving me so great an opportunity, later to help him develop the business, and finally to extend and establish it on the solid basis you see today. I married when I was two years younger than your present age, and gave my strength devotedly to my family. That's the kind of man I've been!

"If I am successful today, and if you find yourself in a position to play extravagantly and run up these heavy debts, it is because of the name I have built. You have behaved abominably. You have attracted to yourself a low lived lot of spongers, leeches. They've bled you. Naturally. And they'll never let you go. That sort sticks. You have disgraced yourself and me, after all I've done for you."

He paused. Adrian, his head drooping a little forward, was studying him with moody eyes.

"I'm wondering a little"—thus the young man—"if that's really an accurate picture of your life you were painting. It isn't a very human picture."

"I haven't asked for your comment."

"O, I was just wondering. It's undoubtedly the way it looks to you now. All you care to remember of it. Industry, thrift, perseverance, all that. Puzzles me a little, though, that I should be such a bad lot while you were so perfect. Same blood and all."

The telephone rang. One of them. The other was a private line to the office. Mr. Robert answered, crisply; and his face set firmly as he listened.

"It's Frank Hildreth, Bob. That person has been after me all day. Yes—that one. I finally let her get through to me. It's a queer case. Sorry to disturb you at such a time, but there's an unexpected turn. I really think you'd better let me bring her over. Yes—O, in half an hour. I don't want to go into it on the phone."

Mr. Robert turned sternly on his son.

"You'd better go now. I have no more time for you."

"To jail, eh!"

"You made your bed. Lie in it."

Adrian rose, fumbled for a moment with an upholstered button on the arm of the chair, and then walked abruptly out and closed the door.

Ghosts of the Past.

A MINUTE passed, and another! Then Mr. Robert rose, heavily, and pressed the button beside the mantel.

"Did Mr. Adrian go out, Stephens?"

"He did, sir."

"Mr. Hildreth will be coming soon with—a lady. Show them right up. That is all."

"Thank you, sir."

He sank down into the chair, lifted a paper only to lay it down again. He felt tired; which was disturbing.

He lighted a cigar, and rested his head, and thoughtfully smoked. He had gone the limit with Adrian. Any fair minded man would agree to that. For the boy's own good. The men he knew, the big men, who directed railways and banks and vast manufacturing and shipping interests, didn't tire. They were strong men, with hard clear heads, who could work all day and play poker all night, and drink when it came to drinking and smoke continuously without a hint of nerves. Trouble appeared to be that the boy was weak. Really weak; not just in the narrow moral sense; seemed unable to give and take hard blows. You had to stand up to that, of course, or go under.

Take his own case now; it had been a consistent career; always the same sort of thing; always the vigorous, forthcoming Robert Battie; sort of man you could never have made a mistake about; square, clean cut. Over that hot unpleasant conclusion, he nodded deliberately. A consistent life. O, a few contradictory incidents; dim, half forgotten episodes; sidings here and there, yes, but always a main track to it.

But why was Frank Hildreth bringing up that particular dim episode? A ghost that had been laid long ago. And what unexpected turn could there be?

His cigar was burned down to his fingers. He lighted another, vaguely deciding to smoke more deliberately. No sense in behaving like a nervous boy.

He had been absolutely right in his attitude toward Adrian. Firmness.

"It's rather puzzling, sir," Stephens was saying. "He claims to be a friend of yours, sir, 'Pal' was the word he used. The name is Mullane, Tim Mullane, sir."

"I have no memory of such a person, Stephens. Tim Mullane—hmm! I've already been rather seriously disturbed this evening."

"I know, sir. And while I might not be quite equal to it alone, it occurred to me that Williams and I together might be able to put him out. Williams is watching him now, sir."

"O, if it should come to that, I'll take charge of the matter myself."

"Thank you, sir. Will you step downstairs, sir?"

"No, just a whim. Show him up, Stephens."

"But really, sir, if I might suggest—thank you, sir."

A little man stood in the doorway; wizened of countenance, furtive of eye, a compact figure with legs slightly bowed and clad in a wrinkled suit that had been once, perhaps, in earlier and smarter years, a light colored fabric of the pattern known as a pin check. He held an old green cap rolled up in a wiry hand.

"Well, Bob!" he cried, in a dry voice, "and how do you feel about it now. O, you've put it across. You're rich and you're respectable. And I'm a bum, now. Just a bum! That's the luck of it. I had my chance, all right. But you stood in the way. You weren't taking chances, you weren't! It was sure things for you, every crack."

Swarming dim memories! Eager men crowding the rail down at Sheepshead! A little knot of horses, streaming like flowing silk along a fast track, with the dust hanging yellow behind! Jockeys in orange and green and crimson and pink and white and blue and scarlet, sticking like monkeys to desperately reaching necks; whip arms working like eccentric piston rods, and fat women with coppery hair screaming like the peacocks they were, and hungry-eyed men jostling and cheering!

Who was the slender young fellow who stood quietly looking on, glasses in hand, cold except for the fire in his eyes and a slightly heightened color?

"Many's the time I've watched you ride by in your damn' limousine! O, I've thought of ways to get at you! I knew the day would come! I've been hungry—I've polished park benches by the month—I've been up for vagrancy and I've been up for drunk and disorderly and knocking a cop's front teeth down his throat! O, I've been up! And all the while I knew."

"Knew what, Tim? What's all this stuff, anyway!"

"Don't you try to bluff me down! I've got you cornered now, Bob. I've been waiting for this minute. I had to wait for Honey Hillstrom, too. Four years I waited for him. Then I got him. It's taken longer with you. And there was the lucky years when I didn't take it so hard. But I got Honey. I beat him most to death. I broke his jaw, I did, with that fist. That one. See it? And look—I took this off him. No, I'll hold it. It's the ring the old King give him for winning the Derby. I took it for my own satisfaction. And I've kept it. It's never been around the corner—not that ring. Even lately, with all hell loose on me, I've hung on to it."

"Sit down and talk quietly, Tim, or I'll ring for the servants."

"Ring for who! Old Whiskers? Or young Pop-eyes? O, you give me the Willies, you do! Think I come up here to sit down? Have a cup of tea, eh what, old dear?"

"Of course, you've me, in a way. But you can't——"

"Now, listen! You can't throw me off. I tell you, I know! I got the whole story straight."

"What story?"

"You just listen! Henry Isbell—that turns your color down some, eh?—Henry told me. Now do you think you can bluff me down?"

"He told me! I know! You can roll that up in your cigarette and smoke it till you're blue. You and I were pals. Needn't tell me you've forgotten that. No? All right! All right! Now listen! There wasn't any two thieves thicker than you and me that year. No! Every day at the track, wasn't it? With me telling you all you ever learned about horses. And I played straight. I told you all I knew, and all I could find out.

"You bet your hundreds and thousands and I bet my tens and twenties and fifties. And we were winning, weren't we though! And then I passed you that tip on Daisy Bell. Go ahead and cover up your eyes! Wouldn't I, if I was you? Cover up—that's the game! Daisy Bell was sure to win. They'd held her back all season.

"O, you haven't forgotten Honey pulled her in the Brooklyn handicap—you know! And she ran last by ten lengths in the Aqueduct Prize. And old Mills and Honey out with her at night cutting a whole second off the mile and a furlong. You know! Mills worked the odds up to fourteen to one. I had it straight. It meant a clean fortune. And I let you in on it. Why? You were my pal. We were playing it together, just you and me. Told you all I knew. Told you that old Mills had folded up a thousand dollar bill, just even, and tore it in two halves, and give Honey one of 'em and told him he could have the other after he'd won the race. You know! And you never told me you'd bought Louisiana Lou."

"But Tim, bless your old heart, how could—it's hazy to me, just as I was——"

"Listen! You'd bought Louisiana Lou. And what did you do?" The rather high voice of the compact little man cracked here, but he pressed hotly on. "Knowing everything. Knowing I'd hocked everything and borrowed from my sister—put every cent I could scrape together, every cent I stood for in the world, eight hundred dollars—and standing to win eleven thousand two hundred. As good as in my pocket. And you my pal. And me slipping everything I knew to you. And what did you do?"

"Tim, I tell you I won't——"

"What did you do? Answer me that? Here? Now? Can't do it? Have to swallow, do you? Well, then, I'll tell you. You sent Henry Isbell to Honey and promised him five thousand to pull Daisy. And didn't he pull her? And you won with your Louisiana Lou! And I lost! I was broke—done—just a cheap skate bum. And you hated me because you'd done me dirt. That's the way it goes, you know, Bob. And then what more? Were you on the level with Honey? Were you? Humph! See, I'm laughing. I'm just laughing. You dirty skunk! O, you skunk! Wait till I get through laughing, and I'll tell you the rest of it. Listen! You crossed Honey. You wouldn't give up a cent until he'd sent word by Henry he was going to stick a knife into you—risking his whole career like that!—and then you give up two thousand. Just two thousand! And that's why you're rich, of course. That's the sort o' stuff rich men are made of."

"That's a lie! I sent him twenty-five hundred."

"Then Henry Isbell took the five hundred. And still you crossed Honey. You know, after I'd beat him up, and took this of which there were electric light and electric power.

Edna Wrench, daughter of Eldorado, child of its busy life, keen observer of its work and prosperity, set little value on conventions and social sanctions. She understood the realities and the great simplicities of life. Instinctively she sought out what she wanted and did what she thought right. She set her own values on things, not other people's. She had her own views. People had told her that Lambert was a fine and clever man. She had found out for herself—the contrary. Once sure that she was right, she never hesitated but acted.

But no one told her to do the extraordinary thing she did that night immediately after Lambert had gone forever out of her life. She did it on a superb impulse of her own.

Immediately the idea came to her she drew back from it. Then she reaccepted it and, doing so, smiled.

She went to the open window where Lambert had been sitting and looked out over Eldorado.

"Why not?" she asked herself.

And she stood there, her face transfigured. There was suddenly a glory of happiness in her eyes, and she looked even at the chair in which Lambert had been sitting with contempt. She made her decision.

"I will do it," she said aloud to the silence. "Why not? It would be horrible if the life blood of Eldorado were stopped."

In a few minutes she had left the house empty behind her, the key under the outside door mat for her parents on their return. She did not know it, but she had also left behind her life as she had known it since she was a child. She was rushing forward on a splendid impulse, to a moment in her life which she knew she would never forget. But she was acting on a motive in obeying which a woman seldom errs.

The Fourth Choice.

"AND that is why you have come up and told me all this. It is an extraordinary reason."

The speaker was Richard Clavering, the person addressed was Edna Wrench, and the scene was the library of the great house on the hillside overlooking Eldorado, which Peter Clavering had built.

"Why should it be—extraordinary?"

"It is an extraordinary reason for a girl to give."

"If there were this strike, all the life of Eldorado would be brought to a standstill."

"Undoubtedly."

"The business we should lose would go elsewhere. Eldorado would suffer."

"I like you for that 'we.' I like to think that I and the works and Eldorado are all one."

"Well, we are."

"Yes. But the fashion is to think we are not."

And Dick looked with admiration at this girl of the people who had come straight to him to warn him of the coming strike because she loved Eldorado.

"You were going to marry Lambert?"

"Yes, we were engaged."

"And that is why he told you?"

"Yes. He boasted about it. He sought to gain credit in my eyes by showing me he represents as great a power as you."

"He does. Perhaps a greater."

"The power to destroy cannot be greater than the power to build up."

He looked at her keenly. Was she sincere? Abruptly he asked her a strange question.

"And would you have come like this—if it had not been I?"

She did not answer. He waited. But still she did not answer.

"Answer me!" he commanded.

He could command. Though he spoke so quietly, though he looked so young and so little like the great employer of labor he was, he could speak with the accent of authority.

"Perhaps I should not have come if I had not known you," she said at last. "I did not know, of course, whether you would see me or whether, if you did, you would remember me."

"You wronged me there. I am more surprised that you remember me. It is four years now since I met you that holiday spell at Lake View Falls. A great deal has happened since then. Our going into the war. My going over. My return. My going back to Europe. My father's death while I was away. Your love affair with Lambert. And it was only a summer flirtation at Lake View Falls. But I remember every bit of it. I remember the clothes you wore. I remember your little ways of speech, your little tricks of gesture. You haven't altered except that you have grown a little older. How we talked in those days when you were just a pretty girl, ready and willing to enjoy a summer flirtation, and I was an irresponsible boy excited with my first love affair."

"So I've found your temper at last! You'd hit me if you dared."

He was smiling.

"Yes," she said. "I remember."

"You may not think it," he said deliberately, "but I have never forgotten you."

She made a little movement with her hands as if warding off something of which she was afraid.

"Obviously," she said, "I had forgotten you by the time Lambert came to me—wanting me."

"That is not obvious. It may be true. But it is not obvious."

"You know I said I should forget," she protested hurriedly. "When we parted I told you I should forget quickly. You were Dick Clavering and I was a girl whose father worked for yours. I told you that I had thought it a bit of fun—love making with Dick Clavering! It was a bit of fun. I set myself to forget."

"And you failed."

"How dare you say that?" she cried, angry and desperate.

"You failed so dismally," he continued mercilessly, "that when that gasbag, Lambert, came along you took him in to help you."

She turned toward him speechless, and she met a light in his eyes which seemed impossible.

"What makes you think that?" she stammered.

"Your coming to me as you have done tonight."

"I was a fool to come," she said, turning away. "I did so on the spur of the impulse. I never thought what I was doing."

"No. You only thought of me. You hated and despised the man Lambert, whom you had found out for yourself to be what he is. And when he showed he was set upon ruining me, it was too much for you. You came straight to me—to warn me. I think I am a fortunate and lucky man."

"O, don't," she protested. "Be kind now, as you always have been."

Her voice was brimful of her misery. She was pleading.

"Then it is as I imagined it was," he said quietly.

"O, don't be cruel," she entreated. "You know it isn't possible—that it's absurd—more absurd now than it ever was!"

"I am my own master today," he said, "if that's what you mean. I have no one to ask. I am free to do what I like. And if I choose to ask you to marry me, I will do so."

"Stop!" she cried. "This is not a joke for me. I shall never marry."

"Yes, you will. You will marry me."

He spoke with finality.

"It's impossible—totally impossible. You would make yourself a laughing stock."

"I'll take the risk," he said. "But it's not impossible. I'll tell you why, if you——"

"It is impossible," she interrupted. "I am a girl. I know things you do not know. You cut deeper than I knew four years ago. But marriage is impossible between you and me."

"Then tell me you do not love me," he commanded.

He waited. She tried to answer and failed.

"It's strange to both of us," he began in his quiet, level voice, in a tone which held her in a vise, "but you and I have never succeeded in forgetting each other. Only a few hours ago I broke off my engagement with this girl here."

He picked up a silver framed photograph of Caroline Verhagen and handed it to her.

"She is beautiful. She is clever. She attracted me, in a way, just as Lambert attracted you, in a way. She helped to make a man of me, just as Lambert helped to make a woman of you. She opened my eyes, just as he opened your eyes. I found her out not to be just about all I knew you to be. You found out Lambert not to be what you had grown fond of in me. And when I found out that she despised and hated Eldorado, it was the last straw. I let her see I could not marry her. Then you came. It was like a miracle. For you are not ashamed of Eldorado and neither am I."

She seemed to be hearing the boy who had made love to her years ago.

"But if you married me, you might be ashamed of me—and that—from you—would break my heart."

So low was her voice he could only just hear her.

"I have not told you all yet. I am a young man in a great position. I want help. In a sense I have a kingdom here in Eldorado. I love my people and I want them to love me. There's trouble ahead here in Eldorado. I want to win through. I want to carry on what my grandfather started and my father continued. I want to make Eldorado richer and richer still. When I was in Europe I was not traveling for pleasure. I was traveling for orders. I got them. I can give Eldorado prosperity greater than it has ever known, if I'm allowed. But I want help. I want you to come and stand beside me in the fight."

She had buried her face in her hands.

"I had my choice to make," he went on. "I chose you. You have your choice to make. You are afraid to choose me, though your heart tells you to. Don't be afraid, girl. Don't be afraid, queen of my heart. The gulf between my class in life and your class in life is not a gulf between you and me. In my choice I have chosen the best. In your choice you have really done the same. Strength goes to strength. O, my dear—don't cry like that, as if your heart would break."

He went and knelt beside her.

For a long time he held her in his arms and there was silence between them, a silence only broken by the hoot of a river steamer busy at work and the clang of some giant hammer in one of the workshops down at the works.

Then at last Edna spoke.

"If you really want me," she said, "I am altogether yours."

little souvenir off o' him, and he was sitting there on the curbstone—it was late one night on East Fifteenth street, just back of Tammany Hall—sitting there holding his jaw and whimpering and spilling the whole story—you know, I could almost 'a' felt sorry for Honey. The poor little crook. Caught again, and down and out, after all his big years! Off the track in New York State and in England! Just a tout! Just a cheap little track buzzard!"

"You can't blame me for that. It was business. Diamond cut diamond. He was as able to look out for himself as——"

"O, listen! Do you know what I'm going to do to you? Right here, in your lovely room with all the pretty books and pictures around——?"

"Tainted Money."

A VOICE was heard—a gentle voice, even deferential.

"If I'm not disturbing you, Bob."

In the doorway stood a bald man with tortoise rimmed spectacles, who carried a heavy parcel.

"O," murmured Mr. Robert, glancing uneasily toward Tim, who had planted himself under the Sargent portrait of John Battie—"O, of course not! Come in, if you like."

"Thanks, I will." He advanced, not without hesitation, to the table, and set down the parcel. "Well Bob, it's finished." And he smiled happily, as he removed the spectacles, breathed on them, and wiped them with a handkerchief that was worn through here and there but was clean. "After all these years!"

"What's finished? O, the book?"

"Four volumes of it. My life, Bob; all my best years. I've worked for it. No one will ever know."

"Let's see—it was——"

"Bob! You can't have forgotten, after the great enthusiasm we shared. Those nights we walked the campus arguing it out! And the time you got so excited you went to your father and told him you would never touch a cent of his money. It was asking too much of you, of course—to stick to that boyish attitude. You couldn't go back and undo all that early wrong. Besides, we know now, you and I, that it's no solution. And without your help, in the earlier years, I never could have got it under way at all.

"American Fortunes," mused Mr. Robert. "Is that still the title?"

"Yes, and it's amazing how our boyish theories have stood the test. The more I dwell on that aspect of the thing the more deeply I feel for youth—for the amazing perception of the young, their gift of abstract justice.

"Youth? Yes, of course. Of course! And the theory works out? Let me see, it was—it was——"

"In every instance, Bob, the facts support us. Every great fortune—every one—is founded on evil, usually on crime. In the building of every one there were moments—crises, you understand—when only a criminal act of some nature could save the thing.

"The purchase of a legislature or a judge, robbing a vault of records or evidence, even violence against an individual. And social crimes—debauching the Indians, enticing Negroes to labor with liquor and drugs, dynamiting a factory and fastening the evidence on labor leaders. Such devices as spies and agents provocateurs are the merest commonplaces, like corrupt newspaper propaganda, all that."

"You look happy, Arthur, in spite of——"

"Because I've done the work I love. Money is nothing, you know, Bob."

"In a way——"

"What gay young socialists we were!"

"The debate with the state university fellows, Arthur?"

"How you spoke that night, Bob! Sophomoric, yes; but you had seen the evil of money as none of the rest of us had. You knew. Every word had the ring of the true metal. But I never could quite share your enthusiasm for Henry George. Now whatever they may say about Karl Marx——"

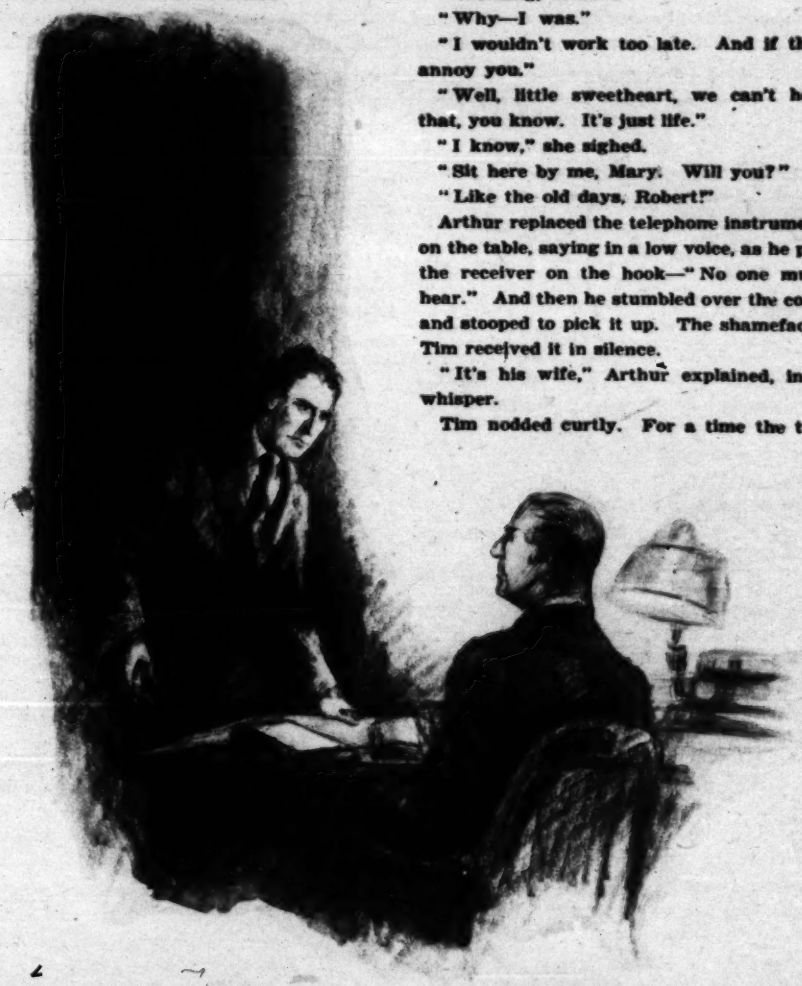
"A good brain, Arthur, but blighted by logic. There is no sadder death for a brain. Logic——"

"But fundamentally, and you can't get around it, if logic isn't——"

"There never was a scheme of actual life that could be encompassed within a structure of purely logical thought! Why is England great, even yet? Because she never bothers to be logical! She's for limited monarchy in Britain, absolutism in Arabia, democracy in Australia; she's for monogamy in Britain, polygamy in the Orient, polyandry in Tibet. Germany was for logic, first, last, and always; and now look at the damn thing!"

"But why isn't your single tax stuff logical?"

"Because it's only a premise. It leaves the development to history. Now your socialists start with a conclusion!"



"This is my last request of you, father."

"Great stuff! Give me a cigaret, Bob. Thanks. This is the old days! We're sophomores!"

"But your book, here, Arthur. Let's have a look at it. What do you say about father?"

"Only the truth. I knew you wouldn't mind that. And only the truth about you."

At this Tim turned and marched down on them.

"The truth, eh! Did you tell the truth about what he done to me?"

"Why, really, in so far as the most exhaustive research could——"

Tim banged the table with an iron fist.

"I tell you he robbed me, and he lied to me! He broke me, that's what he did! Ran me into the ground! And I've bided my time—watched my chance. It's come now! I've got him where I want him!" His voice had risen to a shrill pitch. "See—he's white! He can't do a thing—just stare at me! Because he's a coward! I tell you I've got him!"

With astonishing celerity he tore off his coat and rushed around the table so violently that one of the telephone instruments fell clattering to the floor.

Arthur, himself white with amazement, and with the fear of the gentle man to whom violence is painful, intercepted him, crying:

"You shall not say these things! You shall not strike my friend!"

They wrestled together, the wiry little Tim and the taller but less muscular Arthur. The effort of it distorted their faces. They were breathing heavily. Sweat gathered in beads on their foreheads and ran down into their eyes.

Mr. Robert, also, was breathing heavily, and struggling, oddly, in his chair.

"As soon as I can get out of here, Arthur—" he muttered.

A door creaked faintly, in the dim corner beyond the fireplace, and a slender woman moved easily over the threshold.

"I thought I heard voices," she murmured and paused. "Is there some one here with you?"

Her voice quieted the man in the chair. And his eyes softened as they rested on her fresh skin that exhibited hardly a wrinkle beneath the graying hair.

"No, dear," he replied—"I'm just sitting here alone."

"Working, Robert."

"Why—I was."

"I wouldn't work too late. And if they annoy you."

"Well, little sweetheart, we can't help that, you know. It's just life."

"I know," she sighed.

"Sit here by me, Mary. Will you?"

"Like the old days, Robert!"

Arthur replaced the telephone instrument on the table, saying in a low voice, as he put the receiver on the hook—"No one must hear." And then he stumbled over the coat, and stooped to pick it up. The shamefaced Tim received it in silence.

"It's his wife," Arthur explained, in a whisper.

Tim nodded curtly. For a time the two men stood near a window, looking at the silent couple before the fire.

"I confess to a sense of intrusion," said Arthur. "Of course, she knows me, in a way."

"You wouldn't say she knew me?"

"Almost certainly. All the threads in the fabric of his life. In twenty-three years of marriage a woman, an unselfish woman, traces them all out. Nothing can escape, if she is fairly observant."

"Why don't she say something about us, then?"

Arthur compressed his sensitive lips and slowly, very thoughfully, shook his head. "She would spare him. You heard him tell her that he was alone."

"Umhuh. And I didn't get it. Say, it's queer—a couple o' minutes ago you and me was scrapping. And now look at us!"

"That is because she came in, of course."

"I hadn't thought o' that. Look—they're holding hands! Why can't I stay mad?"

"It would be difficult."

Mary's fingers tightened on Robert's.

He glanced up and smiled wearily; but as his gaze followed hers to the further side of the room the faint smile faded.

A girl sat there stiffly against the wall in an armless chair. She wore a plain suit of serge, with a simply embroidered white shirtwaist, a plain straw hat, and little slippers planted side by side before her that had very high heels.

"Robert," Mary's voice was hardly more than a breath, "I didn't mean to look."

"How could you help it, dear? There——" it was difficult for him to speak—"there she is." And he added, brokenly—"things I had thought I had forgotten."

Over by the window Arthur murmured: "There are so many threads in a life! Threads of so many colors!"

Tim looked up at him with the quick suspicion of the rough man of limited understanding; then his weatherbeaten face contracted into a puzzled frown.

"Mary," Robert could make himself heard now only with the greatest effort, "it's the way you change that bewilders you."

"I know, dear."

"The people I've been—that's what's so hard to understand."

"She was very pretty, Robert."

"Very. And natural as a wood fairy."

"Yes, I can see that. It was—it was before I—before we were——"

"O, my dearest, yes."

"I know. Of course, I always sensed her. I wondered sometimes what she could have been like. After all, Robert, we didn't make so bad a job of it. You never flinched. I like the way you fought. It stirred me; excited me. It held me to my part of it. I felt so useless, often."

"It was your spirit that stirred me, sweet."

"I think a great deal about this curious business of living. Often it is hard to keep from rushing to this one and that, and telling them. I see so clearly now the cruelty of instructing them wrongly. Life is so primitive."

"So savagely primitive!" muttered Arthur, unheard by all save the scowling Tim.

"And they should know more of the truth. We don't arm them for the struggle. We didn't arm Adrian for it, Robert. What was her name?"

"I don't know, dear."

"What has become of her?"

"I don't know."

Mary sighed.

Nina the Dancer.

STEPHENS opened the door hurriedly. "Beg pardon, sir," he began breathlessly. "It's quite my fault, sir—I should have gone against your instructions, sir—used my judgment."

He was brushed aside by a young woman who was enveloped in a sable wrap; a vivid, glowing person, with a face that was boldly beautiful, though shadowy under the strikingly wide hat; striding into the room.

Frank Hildreth followed; thin, thoughtful, keen; worried now; speaking sternly after her——

"I must warn you to be reasonable—to control yourself."

But she stood over Robert Battie, staring down in angry contempt.

Tim nudged Arthur. "What's become of his wife? She ain't sitting there any more."

"No. Look over against the wall! She just stepped aside."

"But she's standing right by that other one!"

"Queer. Yes, though she would."

"They're holding hands now! Am I going out o' my head? Tell me, old sport! Do you see what I see?"

"Yes. It's perfectly natural."

"Natural? But, good God! It's got me all unsettled. I'm forgetting what I come up here to do."

"That is good."

They could hear Robert asking—in that uneven voice, as if he were choking a little——

"What do you want, Nina?"

"You know what I want!" cried the woman. "O, you've evaded me! You've dodged and lied! I've been tricked around by that man, your jackal—the king's jackal—" She was pointing at Frank Hildreth. "No, I will not be quiet! I'm

Mr. Robert considered the matter.

"I will not see him, Stephens," he remarked, finally; and resumed his work.

"Very good, sir."

But young Mr. Adrian burst into the room. In years he might have been twenty-five or six, very slender, with an erect carriage and a sensitive face that was flushed now.

"This is my last request of you, father!" cried the young man. "God knows I ment of indecision, Adrian dropped into the chair.

"I am fifty-one years old, Adrian."

The boy started restlessly; but then settled into quiet.

"For thirty-five years, man and boy, I have worked, first in a spirit of gratitude to my father for giving me so great an opportunity, later to help him develop the business, and finally to extend and establish it

"Sit down and talk quietly, Tim, or I'll ring for the servants."

"Ring for who! Old Whitaker? Or young Pop-eyes? O, you give me the Willies, you do! Think I come up here to sit down? Have a cup of tea, eh what, old dear?"

"Of course, you've me, in a way. But you can't——"

"Now, listen! You can't throw me off. I tell you, I know! I got the whole story have made a mistake about; square, clean cut. Over that not unpleasant conclusion, he nodded deliberately. A consistent life. O, a few contradictory incidents; dim, half forgotten episodes; siddings here and there, yes, but always a main track to it.

But why was Frank Hildreth bringing up that particular dim episode? A ghost that had been laid long ago. And what unexpected turn could there be?

THE GOLD ONE

through with that—through with being fooled—I'm going to tell all New York now!"

"Who is she?" asked Tim, shrewdly studying the tensely beautiful figure, the blazingly beautiful face, the exquisitely dramatic hands that gave added meaning to every word she uttered.

"It's Nina Bernice, the dancer."

"You don't say! Why, I've seen her—up to the New Amsterdam. Some class, I'll——"

"Be still! Now's the time he needs his friends. We may have to go over there."

"Not me. I'm no friend o' his."

"Ssh!"

Robert was struggling in that odd way in his chair; trying to rise, plainly.

"You know what I want!" Nina Bernice was crying. "Just one million dollars! Put it to my credit at the bank tomorrow morning, and you've sealed my lips! Fail me, and I'll sell these letters to the yellowest newspaper in New York." She waved a packet. "I may go down, but if I do, you'll go with me!"

"You are a common adventuress," said Frank Hildreth sternly.

"When I want a lawyer's opinion, I buy it," she retorted.

"You are disturbing him at a time when the entire business fabric hangs on the name and character of five men, of whom Robert Battle is one. Pushing your miserable claim when there is hardly a solvent bank in New York."

"Look!" muttered Tim, catching at Arthur's elbow. "His wife!"

Mary had wandered from the side of the nameless girl and was moving slowly, gropingly, about the room with hands outstretched.

"She's saying something!"

"Ssh!"

They watched and listened; faintly they caught these words——

"Robert—I'm trying to find you, Robert. It's growing very dark."

One of the telephones rang.

Tim started, and again caught at Arthur's elbow. "That thing like to 'a' scared me to death!"

"This tension is very great, of course. But keep still. See—he's answering the phone! He—yes—he's getting out of the chair!"

Frank Hildreth turned again on Nina Bernice.

"Mr. Battle will pay you a quarter of a million now—tonight."

"A round million!"

"Yes—yes—yes!" This was Robert, standing squarely, solidly by the table, the telephone instrument in his hands. "Frank, the executor of the Williams estate is dumping eleven thousand shares of Battle Shipping on the market tomorrow morning. Quick, get Harvey Deane on the other phone! Right there! Main two-two-four-eleven!"

Hildreth gave in the number; then pressed the transmitter against his shoulder. "Bob," he asked, low, crisply—"what did Battle Shipping close at tonight?"

"Down sixteen points," replied Robert grimly.

"Everything else is way off, of course. There's no market. You can't buy that stuff in, not possibly."

"Certainly I can!"

"In God's name, how?"

"Sell everything I own personally. Take the loss. There's that much market. And I can mortgage this house before noon."

"But your standing? Your credit?"

"We're past all that. International Worsted went under this afternoon."

"No! Why, I thought——"

"They're gone. We're not sure yet about the Upmann banks; they may go tomorrow."

"Tomorrow—Good God! Here's Deane now!"

"Tell him." Robert was the master now; his square frame seemed to tower heroically above a surge of panic stricken lesser folk, as the orders came snapping from his firm lips.

"It's the deflation," Arthur explained to Tim. "The war prices have cracked. I never saw one of these big men under fire before. And he's a big one! Take my word for it, they'll never lick him!"

"I never saw this side of him, myself," mused Tim.

Nina Bernice tapped the floor impatiently.

"Well," she queried, "how about me?"

"You?" During one brief moment Robert considered her. "You are nothing. You may talk or keep silent. You may stay or go."

She stared; but he was busy again. Then she came rushing over to Arthur and Tim.

"Did you hear what he said to me?" she gasped.

Arthur sensitively, but firmly, averted his face. But Tim cried, hotly: "You're in all wrong, sister? You'd better just fade out!"

"He'll hear from me!" she cried.

"Silence there!" called Frank Hildreth.

"Very well, I'll go. But he'll hear from me. There's one thread that'll never break. Never!"

"The scarlet thread always breaks," said Arthur, facing her now.

She moved irresolutely toward the door.

It was Tim who cried out so sharply that all turned; and then all rushed to the corner, where he knelt by the inert figure of Mary. And then Robert held her shoulders and head in his arms while tears fell from his bewildered eyes. And through the hush they could hear the throaty sound of a voice still speaking in the telephone.

Standing in the doorway, Nina Bernice laughed.

"He has heard from me," she said, harshly. "I've killed all he ever had of her."

And directly back of her, in the shadow, Stephens was wringing his hands and saying over and over: "Perhaps I've gone too far! Perhaps I've gone too far!"

The Letters.

A VOICE was repeating monotonously: "Beg pardon, sir. Beg pardon, sir."

Why, it was Stephens! Standing respectfully there before the fireplace. A calm Stephens. Robert watched his hands. They were clasped before him, as he had always clasped them when addressing one of the family.

"It's Mr. Hildreth, sir. And the—the lady."

"—why—I've been asleep, Stephens."

"You've had a little nap, yes, sir. Shall I show them up, sir? Mr. Hildreth seemed to expect that I would."

"Why—yes, Stephens."

"Thank you, sir."

Left alone for a moment, Robert glanced uncomfortably about the big room. It was empty. The Sargent portrait of John Battle stared firmly out of the shadows.

They were coming up the stairs. With a nervous start that was unlike Robert, as it would have been unlike John before him, he got to his feet and awaited them; a big, solid figure of a man, standing before the mantel.

Frank ushered her in with a touch of ceremony. Curious! And curious, as well, that she should wear a simple suit and a plain straw hat, though there was nothing cheap about her. Nina Bernice had the gift of smartness. Most curious, she smiled—sensitively, uncertainly.

She carried a small parcel; he saw that. The letters, of course! And a book bound in leather.

He indicated chairs.

She took that one by the wall; sat very still, with her little feet together.

Robert found his voice; heard himself asking rather harshly (just as he would have asked such a question at the office on a busy day):

"Well, what's this all about?"

The two others exchanged a glance. Why, he asked himself. Was Frank, by any chance, not playing fair?

Deliberately, then, with her slender pretty fingers, she untied the string and opened the parcel. Sure enough, there were the letters!

"I brought these," she began.

He interrupted with—"Well, how much do you want for them?"

At this sharp attack she seemed to sink a little way into the chair. But after a moment she resolutely straightened her shoulders.

"Come—out with it! If we've got to talk business, let's talk business! I've got to compete with a yellow newspaper, I presume!"

"Bob," Hildreth cut in, "you really mustn't bully Miss Bernice!"

And, after a silence, she said, in a low voice: "It's been a pretty hard thing to do, coming here. But it seemed the best way. First I want to give you these letters. As nearly as I can tell they are all here. Of course, if there should be any more, I'll send them to you. And I'm turning over all the other things to Mr. Hildreth in the morning."

"Miss Bernice is going to be married," Hildreth explained, clumsily.

"O!" This from Robert.

"I thought you might have noticed my ring," she went on. He saw it now; a platinum band, set with emeralds and a diamond.

"You're going to be married?"

"Yes. I shall leave the stage. I have not felt happy about the past, but I shall simply have to make the best of that. I have found a new philosophy," glancing down at the leather bound book, "that has changed the whole course of my life."

"But there are colored threads," Robert heard himself saying, and stopped short.

"Of course. In every life. I understand that. Certain different threads." She smiled, shyly, as a child sometimes smiles and her eyes glistened. "But I am going ahead on a new footing. Marriage is a job, I imagine. Probably a pretty difficult job. I'm going to try to make good at it, that's all I can say. I know, at least, now that the only happiness lies in giving up absolutely. I am doing that. Gladly: I hope to have children."

The wistful smile flitted again across the delicately pretty face.

"That's all I can say—I'm going to try to make good at it. And the first thing was to clear this"—she indicated the letters—"all up. I couldn't leave it to any one else to do."

Her voice faltered. She glanced over toward Hildreth; moved as if to rise from the chair; hesitated; then did get up.

"I think," she murmured, "if you don't mind, I'll go now."

She was moving toward the door, when Robert intercepted her, with outstretched hand.

"So you have found a philosophy!" he said.

"Ye-es!" Her voice was a whisper.

"In that book?"

She nodded.

"Peace? You've found peace?"

This time she nodded brightly, strongly.

"I wish," he mused, "I could find peace."

"You can! Will you let me send you this book?"

He slowly shook his head; slowly but with a returning firmness.

"No, Nina. No. But I envy you your fine simplicity."

"It comes down to faith," said she.

"Yes. That's it. It comes down to faith. Some sort. Faith in something or other. I'm afraid my faith has been only in myself." His voice softened, and his eyes filled. "But I wish you, Nina, every, every happiness. I'm sure you'll make good!"

He released her hand.

"Frank," he said, turning abruptly, "have you any idea where I could find Adrian, get in touch with him somehow?"

"I think he's right downstairs, Bob."

"Downstairs!"

"He came up the front steps just as we did."

"Weakened? I wonder." He caught himself. "Frank, the first thing in the morning please settle Adrian's trouble with that hotel."

"You'll pay it, Bob?"

"Yes. And one other matter. Better make a note of this. There's an old race track tout named Tim Mullane. Was a jockey once. The detective people can find him, somewhere between Canada and Mexico. He'd be where there are horses, if he's alive. I owe him eleven thousand two hundred dollars. Find him and pay it. Good night."

The Sway of Shadows.

HE rang as they crossed the threshold. To Stephens he said, shortly: "Why did Mr. Adrian come back?"

"As a favor to me, sir."

"As a favor——"

"I'm so sorry, sir! I hope I haven't overreached myself—gone too far, sir. But I felt very bad over his trouble, and I didn't know but what we servants might be able to make up a——"

"Ask Mr. Adrian if he will see me again. Now."

The boy seemed to have aged. His complexion was nearly gray; and there were deep circles under his eyes.

"I appreciate what you're doing," he began.

"O, you——"

"Mr. Hildreth was just telling me."

"I realize that I was in the wrong."

There was a long silence.

"Shall you still be considering that voyage?"

The young man nodded.

"Why?"

"O—discipline. A real job. And a complete change. Got a big fight ahead of me. May as well start all fresh."

"Would you mind changing over from the Isthmus and Pacific line to one of our ships?"

"Better not. The other's more impersonal. I've been going through a hell of an evening. Guess I'm changing—fast. But I seem to see my way clearly enough now."

"Can I do anything for you before you sail? A little money——"

"No, thanks. Start clean."

"Well, good luck!"

"O, I'll look you up again to say goodby. Good night now."

"Good night."

Robert was a long time on his knees before the fireplace, reading and burning those old letters. The task finally done, he rang for Stephens. After a wait he rang again. His knees were stiff with pain. For the third time he rang.

There was a shuffling sound in the hall. Then Stephens appeared, in a nightgown and a knitted blue nightcap, his bony feet thrust into carpet slippers. He was rubbing heavy eyes.

"Stephens!"

"Yes, sir."

"You needn't bother to put the flowers in Mrs. Battle's room in the morning. I'll do it myself."

"Thank you, sir. That be all, sir?"

"That's all."

It was three in the morning. Robert sat on the edge of his bed balancing one shoe in an unsteady hand, wondering about faith.

of which there were electric light and electric power.

Edna Wrench, daughter of Eldorado, child of its busy life, keen observer of its work and prosperity, set little value on conventions and social sanctions. She understood the realities and the great simplicities of life. Instinctively she sought out what little like the great employer of labor he was, he could speak with the accent of authority.

"Perhaps I should not have come if I had not known you," she said at last. "I did not know, of course, whether you would see me or whether, if you did, you would remember me."

"You know I said I should forget," she protested hurriedly. "When we parted I told you I should forget quickly. You were Dick Clavering and I was a girl whose father worked for yours. I told you that I had the night it a bit of fun—love making with Dick Clavering. It was a bit of fun. I set myself to forget."

know it isn't possible—that it's absurd—more absurd now than it ever was!"

"I am my own master today," he said. "If that's what you mean. I have no one to ask. I am free to do what I like. And if I choose to ask you to marry me, I will do so."

The DOUBLE CHOICE

by Edward Cecil

Two Strong Souls Struggling with the Tempest; Two Last Kisses Spurned; Then—the Great Surprise.

THE town lay in a valley, a valley defiled by man. There was a coal field and there was a river; a rich, dependable coal field and a broad, navigable river. But the coal field and the river had not caused the town. That town of Eldorado would never have existed had there not also been iron in the hills on each side of the valley. It was the three things together—the coal, the iron, and the broad, navigable river for cheap transport—which had spelt wealth, and it was that potential, well nigh certain wealth which accounted for the birth of the town of Eldorado, which had grown and flourished exceedingly.

Peter Clavering, the grandfather of that immensely rich young man Richard Clavering, emigrated from the North of England to America years ago because he was looking for wealth. He came from Northumberland, where there were coal, and iron, and a river. But there wealth could never be his. He wanted a new country, a country where there were no such things as vested interests. That is why he emigrated to America, with really little more knowledge in his head than that iron, coal, and river transport could spell wealth.

When Peter Clavering first set foot in the valley which is now Eldorado there was only a mining village called Nazareth, so named by the Puritan piety of some early settler. There was only just one tentatively burrowing for the hidden wealth of coal. It was Peter Clavering, who saw that the whole valley must be full of wealth. In those days the valley was full of wild, natural beauty.

He came to the valley — with Tyneside in his thoughts. He walked about the hills. He was looking for something. He had just a hope that he might find iron. He went back to New York and returned with a geologist. He had found it. He had got the third thing. Then he made the decision which set the seal of doom upon the wild, natural beauty of the valley, and today there is the great Nazareth Iron and Steel works and the big town of Eldorado, quaintly so named by old Peter Clavering himself.

What a hideous valley it is today, blackened, smoke grimed, torn, and scarred. Even the river is no longer unsullied. And all this defilement is the handiwork of man. It all sprang from the brain of one man. It spells wealth. Wealth with a capital "W." There is nothing beautiful about the valley now, as artists and sentimentalists judge beauty. Where there once was open country there are now congested streets and tenement houses. Where there once was the silence of nature and God, broken only by the cry of the river fowl or the scream of some animal preyed upon by some beast stronger than itself, there are now the multitudinous noises of a busy town. And the inhumanity of man to man succeeds the preying of the strong upon the weak.

The First Choice.

"YOU are worried, darling?"

Caroline Verhagen, the beautiful, the exquisite, the adorable, leaned on the balustrade of the terrace before the big Clavering house, where she was staying with her future mother-in-law, overlooking Eldorado, and cast a puzzled glance sideways at Richard Clavering. She was puzzled because it was so utterly foolish for Dick to be worried. She disliked his habit of being serious and thoughtful. If he must be serious and thoughtful, let him be so in business only. He was, of course, a great employer of labor. But in her company she expected him to forget everything which did not appertain to the world of their own private life. And in that life there was no reason for worry.

"Yes, I am worried," he answered. "My father imported that marble balustrade you are leaning on from Venice. But he did not import the Venetian climate. You could lean on it in Venice, but not here. There are smuts in the air of Eldorado. They settle on everything. This town of mine is a dirty place. Eldorado may be a city of gold, but it is also a city of smoke and dirt."

She bit her lip. He did not take her seriously. And she took him—and his wealth—quite seriously, indeed. But that phrase "this town of mine" pleased her. If he were king of Eldorado, she was going to be queen. And, after all, once one was married, one need not live in Eldorado. And, furthermore, Dick was a young man, and a young man married is much what his wife makes him. She, therefore, smiled. She could well afford to be indifferent to the cost of an evening frock spoiled.

"It is the city of my king," said Caroline Verhagen, dreamily gazing over the night darkened valley and following on the other side of the river the journey of an electric street car, brilliantly lighted.

She was really estimating the worth of the evening frock she was ruining. She had never liked it. It was, therefore, quite easy to be magnificently indifferent. Dick Clavering, being young, was thrilled. Caroline Verhagen was famous for her beauty. And she called him her king.

"And you think of me," he said, "as your king."

"Yes, as my king, and—as king of Eldorado."

She waved her hand over the dirty, smoke grimed town in its gloomy, man defiled valley, and there was in her voice the faintest indication of contempt and even loathing. It was faintly perceptible. It would not have been noticed except by a keen ear. But it was there, like microscopic dregs of poison left behind to tell their tale when every effort has been made to conceal that there is or has been poison at all. But Dick Clavering detected it.

Now, Dick Clavering was a man who deceived the eye. He looked what he was. He acted and lived what he was. He was what he was. He was a wealthy man and, owing to the death of his father, he was in absolute control of his wealth. And he was young. He was only just thirty. He seemed, therefore, both an easy prey and a most desirable capture. But it so happened that he was not merely what he looked. He was also the grandson of his grandfather; and the man in whose brain, when he was a mere youngster wandering to find wealth, the town of Eldorado was born, lived again in the young man who inherited the full maturity of the wealth which his grandfather had founded. He looked what he was, a wealthy man, hovering between youth and immature sagacity, the most dangerous time in a man's life. But he knew his danger, and though he was stamped by Harvard and polished by a European tour, though he was a tall, good looking man, well groomed and well-turned out in every detail from the tips of his patent leather shoes to the parting of his well brushed hair, he was not what he looked. He was not what Caroline Verhagen judged him to be. He was not merely the polished product of wealth in the form of his father's son. He was an acute, keenly observant man, endowed with the same originality of thought and independence of outlook which had sent his grandfather an emigrant to America and enabled him when he got there to found the town of Eldorado.

"I suppose it is as king of Eldorado that I appeal to you as your king," he said, smiling.

"You are laughing at me!" she protested, moving nearer to him so that her beautiful bare shoulder touched his arm.

"Am I?" he asked.

They had suddenly challenged each other, and the blood of Julius Verhagen, the New York stock broker, rose in the veins of his daughter and inspired her.

"A king may laugh at his queen," she said, "when he knows she lives only to smooth the wrinkles of care from his brow. I will teach you to forget your cares of state in your kingdom of smuts and grime."

"By living with me, year in, year out, here in Eldorado?"

He was reading her as if she were an open book.

She had appealed to him with the soft lure and enticement of her beauty as her father, the cosmopolitan, would have told her to appeal, and he answered her with a practical question. She fell into the trap.

"You could not expect me to live here! We could live somewhere near. But not actually here."

"I intend to live actually here. An absentee king would be on a par with an absentee Irish landlord."

"I know nothing about Ireland," she said.

"You could not be expected to know anything about any country," he said quietly. But there was a curious quality of finality in his voice.

And she knew in that moment that she was rejected definitely and forever. For she had no country. Though she was legally an American, her blood was the blood of a people scattered over the earth with no country of their own.

"I would have made you a good wife," she said proudly. "You and I would go far in the world."

"You only offer me what I can always buy," he said. "You look upon Eldorado as a bottomless bag of gold out of which we could take handfuls of money whenever we needed them. It may seem strange, but I am fond of Eldorado."

"And you have been fond of me," she whispered, remembering kisses invited and won—and responded to.

"I could be still, in the way I have been."

He was remorseless.

"Why not?"

He smiled.

"Let's part friends," he said. "Make any excuse you like for our broken engagement. Don't spare me. Blame me. I'll not contradict. But you and I can't marry. There would be no real marriage. The life you want is not the life I want. There would just be a fierce bonfire of passion and then nothing at all to keep us together. There is nothing in our being tied together. You want all the things my money can buy. I want all the things my money can't buy. We are different, though we look so much the same. I am sorry I see so clearly. Good-by. Let's part friends."

He held out his hand.

For a moment she hesitated. She had lost a great opportunity. She was rejected. She might have flamed up in her pride. But there was something in Dick Clavering which quelled her. He was so quiet and yet so strong and resolute. And it was so evidently manifest that he pitied her. He did not despise her. He had indeed paid tribute to her beauty. But he saw beyond. And it was the consciousness that he did so which frightened her. She was sufficiently clever to capitulate gracefully.

"So it's all over between us," she said.

"Yes. I belong to Eldorado. You never could."

"No," she said. "I never could."

They said nothing more. They just stood there together looking down over the valley—a hive of human life wrapped in the night of darkness. To the man it meant everything, that smoke grimed valley, its blast furnaces and workshops, its crowded human life, its hidden wealth of coal and iron, its splendid capital of human valor and endurance which turned its hidden wealth into the products of civilization. To the woman it meant little or nothing. It might have meant a gold mine. But now it meant practically nothing at all.

They stood there together silent, the one understanding, the other not understanding at all.

"A last kiss," said the woman suddenly.

He did not hesitate. He turned on her abruptly, almost savagely.

"No," he said. "Enough of that. This valley I love does not love me. I've come back and found that out. Don't try to drug my senses."

She looked at him, scared.

Then she slipped away and left him alone, and for a long time he stood there looking down the valley he loved and completely forgetting Caroline Verhagen, who had so nearly succeeded in making herself his wife.

The Second Choice.

AT the moment when Caroline Verhagen was giving instructions to her maid to pack her trunks and dress baskets for her immediate return to New York, Edna Wrench was asking John Lambert what he meant by internationalism.

"I mean the brotherhood of man," said Lambert, "and all which that involves."

Edna Wrench paused in drying the supper plates she had been washing and reflected.

"And that means that any one man is as good as any other man, I suppose," she said.

She was a clear thinking and clever girl. She was tall and good looking, white skinned and black haired. She had much to give to any man to whom she chose to give it. She was supposed to be going to give all a girl can give to Lambert. He pestered her to do so, and her parents said he was a man worth marrying. He was the best known leader of the workers in Eldorado, a fitter in the Nazareth workshops, and a well read, self-educated man who might go far.

"It means that every man deserves an equal opportunity," he said.

He was sitting in front of an open window, smoking a cigar and enjoying the night air after the heat and labor of the day.

"You are a good hand at talking," Edna observed. "Why don't you come and help dry the dishes? We could then be done the quicker and we might get in an hour or so at the movies."

"I don't want the movies tonight, girl! I want to talk to you."

Lambert was in some ways an attractive man. He was well built and fluent of tongue. He had a masterful manner. He was sure of himself, and he was sure of the future of the world—for labor. He saw a swift and speedy end for capital. He saw himself and Edna some day high up in the world—in the new world he and those who thought with him would bring about.

"Talk away," said Edna. "I'm listening."

"We're going to strike," he said. "No one knows it as yet. But I tell it you. Since your future is bound up in mine, you've a right to know. We're going to strike. Not today or tomorrow—but soon."

"For what?" she demanded.

"For part ownership of the Nazareth Iron and Steel Works!"

"Part fiddlesticks!" said Edna.

shoulder to shoulder with Dr. Humphreys, and looking powerful pleased as he whispered, "That's exactly what I want them to do—to call off their men from Florida."

Still the doctor did not comprehend, but shook his head while Clayton kept saying, "It's all right! It's all right. After the marshals go I'll tell you about it. Now get Maj. Stark. I can't spare another minute."

The hellos and bragging at the phone had stopped, and the major's cane now went thumping along the hallway to the front. The constables were leaving, and Nat didn't want to miss any part of the performance. To be sure of seeing everything, he rushed out front and got hopelessly jumbled in his mind inspection of the man who looked like Mr. Clayton, sitting on the same rear seat, while Mr. Foxyjaw was thanking the major and bidding him good night.

Just to show his disgust, old Stark kept his back turned to the car, and if those constables had the wrong prisoner nobody could hold him responsible for not detecting the error. He never once glanced at the man. No such misgivings, however, entered the happy mind of Mr. Foxyjaw; the prisoner fitted his description to a Tee, and dozens of colored people identified him. On the strength of this Mr. Foxyjaw kept grinning more than a weasel ought to grin as he settled himself in the car, waved farewell, and rolled away. Then Miss Barbara sank down on the steps, looking powerful low in her mind, and watched the disappearing auto. Maj. Stark seemed glad to wash this dirt off his hands, and was about to go inside when Nat remembered to say:

"O, major, I nigh forgot. Dr. Humphreys say please come to his room right away, suh—right away."

"Very good," the major answered gruffly, and turned into the hallway, while Nat made private arrangements for a reconnaisance at the doctor's window to watch the fur fly when Stark met Clayton. He had already started, when Miss Barbara got in his way and asked him:

"O, Uncle Nat, why did they arrest Mr. Clayton?"

"Sh! Missy," the Negro edged nearer and whispered, "Don't make no holler. But dey ain't never 'rested him. Dat ain't Mister Stuart."

"What! It is he. The officer said so. I recognized his hat and clothes."

"Egzactly, missy, egzactly. Dey done 'rested some breeches like his'n; but dem ain't Mister Stuart's legs what's in dem breeches."

"Are you crazy, Nat? I saw him."

"All right, I'll show him to you agin. Come wid me."

The dusk was rapidly becoming night, with little danger of their being seen, when Nat beckoned for Miss Barbara to follow, and ran stooping around the gallery to the side steps. The doctor's door was still closed, but his light showed through the open window.

"Now, den, Miss Barbara," the excited Negro paused and pointed cautiously. "Jes sneak easy, mighty easy, up to dat window an' see who you see."

When Stark Meets Clayton.

So promptly had they arrived that Barbara was already tiptoeing up the steps before her father's stiff legged tread had come to a halt at the inner door to Dr. Humphreys' room. Silently as a shadow the girl passed along the gallery and crouched beneath the window. Even before she lifted her head, Barbara recognized the same vibrant voice which once had said to her, "I know who can be—Mrs. Stuart Clayton." Now he was speaking steadily to Dr. Humphreys:

"Be patient, doctor, I'll tell you both together, when Maj. Stark comes in."

The girl's ears scarcely needed the corroboration of her eyes to be assured that this was the man whom she had met at the lake. Then who could it be that the marshals were carrying away? She had no time to speculate about him, for she heard her father knock and call. "Matt, did you send for me?"

"Yes." The physician unlocked his door. "Come in."

The rotund major entered, and for the first time since their memorable duel a Clayton and a Stark confronted each other—Clayton being a stranger of whose business the Stark had no information. So the major merely bowed to recognize the presence of an unknown visitor, and waited for whatever Dr. Humphreys might say.

A sudden tightening clutched at Barbara's throat. She saw that her father was passionately angry, without guessing the reason for his wrath, that a scoundrel had dared make advances to a married woman beneath his roof. It burned within him to think that such insolence had gone unpunished, but he did not connect this infamy with the request from Dr. Humphreys. Neither did the innocent old doctor harbor a suspicion that Bob Clayton's son had been guilty of writing love notes to Mrs. Razilly. Being absorbed in his plan of pacification, he failed to observe the major's warlike mood, when by locking the solid door into the hallway he suggested the privacy of what he meant to communicate.

"Dynamite."

Not since he was eleven years old had Stuart Clayton come beneath this roof at Bennington; yet hurried and impatient though he was, he betrayed no hint of awkwardness as he waited while Dr. Humphreys considered how best to handle his dynamite. The doctor did not handle it at all; he merely touched off his charge, and flung it down with a bang.

"Ken, this young gentleman is Stuart Clayton."

"Clayton! Clayton! Preposterous!" the major exploded. "Why, Matt, the United States marshal has just left this house with Clayton in handcuffs—where he ought to be."

A thrill shot through Barbara as she saw the young man wince, like a thoroughbred flicked by the unaccustomed lash. He flushed and rose straighter as he spoke:

"I beg your pardon, Maj. Stark, but I am Stuart Clayton."

The two men faced each other across the table with a lamp between. Outside it was growing densely dark, and Barbara knelt at the window as her father derided the stranger's pretensions.

"You are not Clayton."

The interview took such a peculiar turn that Dr. Humphreys did not know how to proceed with his peace making, when old Nat's bushy head thrust itself through the window, and the Negro yelled:

"Yas, he is, major! Yas, he is! Show 'im yo' scar, Mister Stuart. Dat proves it."

Although startled by Nat's unexpected appearance, Clayton smiled and rolled up his sleeve, displaying on the right forearm the identification which Maj. Stark could not deny—a ragged bullet hole. Well did Stark remember that night in camp when he himself had sat for hours holding this uncomplaining child until a surgeon could arrive and dress his wound. This was what he remembered, and the agony of its suspense yet twiched at his lips; but he turned savagely to the window and said:

"Here, Nat! Get away from there! Get away!"

"Suttinly, suh. I'm gone, suh."

Beyond all question Nat was gone, raising more racket than a drove of mules as he scrambled down the steps; then stole back immediately to resume his position beside the noiseless Barbara.

Within the room young Clayton was readjusting his sleeve, while old Stark glowered upon him, and Dr. Humphreys asked:

"Ken, do you admit now that this is Stuart Clayton?"

"Nothing to be proud of," the major snapped.

"Then go ahead, Stuart," his impatient friend insisted, "and tell us who was that other man in the automobile?"

After a momentary hesitation Clayton glanced from one to the other and inquired: "Gentlemen, have I your word not to repeat what I say?"

Both men nodded, while the crouching and breathless Barbara could scarcely credit what she heard.

"I came here from Salamanca on a matter of life and death," Clayton began simply; "which makes it imperative for me to return."

Dr. Humphreys nodded approval, while the younger man continued:

"I could not risk being detained, but the secret service made every effort to stop me."

"Then you were dodging the officers?" Maj. Stark burst out.

"Yes, major," Clayton shamelessly confessed. "And to be sure of giving them the slip, I brought a comrade named Rafael Quixada, who resembles me so much that we are frequently mistaken for each other. It was Rafe who suggested the stratagem of letting the marshals arrest him, and leave me free to do our work. None of the tenants had seen me since I was a child, so Rafe and I came to Marmion at night, where Bart Scurry exhibited him, dressed according to the official description of myself, and gave it out that Mr. Clayton had come home."

"Dere now, Miss Barbara," Nat grunted at the window. "I tole you so. Rafe's de feller what flung dat dollar."

"Sh! Listen!" She silenced him as Clayton went on.

"We planned that our Negroes should identify Rafe whenever the officers came for me, and that's probably what happened an hour ago. You heard the marshal call off his agents, and I must now reach Salamanca before they discover that Rafe is the wrong man."

The incredulous planter and the country physician stared at each other, amazed by the success of such an audacious scheme. On the gallery outside Barbara choked her exclamation, but Maj. Stark let his astonishment break loose.

"What? You tricked the United States government and substituted another man in your place?"

"I did."

"And the officers arrested your proxy?"

"Perfectly true. Other men's lives hang upon my freedom. Rafe may spend a few weeks in jail, and get well paid for it."

It was Article One, Section One of Stark's constitution to detest all forms of subterfuge; and with Razilly's wrongs festering in his mind the major glared straight at Clayton, ready to believe that a man who intrigued with a married woman would be guilty of other abominable offenses. He was in his most cantankerous temper, not inclined to fall upon Clayton's neck and wipe out their ancient animosity. Blue fire glittered from the angry planter's eyes, and met its answering flash as Clayton controlled himself and turned to go.

"Wait, Stuart, wait," the doctor begged.

"No, doctor. I'm sorry, but we cannot go through with it."

"Go through with what?" old Stark demanded.

"A personal affair," explained Dr. Humphreys, "that we expected to discuss with you."

"What affair?" The major braced himself belligerently and made it plain that he preferred to discuss nothing whatever with a Clayton.

"Speak lower, Ken," the doctor warned him. "Nobody must suspect that Mr. Clayton is in your house."

"How did he get into my house?"

Every line in Clayton's face grew harsh with resentment, yet he ignored the major's tone and extended his hand to Dr. Humphreys.

"Good-by, old friend; my horse is waiting and I must go."

For Yandell's Sake.

His mention of the stockingfoot caused Uncle Nat to move nearer and whisper, "Miss Barbara, he ain't got no hoss. Dat stockin'foot done broke loose an' gone home."

The girl shook him off and paid no attention, for Maj. Stark seemed to be getting madder as he spoke.

"Let the fellow go, Matt. Let him go before I say something." The top of his bald head grew redder and he was struggling hard to hold his wrath, but Dr. Humphreys never noticed that, for he persisted:

"I've brought Mr. Clayton here to tell you about Tom Yandell."

"Tom Yandell? Tom Yandell? What the devil has he got to do with this mess? Young man, is that all you can say for yourself?"

Angry as Clayton was, and hurried, he turned back from the door. This was his opportunity through Maj. Stark to justify himself in the eyes of Adelaide.

"Major," he glanced at his watch and spoke in a rush. "You remember Col. Thomas B. Yandell?"

"Remember Tom Yandell? I should say I do. One night when we were holding the line in front of Richmond, old Tom says to me——"

The ex-confederate would have talked for hours if Clayton had not stopped him.

"I have no time, sir. Please don't interrupt. Listen."

"Dammit, I am listening."

Neither friend nor enemy, blue nor gray, had ever dared break into one of the major's reminiscences. From sheer stupefaction he dropped to the edge of a chair, with both hands crossed over the head of his cane, while Stuart Clayton stood before him, the dark face flushed and black eyes glittering as he told of Yandell, the soldier, the gentleman, the builder—the benefactor of his father and himself, who did marvelous things in a big way, until the Vulture of Salamanca wanted to confiscate his fortune.

The eager Dr. Humphreys leaned forward and uttered no sound for fear of checking the swift hot flow of Clayton's words. The boy seemed to grow even taller with indignation at the wrongs of Col. Yandell, who had been abducted from a public café and now lay in a dungeon at El Jucaro, looking for his friends to return with arms and rescue him.

Never had Barbara heard such a tale. Motionless, she knelt and hung entranced upon Clayton's vivid descriptions, as he denounced the tyranny that he meant to destroy.

"And by God's grace, Maj. Stark," the lad finished, "I must get him out of there. That's why I'm dodging about these woods. That's why I tricked my government. Good night, sir."

No storms of passion, nor blood lust, nor greed of gold ever came to ruffle their placid lives at Bennington. Sometimes Barbara read of such faraway fictions in lands of cloak and dagger, but never believed. As one who marvels at a prodigy, she heard every syllable of Clayton's swift narration. Things like that were now happening in the world; he had seen them; he was of them; he had his part to play.

Anxiously the girl's eyes shifted to her father, and the major's expression astounded her. He could only think of one thing at a time; that note to Mrs. Razilly must be got out of his head before anything else could get in, and from the moment he knew this to be Stuart Clayton, Maj. Stark conceived of but a single affair to be discussed. Now he raised himself to a methematical perpendicular and halted Clayton on his way to the door.

"I knew I should surprise you."

"You do."

She was laconic. Her lip curled.

"Of course it will be a long fight," he said. "But wealth is only created by labor. Labor has a right to the wealth it creates."

"Yes," said Edna, "it will be a long fight and a thin time for Eldorado."

"But it is necessary. It will end in our sharing the wealth we create."

Now it so happened that Edna was well versed in the theories of Marxian socialism. All the isms which Lambert believed in were familiar to her. He frequently complimented her on her intelligence in being able to follow his arguments and explanations. He was everlastingly educating her. He was greatly flattered because she was always willing to learn. He would have been less flattered had he known that she was willing to learn about his theories because in learning about them from his lips she was learning about him.

"I think I've heard all that before," she said.

"I've always done my best," he answered "to teach you the truth."

"Yes, I know. How you cannot sow seed till you have first plowed up the ground; how all wealth is created by manual labor; how capital lives on labor, and how the blood and toil of the workers make the money the idle rich spend on pleasure. I suppose it's all true, since you say it is."

She was rather tired of it all. Talk and theories, theories and talk—what did they all lead to in practice?

"That's right, Edna," said Lambert. "You are going to be my wife, so you must believe what I say."

"I am not your wife yet," she said sharply, so sharply that Lambert twisted his cigar from one corner of his mouth to the other.

"It will not be long now," he said. "We'll get the strike over first and then, my girl, we'll have plenty of money to marry on."

"O," she said, "you are going to make money out of the strike."

He did not like the way she said this.

"Of course," he said. "The wealth we've created is rightly ours."

"It's an easy way to make money," she said, "—to take it."

She stood there drying her hands. She was smiling, but Lambert did not altogether like her smile.

And what she said next he liked still less.

"And I've often noticed," she said, "that those who talk most work least. What they can't earn with their brains they try to earn with their tongues."

"Meaning," said Lambert, rising slowly to his feet, "me!"

"If the cap fits you can wear it."

She was dangerously provoking. She was deliberately insulting a man who was full up with pride and self-satisfaction. And she knew it. She was in the mood to take an opportunity she had long sought. Her color rose and she looked adorable, her fine dark eyes keenly watching, her lips just curved in a smile.

Lambert's anger rose slowly. He did not speak, but his whole body grew taut with rage. It almost seemed as if he would spring upon her.

"Take care," he said at last; "take care."

She laughed outright.

"So I've found your temper at last. You'd hit me if you dared. You are full of conceit, as full of conceit as you are of talk."

He took a sudden step forward, so that he stood right up against her. She did not flinch.

"Do you mean that you want to throw me over?" he demanded. "You must be mad. I'm the next most powerful man in Eldorado to Richard Clavering."

"I am glad you say the next," she observed calmly.

"It won't be that for long. We are going to break that young man with this strike."

"I reckon," she said, "he'll take a lot of breaking. From all I hear he's getting much liked, except by those who are afraid of him. He's fond of Eldorado, I hear, and he wants to make Eldorado prosperous. You seem to want to make Eldorado poor and yourself rich. I've been weighing you up for some time, and I think we had better cry our engagement off."

"There are plenty of girls ready to step into your shoes," said the enraged agitator.

"Well, let them!"

She slipped a ring off her finger and held it out.

"Give one of them this," she said. "I've found out in time that you're not the man for me."

"Who's the other man?" he demanded roughly. "Of course, there is another man."

"I don't think I shall ever marry," she said quietly.

"That's child's talk—a fine, strong girl like you. Why shouldn't you marry?"

"Maybe I'm not easily pleased," she said.

She held out her hand to signify that she wanted to be left alone.

"A last kiss," Lambert demanded, with a final flicker of his thwarted desire.

"No," she said. "That's all over. Besides, I've been testing you. And when one has found out what one thought gold to be only rolled gold, one feels a bit sore. You mustn't blame me if in teaching me your theories you've taught me about yourself."

She looked straight into his face, and, despite his anger, he had sufficient sense to turn away that she might not go on reading with her clear, steady eyes the imitation glory of his rolled gold soul.

The Third Choice.

HOW black and dirty Eldorado is, and yet how splendidly human! For what is so fine as human endeavor and human achievement? The whole of that Eldorado valley is human endeavor and human achievement. The coal and iron hidden in the earth would remain hidden, unused and useless, if it were not for the human toil which brings them to the surface, and human skill and human labor create the iron and steel goods turned out by the great Nazareth works, girders and frameworks, rails and pipes, iron plates and steel fittings, all the multifarious products stacked up on those riverside quays in piles which grow and diminish daily as they are added to from the works and subtracted from to feed the flat bottomed barges which the river steamers tug away to the great markets of the world.

There was a poetry of the wild, lonely valley as it was before Peter Clavering's brain made its splendid guess at its hidden and potential wealth. But there is another poetry of the valley of strenuous and successful human work, the poetry of endeavor and endurance and the creation out of the elements of goods for the service of man. And the latter poetry exceeds the former poetry in grandeur as some great human saga exceeds an elegy or an ode.

Edna Wrench knew no world save the world of Eldorado. She had been away from the valley on visits. But Eldorado was her home. Eldorado was in her blood. She wanted no better world. She loved the world to which she belonged.

Its busy life caused her pulse to quicken, its strenuous work made her blood active, its well lighted and well built streets, with their swift moving traffic, filled her with pride. When she saw the great steam hammers in the Nazareth works and held her breath and felt the beat of her heart tremble and well nigh stop, she knew instinctively the romantic grandeur of human achievement in that town, in every house

The Wanted Man
by Harris Dickson

THE STORY THUS FAR.

On opposite sides of Lake Marmion, Mississippi, are two estates—Bennington, owned by Maj. Kenneth Stark, and Marmion, property of Gen. Bob Clayton, who fled to Salamanca, Central America, following a duel with Maj. Stark. As the story opens, federal detectives are hunting Stuart, Gen. Clayton's son, who has returned on a mysterious mission. Uncle Nat, Maj. Stark's aged servitor, tells Barbara, the major's beautiful daughter, and her guest Adelaide, wife of Florian Razilly, a jealous Creole, that he suspects the youth is an impostor. The girls keep a tryst with Stuart at the Lone Oak. When Barbara, who has told him she is Adelaide, greets him coldly he clasps her in his arms, and to escape him she tells him she is married, then flees. Stuart gives Uncle Nat a note for "Adelaide." Razilly obtains it and confronts Stuart while he is talking to Mrs. Razilly in the belief she is "Miss Stark." Razilly takes Adelaide inside the house and bids Stuart wait. But the latter recalls his mission to rescue Col. Tom Yandell from the Vulture of Salamanca—and decides to leave after explaining all to his friend, Dr. Humphreys. Dr. Humphreys is seeking Maj. Stark to effect a reconciliation when the federal men arrive with a man they believe to be Stuart.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

The Two Stuart Claytons.

"WON'T you please let me speak to Mr. Clayton?" Barbara begged.

"Sorry, miss." The officer was polite, yet barred the car door with his arm. "Orders are that he cannot speak to anybody."

"I am Miss Stark," she said distinctly, and watched for its effect upon the prisoner. She thought he would look up, and in the meeting of their eyes that he must understand why she gave her name so plainly. He would know that she was not a married woman and took this means of telling him so. But the prisoner did not start nor stir; perhaps in his gloomy preoccupation he failed to hear.

"Miss Stark, Miss Barbara Stark." She repeated the words more clearly and much louder. His motionless figure betrayed no sign of interest; whether she were maid, wife, or widow, apparently it mattered nothing to him. Unless, as Barbara shrewdly guessed, unless he were playing a game before the officers. So she touched Mr. Fatface upon the arm and tried persuasion.

"Please allow me just one word with Mr. Clayton."

"No, miss. It is positively against orders."

Beyond a doubt the prisoner heard every syllable, but did not look up to thank her with a glance. Stolidly and stubbornly he kept down his head, and Barbara shrank away, curiously repelled by a sense of the man's humiliation.

She could not conceive of Stuart Clayton drooping his head like that. Or did he think that she had told of his being at Marmion and blamed her for his capture? Impossible! All the Negroes knew; it was common talk throughout the neighborhood. In spite of her pride Barbara felt rebuffed and rebuked as she moved away from the car, step by step, until she brushed against old Nat, who had left off listening to Mr. Foxyjaw hollering through the telephone and rambled out to see what happened on the gallery.

"Uncle Nat," she whispered, "you loved him when he was a little boy."

"Yas'm, missy. I knowed Mister Stuart when he warn't knee high to a hopper grass."

"Then can't you do something?"

"Me? Do which?"

"Do anything. O, yes, cut their tires."

"Lawd, no, missy!" Nat shook his bushy head. "Ef dey was jes common constables I mought do so. But I sho is got better sense dan to go skull-draggin' against de whole Unity States."

"But you must. O, look!" Barbara darted away and went flying down the steps as Razilly ran around a corner of the house and rushed upon the car. No one had observed the Creole until Barbara's cry attracted attention, when Mr. Fatface bounded out and grappled him.

"Here! What do you want? Stand off!"

"I have business with that man!" Razilly's tone was so angry that the marshal answered sharply.

"Leave him alone, I tell you."

"But I am Mr. Florian Razilly from New Orleans."

"Don't care if you are Mr. Angel Gabriel from Heaven."

Then Razilly drew himself up with importance and announced, "I'll have you to understand that I represent the Dictator of Salamanca."

"Never heard of the gent. Move on."

"I will not move on. I'm going to settle with that man."

Through the big front door Maj. Stark witnessed their altercation, and left Mr. Foxyjaw at the phone to go in a stiff legged hurry down the steps to catch hold of Razilly.

"Florian, come in the house," he ordered.

"No. That fellow has insulted me."

"Yes, he ought to be horsewhipped. But let him go. Let the officers take him away."

From this old Nat felt sure that Maj. Stark knew of Mr. Stuart writing notes to Mr. Razilly's wife, and when white folks got to fighting over such as that it was time for Negroes to get away. So Nat crawfished backwards to a corner of the gallery, making ready to dodge out of range. If it came to a rookus between Mr. Razilly and Mr. Fatface, Uncle Nat felt perfectly willing to keep hands off and let the best man win. No matter which one of them got licked it would tickle him. But the major came along and pacified everything by dragging Mr. Razilly into the house.

"That's why I'm dodging around these woods! That's why I tricked my government!"

"O, Uncle Nat," Barbara whispered again, "what can we do?"

"Dunno, missy. Mebbe I better fetch Dr. Humphreys. He's crazy 'bout Mister Stuart."

Mystery.

FROM the unsophisticated faith of years Uncle Nat believed that this good old physician could outtalk any bunch of constables on earth. Mighty few folks ever said "no" when Dr. Humphreys argued with them to say "yes." The present case required a lot of persuading, and Nat hustled around to call in at the window, "Doctor, O doctor!"

Nobody answered, so Nat peeped inside. A small lamp burned on the table. By its light he saw two men in the room with their ears close against the slatted door into the hallway. The door was shut; from a recent and furtive trial Nat knew it to be locked. There stood the silent men, not five feet distant from Mr. Foxyjaw, and if the marshal had only yelled a little bit louder, he would not have needed a wire to make all the folks hear him in New Orleans.

When Nat peered closer at the listeners he saw that one of them was Dr. Humphreys and the other—he blinked and rubbed his eyes—the other man looked a heap like Mr. Stuart Clayton, wearing exactly the same kind of clothes, with the same teeny mustache and goatee. If he would only speak Nat could make sure of the voice, but he didn't, for he held his ear at the slatted door, catching every word of Mr. Foxyjaw, who yelled plenty loud.

"Hello! Hello! That you, Harrigan? This is Dorney. I've got Clayton. Neat job! Trapped him slick as goose grease! Sure Mike! Bringing him to New Orleans—on the night train. Call off our men from Florida and Texas. Order them back to Washington," and a lot more bragging.

While Nat stood stupefied, with nothing but scrambled brains in his head, he saw the man who resembled Mr. Clayton stiffen up and grin, as if something tickled him mightily, then grip Dr. Humphreys by the arm and lead him away from the door to the table. The light now glowed into his face. Ugh! It was Mr. Clayton. In the flesh and blood Nat saw him distinctly.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

TILLY TITTER SAVES THE DAY.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

EGGS were most expensive. The high cost of living had even reached the Teenie Weenie village under the rose bush, and it looked as though the little people would have an eggless Easter.

"It won't seem a bit like Easter without an egg," said the Lady of Fashion as the little folks sat about the luncheon table one day discussing the matter.

"Well, I've visited every hen in the neighborhood, and they ask such terrible high prices I don't see how we can afford an egg," said the General. "Why, the lowest price I could get was sixty grains of corn or eighty-five grains of wheat."

"What!" exclaimed Grandpa, looking terribly shocked, "sixty grains of corn! Land sakes! What in the name of jumping beans are those hens talking about? Have they gone crazy? I could get all the eggs I wanted when I was a young fellow for five grains of corn apiece and the old hens would deliver them, too; they'd come right over to the house and lay the eggs any place you wanted them. My word, what are we comin' to?"

"Have you tried Mother Bunch?" asked the Doctor.

"Yes, I have," answered the General. "But she's sittin' on a nest of eggs—expects to have a brood of young chickens next week."

"Don't you think we could afford sixty grains of corn?" asked the Lady of Fashion, looking sweetly at the General.

"No, we can't," answered the General. "The Cook and I have gone over the grain in the store room, and we haven't a grain more than we'll need before we can get another supply."

The Teenie Weenies were all most mournful over the outlook for an eggless Easter, and even Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, noticed something was wrong when she flew down in front of the shoe house that afternoon.

"What's eatin' all you folks?" she asked as she looked about at the disappointed Teenie Weenies. "You all 'ave faces as long as a 'orse. Any one sick?"

The General told the bird how they were unable to have their usual egg for Easter, and the bird shocked every one by laughing at the top of her shrill voice.

"Bless your little 'arts," laughed the bird. "I'll see you get heggs for Easter and it won't cost you a shilling."

"How, Till? How can you get them?" asked the little people.

"Why, I'll lay 'em. Hits four days to Easter and I'll lay three of the freshest eggs you ever tasted before that."

Tilly kept her word, and Easter morning the Teenie Weenie men removed three lovely eggs from her nest and carried them to a quiet nook under some bushes where they were prepared for roasting.

A big fire was built, and when a great bed of hot ashes had been burned the Turk bored a hole in each of the eggs with a tiny drill.

"That hole in the eggs is to let the steam out when they're ccoking. so they won't blow up," the Turk told the curious Teenie Weenies who gathered about him.

The tiny eggs were shoved into the fire and covered with hot ashes, where they cooked for some time, and when they were taken out and the shells removed they were ccoked to a turn.

The Teenie Weenie women spread a big tablecloth on a mossy hill near by, and with plenty of sandwiches, cocoa, and the eggs the little folks had a wonderful picnic.

Tilly was not forgotten, for the Cook brought over six loaves of Teenie Weenie bread, and the grateful bird was so pleased she cried.

In the afternoon the Teenie Weenie men played ball, while the little ladies hunted wild flowers, and every one had a lovely Easter.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The daytime dresses with a hole at the top are usually just about as becoming as the old fashioned stocks—remember that instrument of discipline which condemned naughty Puritans of Mayflower time to sit with head thrust through an aperture in boards? For a long time this severity has been tres chic. It still is—more or less. And if your neck is dazzling white and innocent of a group of chins and without any lines—why, go ahead. But this feature is like the snowdrift—after it has drifted over city streets for some days—why, then you had better avail yourself of the new legislation.

This concerns organdy. The first thing which you notice in the spring frocks—that is, after you have gasped at the amount of red trimming used—is that a great many of the simple serge frocks and suits are relieved by organdy or sometimes lawn. One is tempted to give a catalogue of such frocks. Numbers of Patou and Jenny and Premet models are touched up thus becomingly. There is a Poiret frock of navy serge with accompanying jacket trimmed with cunning little tabs of white organdy. Indeed, even the foulard frocks of Poiret avail themselves of frilly white collars and wide sleeve ruffles of crisp white organdy.

THE importance of being earnest—about blue serge trimmed with red—is brought out in the model from Pâtou at the left. Black silk braid and a white organdy collar do the rest. Second, a frock and matching cape from Drecoll touches its gray gabardine with blue georgette, and leaves other trimming chores to the folds of self material around the cape. The new cape sleeve is illustrated next in the white crepe Romain model which Jenny decks with blue silk braid and emphasizes with bright red patent leather flowers. The accent on the lingerie finish is again encountered in the last frock—a Patou creation of beige gabardine with plaited skirt, white organdy frills and—again the touch of red!

On this page we illustrate this tendency by two frocks from Patou—one at the left and one at the right. The former is a blue serge opening over vivid red chiffon and trimmed with black braid. The characteristic touch is the simple collar of white organdy.

You notice, of course, how simple this model is. Most of the serges and gabardines and twills are. If it weren't for the little varieties of trimming and sleeves and such like, your child could learn how to make a petite robe at her kindergarten.

But there are, of course, those little touches to reckon with. What, for example, would the other Patou dress at the right be without its double frill of organdy down the front and similar frills under the sleeve? And it is trained organdy, too, for the one side frill has a surplus of length which is cunningly coiled into a big chou centered by a bright red patent leather button. Small links of the same red leather fasten the tight sleeves, and the belt is of the same origin. This frock is of beige gabardine, and is otherwise notable for the plaited skirt which forms a yoke effect about the hips.

And if, by the way, anybody thinks that the spring of 1922 is discriminating against plaits, let her look over these Paris things. To be sure, they are used often less frankly than we see them here, but they are nevertheless in active service.

Quite a few of these wearable little frocks of serge and twill and kasha have long, tight sleeves. And usually there is tightness at least at the upper part. But, starting out thus soberly, the little old sleeve often goes on a gay party from elbow to wrist. Its favorite form of gayety is to flare, and often this bell-like cuff is slashed underneath to reveal a glimpse of gay lining or an undersleeve repeating the trimming of the frock. Then again—notably in the models of Premet—this lower section is cut into strips caught at the wrist in a tight band.

One of the most interesting sleeve treatments of the season is found, however, in the new cape sleeve of Jenny. This arrangement, as developed in the white crêpe Romain second from the right, gives you, in fact, a choice of two contours. One is that of the tight sleeve and the other—presented when the arm is raised—is that of the wide flowing drapery. This result is accomplished by a fold extending from wrist to wrist and performing a short cape in the back.

As to the sleeve set into the deep armhole, this is still exploited to some extent by Poiret, who makes use of the old formula in a number of his serge frocks. And, by the way, this is decidedly a blue serge season.

The model of gray serge from Drecoll, located second from the left, illustrates the tendency of a year when every other frock demands a cape or jacket all its own. Here it is a cape trimmed with self-folds of material conspiring toward the popular lattice effect. The touch of trimming is of blue georgette, and the skirt is notable for its shaped side pieces.

Fashions Beauty Contests

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

FRENCH ART BEST SEEN IN EVENING GOWNS.

By Denise Keith.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—Fashions may come in the spring or in any season at all, but the supreme test of a well dressed woman is what she wears in the evening at dinner or ball.

Thus the smartest designers of Paris reason, and add the axiom that women are demandnig more and more exclusive things for evening wear every year. They can prove it by the collections of engravings which date back to the earliest periods, of which every big house in Paris is possessed, for once in a while our French ancestral dames developed a touch here and there that is worth trying out again today.

Perhaps that may be giving away fashion shop secrets, but the fact remains that there is a fitting reminder every here and there of Queen Elizabeth, Marie Antoinette, Anne Boleyn, and others on up to and including styles worn by our late lamented grandmothers in their 'teens.

Thus it is that the tight bodice and flaring skirt have come into their own again, and could these ancestors of ours but glimpse them they would say "I told you so" to the shades of their more recent relatives. I can see nothing more all around the town of Paris than the type which was borrowed from the second empire, or, to be more explicit, those days of crinolines, although modern science has removed the crinoline and has gained the same effect in the pretty creation of this particular season.

Aside from the empire things, Lady Mode prescribes glistening things which take us back to those somewhat mythical days when our ancestors were mermaids, if such was ever the case. Incidentally, to gossip a bit, nearly every Paris collection this spring has a gown called "Anthinea," which relates more or less to a sea goddess of film fame, and they find favor everywhere. Some are done in that new cloth which has facing of silver or gold in an exquisite representation of real sheet metal, yet at the same time has all the suppleness of satin. Others employ the richly brocaded metal laces, and one seen by the artist at one of the late season balls in a prominent Paris hotel was a symphony in jet ornaments, just a bit like the things Cleopatra is supposed to have worn.

This particular evening robe was just out of the hands of Drecoll, whose evening gowns are known throughout Europe. The motif was in jet ornaments in various shapes, but arranged to form lotus flowers with suitable backgrounds. There was a triangular apron panel in front bearing the same design, and the sides of the skirt were richly varied with generously gathered panels of the most exquisite black lace. The bodice was rather close fitting and the shoulder bands were diamond shaped jet pieces. The corsage was extremely low in the back, "comme toujours," and from each side, in front and back, hung streamers of a half dozen strands of long, cylindrical jet beads.

With the gown was worn a head dress of the same motif in the jet, with a pair of flaring wings at the side and a band under the chin, quite mermaidish. Head dress with the smartest evening gowns is insisted upon universally by the costumers, though need not be worn except in a case where the costume as a whole carries a special idea, such as Drecoll had.

Young girls nowadays are being fitted out with party dresses in which they may have no envy of their elders. At the same strictly Paris affair the other night the second girl from the left was seen in the creation shown, which would fulfill the wildest dreams of any young woman between high school and debutante ages. Jenny, who made the frock, believes in pastel shades for younger girls, and she has made this one in a shade approaching canary. The taffeta corsage has a blue faille band about the low shoulders decorated with golden beads. From the right shoulder fall two streamers of blue, narrow faille ribbon.

The skirt is overlaid with a misty creation in marquisette which flares and plaits and in its lighter hue gives a ravishingly soft shade over the deeper yellow slip. And, moreover, its sunflower medallions of taffeta, edged with gold embroidery, give it that fresh, young appearance. The marquisette skirt is piped at the bottom in the deeper yellow taffeta. A double girdle, one at the natural waist line and another about the slender hips, matches the decoration of the decolette.

Scarcely older, a young woman boasted of a still more empirish frock in a hue which contrasted so with the former that it made the group a most interesting one. The striking features, the wonderfully frilly skirt of airplane, was of the most attractive shade of azure, deep ruffles adding to the loose, fluffy plaits and the drape effect where the maze of materials was caught up at the side.

There was a bodice of the same color almost covered with a wide sash effect in black cire satin, forming a long sash streamer in the back. A garland of flowers in green, brique, and silver, set with emeralds, extended from one shoulder across to the waist. The little shoulder bands were conventional three leaf clover designs.

Doeuillet had gathered the moonbeams which apparently formed the motif of the gown on the haughty girl on the right of the group, taking for a foundation material a blue flame silk with a silver thread interwoven. The designer resorted to the increasingly popular lace, heavily brocaded in the new designs in which real silver fiber is used. Four different types of what are being worn by the fashionable folk could hardly be better selected, for the entire range between elaborate things was covered in this quartet of Parisian beauties.

Drecoll employs brocaded metal lace and jet ornaments. Pastel shades are advised for younger girls. For those who like those extremely frilly skirts. Blue flame silk foundation allied with silver lace.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the kind that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

"TO ONE THING CONSTANT NEVER."

IT was thirty years ago that an old fashioned couple with old fashioned ideals married. For ten years happiness was theirs. Three little girls came to complete their union. The only shadow that seemed to mar their state was James' frequent absence from home on business.

One day Elsie accidently discovered his attachment for another. Without a word she made preparations to leave him. He pleaded forgiveness and promised many wonderful things if she would only give him another chance. As her love for him was strong she yielded, and they began life anew.

For ten years more their happiness seemed a living proof that marriage is a success. Two more little girls came to them.

And then rumors began. At last Elsie was forced to see the truth. She scorned the weapons that women sometimes use when solving a problem of this kind. She refused to nag, threaten, or entreat, but set out to beat the vamp at her own game. She massaged, marceled, polished, and primped until she actually looked ten years younger. But all to no avail. Finally his employer gave him his choice of the position he had been holding for twenty years or the woman. He made his choice without a qualm.

After his resignation they left for parts unknown. His family was left almost destitute. The oldest girl was 15 and the youngest 7. The mother entered the business world, as did the girls as they became old enough.

Ten years later found the mother occupying a responsible position and making payments on the little bungalow that had never seemed possible when she lived with her husband. The last girl had just married.

And then James came home to plead forgiveness once more. The wound had healed in the ten long years that had passed—years that had been full for the woman who had been bravely making the best possible path for herself and her five little ones. During all this time she had scorned all suggestions of prosecution or divorce proceedings. So for the sake of the happiness that had been theirs in the past she listened to his entreaties again. Once more she was persuaded to condone the past by eloquent promises and his apparent repentance.

It was an unusual situation that James found himself in. Here he was face to face with five young women whom he had remembered as little girls in the pigtail age. Likewise he had to greet five sons-in-law and two grandchildren whom he had never seen. The middle aged couple tried to catch up the threads where they had been broken off and start life anew on the same basis that had been theirs thirty years before. Elsie retained her position so the little bungalow might be paid for sooner, but James seemed absolutely in different as to securing a position. The only excuse he gave was that he thought he needed a year's rest. No thought seemed to be given to the ten weary years that the wife had been burdened with the responsibility of rearing five little children. This state of affairs lasted about three months, when James once more took his departure, saying he had secured a position in another state. From another source Elsie learned he had returned to his former companion.

No one censures Elsie now with her tired, disillusioned eyes as she agrees with the poet who said:

Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever—
One foot in sea and one on shore,
To one thing constant never.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Request for Books.

I like books, almost of any kind—philosophy, drama, history, biography, etc.—but I am most interested in business books. An offer of books on business management, how to write business letters, and story writing would be greatly appreciated.

"L. A."

To any one having books on the varied subjects in which you are interested, and willing to pass them on, I shall send your address.

Baby's Outgrown Possessions.

"Do you suppose among your readers there is some one who could use the following articles: a child's iron bed, spring and mattress, and a high chair? I shall be glad to give these things to any one you send for them. I am going to move before April 20, so would like to dispose of them.

"Mrs. W. K."

Thank you, Mrs. K. Some mother with a new arrival from babyland will rejoice in your gift.

Wants a Dictionary.

"I am writing to ask if some one has a discarded dictionary, I would appreciate it so much.

M. B."

If I hear of an available dictionary you shall hear from me.

Always in Demand.

"I have a quantity of popular songs for piano which I would be glad to give to some one.

J. O. T."

Popular songs are always in demand. Thank you for your donation.

Gifts for Children.

"I have a set of blocks, a child's cart, and a small piano which I will gladly give to any one who will call for them. I also have some clothing for a 2 year old girl.

Mrs. D."

Come, children. To the first applicant these gifts shall be given.

Distress after Eating

may follow eating your favorite foods.

To relieve this condition promptly try one or two

STUART'S Dyspepsia Tablets

after each meal.

They neutralize the acid stomach, giving the alkaline effect, the same as when in normal working order.

These tablets are sold in every drug store in the U.S. and Canada at 60c a box. Known to a host of people for 25 years as the one thing needful in an attack of indigestion.

Better Than Calomel

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel — are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

How a Beauty Keeps Her Beauty

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—By artists, by beautiful women of her own profession and out of it, by art critics, by judges of thirty beauty contests, by a famous author, by a legitimate stage beauty, by popular vote of the layman, Miss Katherine MacDonald has been acclaimed the most beautiful woman in America, and consequently the most beautiful woman in the world.

How does this lovely screen star, whose photograph tells her she is beautiful beyond compare, whose mirror reflects it, and who perhaps has received more adulation, spoken and silent, than any other living girl, preserve her beauty? How did she acquire it? And what is she doing to prolong the age of her present fame?

Has she some mystic potion concocted out of the essence of the moonbeam, the rays of the sunbeam, and the perfume of the rose, mayhap?

It Means Self-Denial.

Not a bit of it! She is not that kind of a beauty at all! She is neither exotic nor ephemeral.

She is the American girl, modern, athletic, womanly, intensely sane, and practical in her views on hygiene and beauty, realizing the responsibility her fame, as the great American beauty, has thrust upon her. And who shall say it is the most enviable of positions?

Lillian Russell is credited with having many times decried the exacting demands of one placed above her fellow women as more beautiful. It means a lifetime of infinite pains and self-denial to live up to the demands of the exalted position. Imagination conjures up in advance a vision which no reality can live up to, supremely lovely as it may be, and these envied luminaries are forever standing in the presence of a critic who compares the flesh and blood creature to the image of his mind, whereas you and I are approached in a tolerant and reasonably generous mood.

Not until one has passed that glorious, carefree early youth—by that I mean the teens and early twenties—when the age itself is its own best beauty doctor, does a woman rarely get down seriously to the matter of retaining her beauty. The closer she gets to the thirties and the thirties plus the more she begin to realize a number of things that have to do with beauty preservation.

Chose the Harder Way.

Perhaps Miss MacDonald is just a little wiser than the average girl. It may have been the force of circumstances, which accidentally brought her into the limelight in her first picture four years ago and immediately proclaimed her a great beauty, that made her begin to consider earnestly the problems of pulchritude at an earlier age than most women. She was then in her early twenties. She had seen other fair buds come out, bloom for a season or two, and pass on to the Limbo to which these flowers of yesterday depart. Being just the little wiser, she recognized then that a girl cannot work by day and play by night, every day and every night, without waking up to find herself floundering around in the aforesaid Limbo.

"I love to dance as much as any girl and to party," she said, "but I have had to work almost steadily every day since I got into pictures—from 8 in the morning until 6 at night—and I saw it was a physical impossibility to do both, so the dancing and partying had to be reduced to the minimum."

Scores on Heredity.

Miss MacDonald comes of a stock of wholesome living people, who, she laughingly declares, never die. By way of substantiating her claim, be it known that a granduncle, James C. Agnew of Wheeling W. Va., 84, broke his leg and lived to step blithely out of the hospital door with the promise that he would not be back for many a long day.

On both her maternal and paternal side the family boasts the biggest men in the world. One uncle, height 6 feet 2, was dubbed the "runt" of a family of seven brothers.

Miss MacDonald's father was tall, blonde, blue-eyed, and handsome. Her mother is extremely good looking, with a beautiful figure, silver white hair, which formerly was red gold, and a regal carriage.

So Miss Katherine came by many of her gifts quite naturally, as many another beauty has done. But unlike many another, she has not relied on heredity to condone nor to excuse digression from the straight and exacting road of famed beauty. Rather has she put into practice the wholesome doctrines of her healthy forbears.

Believes in Fresh Air.

She believes in fresh air, and she believes equally in soap and water, and began early practicing religiously her beliefs. At school and at college she went in for athletics, basketball, tennis, and swimming. She tried to interest a group of college girls in a hockey team, but the only available river failed them at the first moment of activity.

But she wants her daily portion of fresh air, and she must have it. "In California," she opines, as do all Californians, "you get that and sunshine whether you order it or no. A possible difference of opinion about the everlasting sunshine is of no consequence here, for it must be admitted in all fairness that people in this part of the country learn the joys of the great outdoors—and play at them—of unheated apartments, and of fresh fruit and vegetable diets, so, undoubtedly the sun does shine oftener for them in consequence.

"I never realized how lucky I am," said Miss MacDonald, "living out here until I revisited New York a year ago. At luncheon at a hotel the room was so overperfumed, overtobacco smoked, and overheated I felt smothered for air. I was glad to get back where we sleep with every window in the house open, and drafts are never dreaded; where you breathe pure oxygen with every breath."

A Soap and Water Creature.

If I were not referring to the most beautiful girl in the world I should be tempted to call her a soap and water creature. I'll succumb to the temptation and call her that anyway! That's what she is; she quite frankly admits it. Incurably addicted to the habit of soap and water, believes in it as the cleanser par excellence.

A half dozen or more of the rival beauties of the screen to whom I talked during my search for the one predominating in fairness and charm told me they never used water on their faces—always cold cream.

Yet here stands one who has earned distinction as peeress of them all from a hundred different sources defending soap and water and the brush, which pleases me beyond measure, as it coincides with my private observation and my public professions of faith therein.

A high priced product, you surmise, with oils from the orient and perfume from the four quarters of the globe?

"I was raised on a well known 10 cent family soap," she told me. "The family finances and the heavy consumption of the article made it compulsory. I never used anything else until I was a grownup woman, when the odor of carbolic in it grew distasteful. If it were perfumed I would still be using it, I think, for I believe the carbolic and the other ingredients in that soap did much to preserve the texture and clearness of my skin.

"I bathe morning and evening in hot water," Miss MacDonald said. "I simply never could get the cold water habit. Have tried it but it gives me neither glow nor feeling of well being—just shivers. I want my water hot. And that's the way I take it. Every night when I come home from work I hop into the tub, take a hard, stiff brush with me, and scrub. After the scrub I lie back in the tub and wait until the muscles of my face, my jaws and my whole body are completely relaxed. Then I rub. My bath towels are pure linen hemp and wiry, a cross between a Brussels carpet and sand paper. But they're wonderful towels.

"I don't use the brush on my face. I have a stiff Turkish toweling hand mitt with which I apply the soap and water. I rinse my face in icy cold water, and that's the only astringent I ever use.

"Then I lie down for a few minutes before I dress for dinner. I cannot get the powder and the grease paint off any other way than by soap and hot water."

Finds Massage Restful.

For years Miss MacDonald has had a Swedish girl, graduate of Stockholm university, give her body massage twice a week. First she gives her a hot bath, followed by a salt rub; dips her back in the tub again for a rinse; then comes the massage, which consumes about three-quarters of an hour, and which Miss MacDonald avers may be a trifle too strenuous for others, although some of her friends have the same masseuse and press her into service on the afternoon of an evening party, and claim the treatment most invigorating for an evening's festivities. But Miss MacDonald uses the masseuse's service to rest and soothe her and usually is asleep before the performance is finished. An Eau de Cologne of her own preparing is the final touch after the ceremony, and, incidentally, this she rubs on her neck and shoulders and chest after her nightly bath. A half pint of any good toilet water, Miss MacDonald says, will serve as well.

Next week I shall tell you how this one beauty in a billion takes care of her complexion.

KATHERINE MACDONALD.

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

I asked a new neighbor's child how many children there were in her family.

"Just one children," replied the youngster. "Frankie and me."

"O, but that's two," said I.

"No," insisted the child, "we're twins." C. C.

Mary had been naughty, and her father reproved her rather severely, threatening to do something worse if she acted so again. Later, when Mary was visiting her grandmother, she was asked what had happened that day. Feeling sure of a sympathetic listener, the child replied wistfully, "Well, I dess I almost fell off the edge of a whipping." J. L. D.

A few years ago I was walking down the street with a small dog on a chain, when I met a child running.

In a joking manner I stopped and said, "I bet my dog can run faster than you." "He ought to be able to. He has four legs and I only have two," said the child. C. C. G.

A frequent caller at our home was a woman in a neighboring apartment, who always wore large shell rimmed glasses. One day she came into our apartment, sans the glasses. In great astonishment Robert left his toys and ran excitedly into the adjoining room, shouting: "O, mother, come and see! Mrs. Berkeley is here, and her eyes are barefooted!" F. E. S.

While playing on the beach one afternoon my son insisted on throwing sand around. I cautioned him to be more careful, saying if the sand got in the other children's eyes it would hurt them dreadfully. He thought for a moment and said, "Why, mother, it doesn't hurt me when the sandman puts sand in my eyes." E. H.

Ruth had been to the barber shop to have her hair bobbed. A day or two later her brother went to the same shop to have a hair cut. Upon returning home, Ruth said: "Howard, did the barber who cut your hair have orange color hair on his head?" E. A. R.

Mrs. Billings rented her house furnished to a family having three children.

The mother frequently said, "No, don't touch that; that belongs to Mrs. Billings," or, "Now be careful, you'll break that lamp; and you know that belongs to Mrs. Billings."

One day being refused a third biscuit, little Billie asked, "Mother, do those biscuits belong to Mrs. Billings, too?" E. L.

Mary took two jars of baked beans down to the church fair in her little express wagon for a neighbor. She brought home the empty jars in the evening.

"Thank you, Mary. I'll remember this when I have something nice," said the woman.

"You better write it down," said Mary. E. J. S.

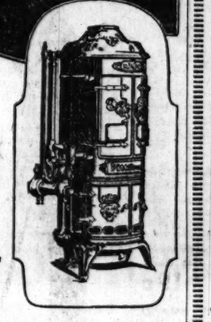
The Pittsburg heats water AS IT FLOWS



Opening any hot water faucet lights the heating flame. Closing the faucet extinguishes it. That's all you have to do.

Wouldn't it add immensely to your home comfort if you had a system that made hot water as easy to draw as cold? A Pittsburg Automatic will do it! No waiting, fussing or running down-stairs to light a heater when you want hot water up-stairs. Just open a tap and draw as much or as little as you want.

Pittsburg AUTOMATIC GAS WATER HEATERS

It is so completely automatic that you can practically forget where it is. You'll always have hot water at instant call, day or night, and just as clean as the cold water.

A Pittsburg uses fuel only when hot water is actually being drawn. It never wastes a foot of gas, because it stops heating when the hot water faucet is closed.

Addition and Subtraction.

My fiancé remarked about my plumpness, so I thought I would surprise him by reducing during his absence. I began to ride the family steed. I wrote Russell enthusiastic letters about my long canters, and prepared him to behold upon his return my fairylike slenderness.

He came home unexpectedly a month or so later, just as I was dismounting from my horse, who had lost considerably from exercise, while I had gained ten pounds, as being out in the open air had increased my appetite. For a moment he looked scrutinizingly at my mount and then quizzically at me.

Then he observed: "I thought you were going to reduce. The horse didn't need it."

Useful and Ornamental.

I was teaching at a co-educational school and belonged to a lunch club of half a dozen instructors. One of them, Miss Smith, had charge of our supplies. I went home for the Christmas vacation, and upon my return mother gave me one of her famous fruit cakes. I decided to be generous and share it with the club, so I gave the package to Miss Smith. The box was square, the cake was round. When it was opened, in the center was the cake, wrapped in tissue paper, and in each corner of the box my good mother had packed several neatly folded pairs of socks.

O. M. L.

It Might Have Been Worse.

Sister Kate married into a family where there were aunts, uncles, and cousins in abundance. But there was one particular fifth cousin who was the trial and burden of all. A spinster of uncertain age and temper, she lived at the different homes, enduring and being endured as long as possible at one, and then moving to the next. She was the gloom of my sister's marriage. She hung aloof for awhile, then descended and stayed.

Mother went there for a visit and came home with many tales of Kate's troubles. We gave her sympathy which was suddenly needed for ourselves. For out of a clear sky we received a letter from Miss Anderusar, the cousin, saying she loved mother dearly and had decided to visit her.

We stormed, we talked, we cried. Then I wrote to Miss Anderusar and told her mother was leaving for New York, that my sister had fever, my brother a broken leg, and I was cleaning and decorating the house. Next I wrote my sister that even our love for her was not equal to this strain. We could not and would not have that guest—she was a bore, a troublemaker and a hypocrite; she was a millstone to one family, she was not going to be to two. "Tell her anything you wish," I ended, "but understand that we do not want her and will not have her."

A convention came to town the next week. I went down to the first meeting.

A friend said, "Here's a woman who knows you."

And there stood Miss Anderusar!

"O!" I exclaimed in confusion, "you came. Well, good morning. I hope you are well. I'll telephone mother that we will be out."

Her thin lips never relaxed their rigid line. "Perhaps your sister never told you the mistake you made. My letter went to her and her letter came to me!"

I stumbled down the steps and went home. "Well," I exclaimed when I got my breath, "where was the mistake, after all? We didn't want her and now we haven't got her!"

C. W.

All So Unnecessary.

I was leisurely walking back to the office after lunch, enjoying the sunshine and the beauty of the day, when I met a girl I had known only a short time. She greeted me effusively, and we stopped for a moment to chat. When she turned to go I said I would walk on with her.

When we arrived at the store she approached the soda counter, and before she had a chance to state what she wished I began to insist that she should not buy me a drink; that I hadn't the slightest idea that was what she was coming in for when I invited myself to go along; that I couldn't possibly drink anything, as I had just had lunch.

When I had exhausted my vocabulary, she replied, "I just came in to get prices on ice cream cones for a children's party."

Home Outfits

Just as an appeal to your reason—is it not best to pay, perhaps, $10 more for a 7-piece dining room suite and be guaranteed perfect service the Spiegel way than to pay $10 less and not receive the class of furniture you should have?

Home-needs are permanent investments which should be selected with great care as to quality of construction and design because a home is created with more thought for the future than the immediate present.

When you purchase your Home-needs from any of our five beautiful stores you can be assured that the articles selected will give the service expected of them. We assume the responsibility of the wearing qualities of whatever we sell. Go to our store nearest your home and compare our Home-needs with others you may have seen, then you will appreciate the quality we sell.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

CASSEROLE COOKERY.

BOSTON baked beans cooked in an earthenware pot, with a narrow neck to reduce the surface of evaporation, are really beans "en casserole." Bread pudding, in a yellow baking dish, is an en casserole pudding. An egg shirred in a saucer is an egg in a casserole (earthenware dish), although the small gratin dish which has two ears somewhat like those on a porringer is one of the two earthen dishes of the more conventional sort for baking broken eggs.

Cooking in Ashes.

The earthen or clay pot with a handle, broader than deep, has some times been called the French casserole. The French peasant puts tomorrow's breakfast in it, and then tucks the pot into the hot ashes. He might have buried it in a bed of hot coals in the ground, as we in the United States have done our pots of beans for picnic dinners. The advantage of this sort of cooking is that anything once started, and well protected, practically cooks itself. These uses represent the first sort of fireless cooking.

Nearly all earthenware cooking is slow cooking, therefore the clay pot is particularly good for soup making. The French call the earthen soup pot a marmite, and have the large sort and the small. The latter, or petite marmite, is much used hereabouts in elegant table service. Because of the character of the contents marmites have two handles.

Kitchen Pottery.

Nor does the list of kitchenware pottery end here. The little ramekin like dishes, with handles, for egg cookery, are commonly called cocottes, although this word cocotte is sometimes used to include casseroles of every sort. One English writer, heading his article "Casserole Cookery," has this to say of cocottes: "Today a cocotte may be understood to mean a stew pot, or even stew dish, round or oval, shallow or deep, large or small, according to the purpose in view. The only safe fashion of determining what a cocotte may be is to ascertain for what use it is intended, what it is required to contain. For instance, there are egg cocottes, chicken and game cocottes, quail cocottes, Souveroff cocottes. A la Souveroff is a special method of cooking quails in a sealed vessel named after the famous Russian general."

The French have a special earthenware vessel for cooking beef with carrots, or a sort of pot roast called "daube." It is cooked in a daubiere, or shallow earthen pot, with tight cover, which is sealed down with a strip of paper or pastry. This sealing of the lid has been considered essential to the perfection of the process by the French cook, who wastes no fruit or vegetable juices by allowing evaporation through too rapid cooking or because of unscaled badly fitting covers.

Casseroles for Braising.

Partridge and other game birds are beautifully braised in casseroles with tight covers. These birds are all muscle, and this type of meat can be easily hardened by heat, while by long slow cooking, in a light vapor, it becomes tender. Old muscles like that of the aged fowl given the same sort of treatment become quite delicious, since these have more flavor than those of younger birds. The slow cooking develops the flavor. In French cooking the distinction between roasting and this type of cooking is sharp. Meat is roasted on a spit in the open before a bright fire, its juices kept in by a searing and cover of fat constantly renewed by basting. In braising or pot roasting the heat applied is slight and the meat is cooked in its own steam with that of vegetables and of other additions used to season it. We can roast a large piece of meat under the broiler, if we will baste it frequently. The constantly drawing of it into the air for this purpose has its part in producing the desired effect.

Special Earl' Pots.

There are special pots with special covers and special handles, or none. There is one for stewing tripe, and one for potting meats. The most famous of potted things has been the fat livers of geese (foie gras) especially. There are several sorts of earthen frying pans, all with a somewhat long handle. The one for sauteing is the deepest, since in this sort of work the food is jumped or tossed in brisk cooking. In other words, the food is frequently moved and turned, or shaken and tossed. Cold boiled potatoes sliced rather fine and tossed in butter until they are brown, are so cooked to be served as hot as possible, and before they can harden, right from the pan, just as stew is served on the table from the casserole. The ramekin, gratin dishes, and soufflé cases are casseroles. Not until the coming of the modern glassware utensils have we had any other inexpensive cooking ware sightly enough for the table. The glass is not inexpensive, but it does not cost anywhere near as much as silver or silver lined copper utensils.

The Pipkin.

A writer on the pipkin begins thus: "It is a remarkable fact that in many of the most modern inventions and appliances there is a trace of something primitive which has survived through the ages and continues to form an essential part of the newer ideas. A striking instance is the clay pot—the stone or earthenware casserole of today, the pipkin of bygone ages. The clay pot is undoubtedly the father of all pots. One can easily imagine prehistoric man fashioning pots from clay and using them to contain water; it is as easy to realize that when actual cooking of food was started, the clay pot was brought into use as being the most easily fashioned and durable. The pipkin is an earthenware boiler sometimes called marmite, but more commonly known as the casserole. If its name has been banished, its use has been practically the same. The earthenware pot or pan has thus established itself before all generations."

Care of Earthenware Cooking Utensils.

Prehistoric man probably found out that fire hardened the clay form which he made, if it stood the shock. Slow heating enables it to do this. New earthenware vessels are soaked in cold water for some hours, then gently heated either in the water or not. The principle is to heat gradually, and at all times sudden alternations of temperature should be avoided. A fierce heat is never desired, especially when the casserole is covered. They may be used on a stove lid and even over gas if it is low, almost as low as it will burn. Asbestos may be used instead, to modify heat. Open earthenware vessels filled with something for cooking in a hot oven may be placed in a dish of hot water. In making anything of a custardlike nature this protects the food as well as the utensil.

Advantages of Earthenware.

1. No possible metallic touch.

2. For hot service. The prosperity of many a dish depends upon heat, and the casserole may go to the table and keep hot for a long time.

3. Nearly all made dishes, or meats recooked, may be made superior by using casserole.

4. The slow cooking of tough meats with all its advantages can be well done in the casserole.

5. Foods can easily be cooked in a small amount of water in the casserole—stews, ragouts, and other well seasoned dishes. It takes about twice as long to cook these in the oven at a simmering temperature as in other utensils, and over the fire. Flavors are developed by cooking any wet thing slowly. Leftovers of all sorts may be served in individual casseroles called ramekins—usually in a sauce, but meats may be baked in a crust which in French cookery is of itself called a casserole. Casseroles for crusts, in which a meat stew may be baked like a pie, may be made of rice. Any leftover may remain in an earthenware cooking utensil. Aroma, flavor, savoriness, heat are the prominent things to be obtained in casesrole cooking.

Sauce Bases.

One cup of meat stock, slightly thickened, is an excellent base in which to cook bits of meat and vegetables in a casserole. For sweetbreads, leftover fish, vegetables, macaroni, and so forth, a white sauce which may be variously seasoned is generally preferred. With cooked macaroni we may add from half a cup to a cup of cheese to a white sauce. A white sauce may be seasoned with onion or how we will. Plain milk or cream or tomato puree are all excellent mediums in which to bake an egg in a cocotte or ramekin. When we cook meat and good seasonings, we may use hot water, when we have no meat stock.

Simple Beef and Potatoes in Casserole.

Cut a pound of round steak into small pieces, roll them in seasoned flour, and sauté them in dripping in which two small onions sliced have been cooked. Rub a casserole with some of the dripping, cover the bottom with a layer of sliced raw potatoes, put in the browned beef with any additional seasonings needed, and cover with another layer of potatoes. Cover all with hot water or hot meat stock, fit the cover on perfectly tight, and cook in a moderate oven about two hours or in the fireless cooker after the first twenty minutes of baking. A little carrot or other vegetables may be added to this, but when the potatoes are thoroughly cooked and the blend of the liquid with the rest makes a soft savory gravy, this dish is fine enough with just the meat, onion, and potatoes, especially if the liquid is a meat stock. Left-over beef may be used, and only time enough to cook the potatoes allowed.

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution?

W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he addr.. is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: "Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor, The Sunday Tribune.

Says He's Modest.

Some time ago my wife left me without reason, as all men say. I admit I am still in that condition—without reason. I have written to her, asking her to come back. I said I realized my many mistakes, and had determined to reform. But her answer was cold. I do not believe the promise of a steam yacht would help to oil the friction.

Here we have a virtuous woman who is a kind and loving mother to one child, whom she took with her to her parents. Her only fault is a bad temper and stubbornness. On the other side we have an honest, hard working respectable man who was a kind and loving father to his boy. His chief fault, too, is a bad temper. He is too modest to list his good qualities.

Now, is marriage a failure? It is difficult to tell. I think the most important thing is to live away from your relatives. Twelve thousand miles would be a good distance, since we usually manage to visit them if any closer. Next, don't maintain an anvil chorus around the house. Don't think out loud.

I married at 22; my wife was the same age. We loved each other; no divorce for us—how absurd! We would never quarrel. Well, we did all we said we wouldn't do, and then some. I don't mean to discourage marriage, but, men, if you haven't a home of your own and if the girl doesn't like housework and quiet evenings at home, then stay single!

If a wife gets a scrap of sympathy from Mrs. Doolittle, and sees in that evening's paper that Sarah Hammer has been granted a divorce, then, O, she can't stand this oppression any longer, and the next time Henry says the hash has too much salt in it she says, "I'll show him he can't rule me." And she sues for divorce.

What's the answer? K. W.

Lord and Master.

I think the most common cause of family troubles is when the husband elects himself master of the home, announcing emphatically by words and actions that his brains are far superior to the few of the wife.

He takes full charge of all financial affairs and handles all money. If the wife wishes anything she must ask him, humbly, for the price, with the splendid chance of being refused four times out of three.

Nothing humiliates a bright, intelligent woman as much as being told by her husband that she has no business sense. It would be nice if men would realize that God made the brains of men and women out of the same piece of goods. Our jails and penitentiaries are filled with men, and not with women, so it seems most women are bright enough to keep out of jail (with apologies to the good husbands).

Most women do not care to be boss; they want to be partners. There is no happier woman living than the one whose husband consults her in all problems, both financial and otherwise. There are no happy homes unless husband and wife have equal say in all matters.

Even though the new wife is unsophisticated, the husband should give her a chance; experience is a wonderful teacher, and, with the husband's confidence, will spur her onward to victory. True happiness is our only heaven in this world, and if every husband would go fifty-fifty there would be few divorces and that little heavenly light would shine forth in many a home.

WHY I TOLD MY LAST LIE

Talking Through Her Hat.

There is a girl I know whose clothes, according to her story, always cost a dollar or two more than other girls'. Annoyed at the way she fibs, I decided to get even with her.

At a club meeting, when I was removing my new spring hat and she asked me the price of it, I tacked on $3 to the original price. As I lied I laid it on the bed. She picked it up to try on, then, taking it off, she glanced inside. There was the price tag.

She looked at it a moment, then sarcastically remarked: "How sweet of you to pay more than was asked."

L. R. C.

The Boomerang.

A friend of mine owns an exclusive garment shop. I often drop in and look over new goods.

One day some new blouses arrived and we were admiring them. One blouse in particular my friend seemed to like.

I thought it overtrimmed and too loud in color, but pleasantly remarked: "Twenty dollars! But it is lovely. I wish it were mine."

I had a birthday a few days later and my husband came home with a box. Pleased and excited I opened the package. There lay the despised tomato colored blouse which I had lied about.

R. A. K.

Trying to Please Him.

We had received an invitation to the wedding of a relative, and my husband decided he must have the vest he was wearing laundered.

I had numerous household duties the next morning and just as I was going to get the vest the telephone rang. It was my husband.

After a desultory conversation came the question: "Well, did you get my vest washed?" In a flash came to my mind his occasional accusations that I did not always remember to attend to his requests.

It's just the same as washed, I reflected. "Yes, I just finished it," I lied cheerfully.

"Are you sure?" he asked.

"Certainly; why do you ask?"

"Because I'm wearing it," he said.

ROME "DeLuxe" QUALITY

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Why spend one-third your life in discomfort?

"It is astonishing," reflects a noted medical authority, "that though we spend one-third of our life in bed, we, as a rule, fail to realize the importance of having our beds comfortable."

Just stop to consider that our whole life—our happiness, our very success, depends upon how well we sleep. Yet millons of people are sleeping every night on bedsprings so uncomfortable that complete rest is impossible. Thousands of people complain of being tired in the morning—they doctor for backache—for nervousness—run down condition, when, if they only knew it, all they need in many cases is a comfortable bedspring.

It is an absolute physical impossibility to lie comfortably on an ordinary coil, woven wire or national bedspring. The body rolls into a great hollow, twisting the spine. The spring presses too severely on prominent parts of the anatomy and does not even touch other parts at all. The result is restlessness; the body twists and turns during the night, trying in vain for comfort—an easier position.

But there is a way to have an absolutely comfortable night's sleep. That way is to equip your bed with a Rome De Luxe bedspring. This spring is scientifically designed to mold itself to every part of the anatomy. It cannot sag even when two are sleeping in one bed, as each lies on his own level in perfect comfort. There is no stress or strain—no cramping of muscles—no straining of any kind. The spine remains straight. And another advantage is that Rome De Luxe does not wear or tear the mattress.

Examine the Rome De Luxe at your dealer's. Comparison proves that it gives a world more of luxurious comfort than any other bedspring at any price. Know Rome De Luxe by the Rome Quality trade-mark on the side rail. It is the identification mark as well as the quality certification of all Rome products. The Rome De Luxe is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal beds.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE

If you have any puzzling problem in sewing send it to Clotilde with a stamped, addressed envelope and she will try to help you out.

ORDER IN THE SEWING ROOM.

THERE are many of us, no doubt, who realize that it is easier to take the right sort of care of things we use constantly, and many probably who think it isn't worth while. Take one's sewing machine, for instance. If it is kept clean and properly oiled and due attention is paid to using the right thread with the right needle, using attachments according to directions, it will last almost indefinitely and never give any trouble.

Too much oil is not good; on the other hand, nothing wears machinery out faster than lack of proper lubrication.

When one is through sewing for the day, it is an easy matter to go over the machine, wiping off all the lint and dust, and then oiling it. Run it for a few seconds to make the oil circulate, and in the morning before using examine it well, and wipe away any surplus oil that may have spread.

With a machine that uses a double thread, one should take some scraps of material like that to be sewed, and putting two thicknesses together sew to see that the tension is right. It is better to experiment on a stray piece of cloth than on a garment.

When a machine has been used for quite a while it is a good idea to oil it with kerosene, and allow it to stand at least overnight; then clean every part carefully. Oil it with pure sperm oil, and let stand another night.

If a woman sews much, she is fortunate if she has a well equipped room for the purpose. For those who cannot, it is a good idea to have every thing in readiness before beginning the day's sewing. Have the ironing and sleeve boards out, the iron in place, the necessary cloths for pressing, and the machine put where the light is good. There should be tracing wheel, French chalk, a sharp pencil, a reliable tape measure, and everything in the sewing basket that will be needed—pins, needles, snaps, etc.

It is a great help to keep needles in a small cushion and pins in a box—both of which can be on a table conveniently near. A scrap basket is a help also. Put all bastings and scraps into it as they come instead of having a discouraging place to put in order at the end of a day.

Attention to these small matters will make one's work pleasant. Much less time and fewer movements are necessary—all of which means less fatigue. The principal thing is to have a soft but sharp pencil, and do the marking with perfect accuracy.

Answers to Sewing Questions.

MRS. S. W.: Gabardine, serge, duvetyn, or twill will be appropriate for your one piece frock. The sleeves may be made of silk crepe.

MOTHER: Smocking is pretty for coats and dresses for small girls, and the plain kind is not so difficult to do.

MISS ALICE K.: Braids and ribbons are both used for trimming. Needlework catalogues show beautiful designs of embroidery for every sort of a garment.

MRS. T. F. S.: Why not use a cross stitch initial on your towels? Choose a two inch size and use some color.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

TO THE DEAREST GIRL IN THE WORLD.

MY TREASURE: Your letter just reached me, and it is so sweet and refreshing, for it tells of your love. I have been sitting by my camp fire dreaming of you all evening, but the last embers have died and I have come inside my little cabin to write to the dearest girl in all the world.

My cabin is made of balsam logs stood on end, close together, and I have built a porch of the logs in front. It really is a pretty place, and it is home. I have named the most beautiful tree near my cabin for you, Eileen. The tree nearest it is your mother's, and I have dared to name the next one Jack.

I found the first Mayflower I have seen this year today, and I'm sending it to you.

"Nothing shall ever make me less your friend." Because of those words I am extremely happy tonight, dear.

I hope I shall always be worthy of your love and trust.

At 10 o'clock a week from tonight please look at the North Star, and I'll look at it at the same time, and we'll make a wish, and afterwards write and tell each other what it was. I love to know that at a certain time you are thinking of me.

And I was so glad to know just when you were singing for me. From my heart of hearts the words fly back to you in answer: "Because God made thee mine, I'll cherish thee, through cloud and sunshine, through all time to be."

Nothing, no one but you, could bring into my life so much of joy. It is so natural, so easy to be true to you. My love for you is second only to my faith in you, dear heart.

There are lovely trails through the woods, and all nature is beautiful now. I wish you could be here for a little while, though it might be lonely for you if you were here for long. But I'll soon be with you again. Until then, know that I love you with my whole heart, Eileen, and that you are and always shall be the center of all my plans and all my joys.

Lovingly yours alone,

JACK.

Welcome Rest

THE difference between sleeping on a DOWNY REST and an ordinary bed spring is almost unbelievable. You will comment on this remarkable difference—you will never again be satisfied with any spring but a DOWNY REST.

If you are accustomed to sleeping on your back or on your side, the sensitive surface of the DOWNY REST will shape itself to the contours of your body and eliminate the aches, soreness and numbness so often caused by hard, uneven, unyielding spring construction.

You will sleep in individual comfort—neither your movements nor the movements of your bed mate will be noticeable to each other. Ask your dealer—ask him today.

THE POTTERS

ILLUSTRATIONS BY J. A. STRIEBEL

by J. P. McEvoy

PROLOGUE.

When you see the little birds flitting here and there in the suburbs with tiny wisps of straw and paper in their beaks you may know it is spring and they are building their nests . . . when you see young couples flitting here and there in the suburbs with tiny wisps of paper in their hands—sometimes a first mortgage, sometimes a second, more often both—again you may know it is spring and they are building their nests.

SCENE I.—THE MODEL KITCHEN.

Mamie Potter and Red Miller, accompanied and convoyed by Ma, Pa, Bill, and the Baby, are attending the Own Your Home exposition, which consists of innumerable rooms, elaborately visualized, why every one should own a home, with hot and cold door knobs, disappearing beds and food, growing plants and interest, partial train service and payments, singing birds and radiators, open air and plumbing, annual assessments, monthly bills, and daily neighbors.

MA (to Mamie, as they inspect model kitchen):
Of all the different kind of ways
Of getting out of work these days;
Electric this and electric that,
No wonder some women are getting fat!

MAMIE (to Red, snuggling up):
I'll want that darling, cute machine
For washing dishes, what I mean!
(Yes, and one for cooking what goes on them, too, if she can.)
And lookit that thing that cooks by steam;
Isn't it precious? . . . . gee, that's a dream!

SALESMAN (galvanized into life. It takes so little to encourage them. Such faith in human kind! It is almost pathetic):
Now here's the very thing you wish.
Good for chicken, soup, or fish;
Takes a cut that's tough and crude,
Makes it taste like angel food.
Why, you don't know the way to cook
Unless you read this little book.

MA (with sarcasm born of cooking ten thousand meals):
Young man, I'd cooked for years and years
When you were damp behind the ears.

"There you can have a love nest all your own."

(Take that, young man! And those! And them! At any rate, he can tell Ma all about his kitchen cabinet that will save her 1,569 steps in one day, if she will only listen to him, but chances are she won't . . . why should she save 1,569 steps? What would she do with them when she had them?)

SCENE II.—BEAUTIFUL SUBURBIA.

(Pa and Bill have wandered away from Ma, Mamie, and Red and have been snared by the siren song of a salesman who is singing the joy and delight of Suburbia the Beautiful . . . the Baby, of course, is busy with his own affairs, which consists in making a painstaking tour of all the booths and gathering samples of all their advertising matter . . . who says advertising doesn't pay? . . . if you could only see the gladness on the faces of all the little children collecting armfuls of it to carry home never again could you say advertising doesn't pay . . .)

SALESMAN (making passionate address to assembled group):
Consider the horse! He can do more work than a man. But he cannot own anything. He cannot buy a home and retire in his old age with something to show for the work he did. But you can. If you don't you are no better than a horse.

"Makes it taste like angel food."

You're not as good in fact. He had no choice in the matter, but you have. (Murmurs of "That's right; you're right.)
There are only three necessities of life: food, clothing, and shelter. You do not rent your food, do you? No, you buy it. You do not rent your clothing, do you? No, you buy it. How about your shelter? (Here he points an accusing forefinger at Pa.) Do you rent it or buy it?

PA (hesitatingly):
Why, I rent, I suppose.

SALESMAN (earnestly):
Renting is unnatural. It is unsafe. It is wasteful. It is sinful. You are not a good citizen until you own a home of your own. You are not living; you are roosting. You are a floater, not a factor. If you are paying out one-fourth of your income every month for rent, you are wasting one year out of every four you live . . . throwing it away!
(Salesman stops for breath and audience takes advantage of armistice to begin sneaking away . . . meanwhile Red and Mamie come along, arm in arm.)

SALESMAN (with melting accents):
Suburbia is the best located highly restricted, choicest part of the Homeview Hills Addition . . .
(Practically all the remainder of the audience now leave en bloc. Salesman fixes Red and Mamie with his glittering eye and draws them into inclosure.)
Suburbia is the place for you. Come out to Suburbia, where the birds sing. They you can have a love nest all your own. (Makes magic pass over swooning couple who all but buy a house and lot before they come out of the coma.)

RED (indicating typical little dumbbell suburban house, designed by some architect who had heard rumors somewhere once of a something or other called colonial):
What does it cost for a house like that?
More than it costs to rent a flat?

SALESMAN (with all the fire of a Savonarola):
Ah, this charming little bungalow is what we call the Rosemary. Four rooms and a bath with a seven foot basement.
(Think of a Rosemary with a seven foot basement!)
Yes, sir, a full seven foot basement. And only one thousand dollars down and the balance in attractive payments.

RED (brightly):
Who pays them?

SALESMAN (ditto):
Why, you, of course.

RED (ditto again):
Well, what's so attractive about that?

SCENE III.—THE MODEL HOME.

(One of the features of the exhibition is a full size home in work, at present, but which will be finished by the time the exhibition is ready to close . . . it graphically illustrates what the poet meant when he said, "There is no place like home" . . . the parlor has disappeared, the dining room has vanished, the bedrooms are gone, the kitchen, once of matronly proportions, is now misses' or children's size with a range down to two burners and an oven about the size of a goiter . . .)

MA (to Pa with reminiscent tenderness):
The youngsters are planning their little nest;
Home loving hearts are the happiest.
I wish we were starting again, you know . . .

PA (gruffly, to hide real feelings):
Aw, don't get mushy; c'mon, let's go.

MAMIE (entering with Red and stopping before nursery exhibit):

"Pa, go get him! O, my baby!"

O, lookit that cute little nursery there!

RED (uneasily):
I always wanted a big leather chair.

MAMIE (who is not so easily derailed):
Look; two little cribs . . . how cute they're matched!

BILL (sarcastically, from the rear):
Don't count your chickens before they're hatched.
(A loud silence from Red and Mamie . . . snickers from Bill and Pa . . . Ma glares at Bill . . . suddenly a commotion in the crowd.)

VOICES: Lookit the baby on the roof. He'll fall. Look! Look! Save him.

MA (looking up and seeing the Baby, who had calmly climbed the ladder and is now perched perilously on the slanting roof twenty feet above the floor):
Pa, go get him! O, my baby! He'll fall off and get killed! Pa, go get him!
(But Pa has already started up the ladder. So has Bill. So has Red. Red, having started first, gets there first. Catches Baby by leg and tries to pull him off. Baby clings to roof. Lets go suddenly, nearly upsetting Red backwards. Red climbs down with Baby and gives him to Ma. Meanwhile Baby has not let loose of any of his precious catalogs.)

MA (kissing Baby feverishly):
I've seen enough of this here show.

PA (enthusiastically):
And so have I . . . c'mon; let's go.
(But Red and Mamie linger long after the others have left, making the absurd but lovable plans of youth and dreaming the brave dreams that are their own reward, though they never come true.)

And That's That—Until Next Sunday.

Patterns by Clotilde

1342 1326 1315

1342—Woman's dress—36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inch bust. Size 36 requires 5⅝ yards of 36, or 3½ yards of 54 inch material and 4¼ yards of 3 inch lining.

1326—Woman's one piece apron. Sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Size requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material.

1315—Child's rompers. Sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. Size 4 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

FOULARD silk is one of the prettiest and most comfortable dress materials imaginable, especially during the summer months. The surface has such a cool feeling and the texture, while light, is firm and has good wearing qualities. It would be an ideal silk for pattern No. 1342, with the surplice vest, extending into rather broad sash pieces, the long, rather full overdress, and the collar that ends in pointed tabs quite a little distance below the normal waist line.

There is an underwaist of some light weight lining, and this fastens down the front. To this the vest is attached, perforations and directions on the pattern envelope showing exactly how to put it on.

The skirt is plain and is attached to the lower edge of the underwaist.

Of course a printed foulard needs no embroidery to trim it, but an attractive manner of trimming would be to use some plain contrasting silk, say one of the colors in the figures, to face the skirt of the overdress and to line the sash and collar. This silk should also be used for deep facings in the sleeves.

A detachable short collar of fine net, with lace insets and edged with narrow lace, will be all that is needed to complete a lovely dress.

An excellent romper pattern is shown here, No. 1315. There is no better garment for a child's play hours. They are made of all sorts of materials, and finished in all sorts of ways. Some have no decoration whatever, while others are made gay and attractive by patchwork Mother Goose characters—cut from checked gingham and appliqued on a plain color, or vice versa; and some are finished with feather stitching, some with fancy cotton braid. Still others are seen made of rather fine checked gingham, with the collars and cuffs and pockets edged with the sheerest white ruffling about one inch wide. These are really most attractive. And the newest idea is to make tiny handkerchiefs of the rompers material. It should not be difficult to teach children to be careful of their clothes when they have play garments that are so pretty.

Aprons seem to grow gayer and more attractive all the time, and pattern No. 1326 is no exception. It is intended to be a slipon, and is cut in one piece. The pockets are quite unusual and the belt is an attractive feature, finishing as it does at each side of the front in pointed ends.

There are two short slashes each side of the front at the neck, and these, as well as all other edges, except the bottom, should be finished with a binding.

Unbleached muslin, cotton crêpe, chambray, or sateen would make up well, and the cuffs, pocket tops, belt, and bindings should be of figured chintz, cretonne, or percale.

A small piece of linen tape should be hemmed to the wrong side of the apron on each side, directly under the places where the buttons that hold the belt are to be sewed.

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Laugh About It.

"Dear Miss Blake: I was recently invited to go to an affair by some boys I know. It was arranged that we have seven couples, but we were not paired off. The tickets were bought and about three days before the affair the pairing off began. I had supposed I would go with A, but instead I received an invitation from B. Later I found it had come about in this way: B had invited another girl and she had refused. Then he told A he wanted me, which meant that I would play second fiddle. A did not wish to give me up, but they bet about it and B won. Should I go? I feel they are usurping my privilege and that they should have asked me whom I wanted, and not bet about me as if they were the controllers of my destiny. EVELYN."

I think you are right, but then as long as A did not invite you and B won on the bet, you might as well be a good sport and go along and have a good time and laugh about it.

Stick to Senreco and Your Teeth Will Stick to You

Have White, Radiant Teeth That Will Compel Unstinted Admiration.

Don't neglect your gums whatever else you do or you'll be sorry later on.

Keep them strong, sturdy and full of life. Bear in mind that a hearty plant won't grow in foul soil. Neither will unhealthy gums produce good teeth.

Your dentist is one of your best friends—don't forget that—see him often—many thousands of men and women are enjoying health today because of the dentists' knowledge and skill.

You can have white teeth so radiantly clean and fascinating and so free from film or coating that they will compel unstinted admiration. You can have firm, healthy gums with no taint of disease if you will only visit your dentist occasionally and use Senreco tooth paste night and morning.

Senreco is a dentist's formula, a combination so perfect that, besides being the finest cleanser of teeth and the most enjoyable of dentifrices, is an active enemy of the vicious germs of pyorrhea—that all too common and abhorrent disease that attacks the gums and causes them to bleed, recede and grow soft, tender and spongy.

Get a tube of Senreco today—the good results will astonish you—in just a few days your teeth will radiate purity. Stick to Senreco and your teeth will stick to you.

World's New Wonder Rugs

At Unheard Of Prices for Fine Floor Coverings

Pliable Soft and smooth as silk. Lie flat and do not curl or creep.

Fireproof Tests have proved that Kimlark Rugs will not ignite.

Sanitary Easily washed and dirt cannot sift through them.

Reversible Both sides finished, giving two rugs in one. Double wear.

Soft and free from slivers and wiry barbs.

Durable The rough scraping of chairs and the tread of heavy feet do not harm them.

By a wonderful discovery fine rug-making has been revolutionized. Through our marvelous new methods the most beautiful rugs in new weaves and new patterns are produced. Features are created never before known. There is nothing like Kimlark Rugs. They are, we believe, the world's finest low-priced floor covering.

KIMLARK RUGS

—the world's new wonder rugs—are handsome in design, with a perfect harmony of color that will blend with any scheme of decoration. A special treatment causes the colors to wear indefinitely. They are soft, pliable and lie flat without curling or creeping.

Kimlark Rugs are three-ply in thickness. Dirt cannot sift through. They are waterproof and easily cleaned with soap and water. Severe tests have proved them to be fireproof. The reverse side is finished plain, which means double wear, giving two rugs for the price of one.

Kimlark Rugs are noiseless and soft to the tread. There are no slivers or wiry barbs to injure tender feet. Long and satisfactory wear is assured. A secret process insures leather-like durability. Note the Kimlark features. Read the descriptions.

Kimlark Prices Astonishingly Low

You will be amazed when you learn the extremely low prices of Kimlark Rugs. Never before has it been possible to get rugs of such quality at these prices. Only by our new methods of treatment and through the use of our improved automatic looms are such prices possible.

There is a Kimlark Rug for every floor everywhere. Living rooms, dining rooms, sleeping rooms, sun parlors, halls, porches, libraries, office buildings, hospitals, etc., all are suited in these exquisite, new floor coverings. Sizes range from rugs of smallest size to those suitable for large rooms or halls.

Prices are in many cases less than half what you have been accustomed to pay for floor coverings of equal quality.

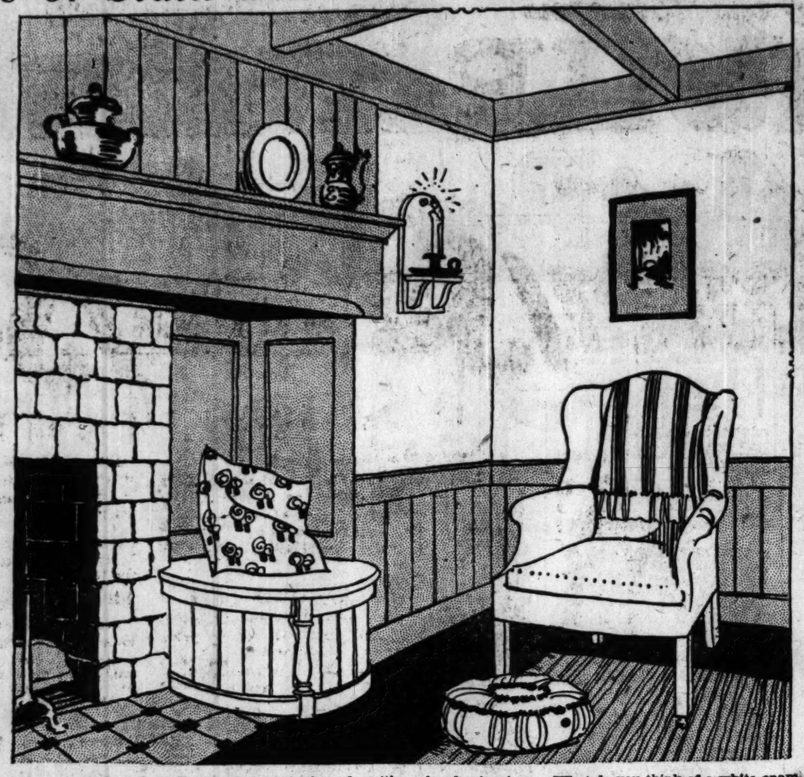
Combinations of Stain and Paint Will Relieve Floor Monotony

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped addressed envelope for personal reply.



ISN'T it remarkable that fashions in some things change with such rapidity that we can hardly keep pace with them, and in others they remain stodgily the same from year to year?

Why should oak floors be a foregone conclusion? Why the everlasting tan for floor color? "Do you remember way back when" quarter sawed golden oak furniture was the envy of every young bride's heart? Golden oak is now as much a thing of the past as the old oaken bucket. Yet the oaken floor persists.

My quarrel with it is that it is often too light in the color scale for the side walls and furniture. The accepted rule in decoration is to have the floors darkest in tone, the side walls lighter, and the ceiling lightest. When unstained oak is used this rule can be adhered to only by covering the oak first we insist on having it, then we cover it up with rugs because we want color.

Why not incorporate color into the floor itself? This could be done with either stain or paint, or both. A combination of stain and paint that I have recently seen, in an original young person's room, appealed to my fancy as, perhaps, it will to yours. The ceiling is old ivory, the side walls papered in an all-over pattern squarish design, colored in henna, champagne, and iron gray. The casement curtains of champagne silk gauze are striped with henna threads. The floor, stained gray and waxed, is ornamented with what at first glance seems to be twelve inch tiles placed at regular intervals three feet apart. On closer observation the tiles prove to be painted with enamel. They repeat the colors of the side walls. The woodwork is in old ivory enamel. The furniture, with natural mahogany frames, is upholstered in deep champagne colored pressed mohair velvet. A small rug—the only one in the room—before the yellow marble at both ends with a band, showing mantel is of soft dull green, bordered henna, champagne, and iron gray.

What do you think of a white enameled floor? It really isn't half bad. Of course, it must be carpeted, with only the border left showing.

In a summer home, far from the dirt and grime of soft coaled cities, I have seen a most striking living room with such a floor. The stairway leading up to a balcony in the living room is painted all white, and has a narrow stair carpet of Du Barry rose. The floor is almost entirely covered with Du Barry rose carpeting. The walls are paneled with white enameled wood, the upper panels being decorated with motifs, painted in color. The vaulted ceiling, which is delicately tinted in the palest imaginable Du Barry pink, is decorated with great medallions in color. The furniture is of old oak, with cushions of deep rose velvet. The leaded windows, which are double the usual height, are uncurtained, giving out on a view over the water.

Extremely striking is a music room, the uncarpeted floor of which is stained with violet stain. No rugs are allowed to mar the acoustic properties of the room—nor are draperies permitted. The grand piano is in a black frame, and the pictures in the room are simply framed in narrow black molding. The side walls are light rust color, and the woodwork is old ivory. The old ivory ceiling catches a mauve reflection from the floor. The furniture is of old fashioned red mahogany, several of the larger pieces being upholstered in midnight blue velour. Incidental vases and lamp shades are of chamois yellow, and two bowls are filled with scarlet flowers. The violet floor is waxed, and its highly polished surface is a veritable invitation to dance upon it.

In a country cottage, where little money could be spent and unique results were sought, the floor, partially covered with a rag rug, was painted clear bright yellow. The wainscoting, woodwork, and rafters were done in leaf green, and the side walls and ceiling in pale lemon color. The big chair and floor cushions were covered with peacock blue linen. The curtains were in yellow chintz, figured in ox blood and olive. The yellow on the floor and on the inside of the window frames had exactly the effect of a floor of sunshine.

Every Detail Plays Its Part

The pleasing proportions of Almco Lamps, the perfect color harmony prevailing throughout, are the result of designing the entire lamp as a single unit, in which base, shade, fixtures, cords, tassels, and every detail of trimming play an important part in creating an impression of beauty. The hidden details that make for strength are worked out with equal care; nothing is omitted that will give Almco Lamps long life and beauty. You can find Almco Lamps in the store of any dealer who specializes in fine furnishings, and identify them by the blue Almco tag or Almco label on base and shade.

ALMCO LAMPS

Style

Every mother wants her baby's carriage to have that subtle air of smart distinction which is commonly termed "style." The aristocratic appearance of Lloyd Loom Carriages is immediately noticeable in the exclusive "shell" design of the bodies—a graceful bowl shape, woven of endless wicker, with a continuous sweeping curve from side to front, unbroken by corners or by concealed short ends of wicker.

It was Marshall B. Lloyd who brought within the reach of every mother these carriages of exceptional style. He invented the method and loom which produce Baby Carriages and Wicker Furniture thirty times faster and finer than the old hand woven products. These inventions cut labor costs, enabling us to weave the finest wickers, use the best materials, employ the most skilled workmen, add the latest refinements and still sell our wicker products at very moderate prices.

Your dealer will explain the Fifth Wheel Reversible Gear; Oil Tempered Springs; patented Double Spoked and Double Rimmed Wheels; patented Automatic Hood Adjustment—features that add immeasurably to the beauty, convenience, comfort and stability of Lloyd Carriages.

Write for Lloyd booklet showing Lloyd Loom Carriages and Loom Woven Furniture, for sale by leading furniture and department stores.

EXHAUSTED NERVE FORCE CAUSES THOUSANDS TO MAKE FAILURES IN LIFE

—Doctor Tells What to Do

When your nerve force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result, all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear, such as nervous irritability, heart palpitation, indigestion, pains in the front or in the back of the head, more especially at the base of the brain, and a general weakened, run-down condition. In such cases it's worse than foolish to waste your time taking stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs. Your starving nerve cells must have more nerve force, the same as a starving person must have food. This is best accomplished by increasing the activity and power of the nerve-force making organs, the principal one of which is the blood. This can be quickly and most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron, which not only increases the activity of the blood making organs, but it feeds true red blood food directly to the blood itself, thereby helping to create millions of new red blood cells. This wonderfully increases the power of the blood to help manufacture new nerve force, the same as enriching the soil increases its power to grow more wheat, corn or oats.

If you are suffering from nerve force exhaustion, you can quickly and easily prove to yourself the power of Nuxated Iron to help overcome your condition and make you strong and vigorous again by the following simple test: Make a written memorandum of all your symptoms before you start, then at the end of two weeks, go over your symptoms again and place a check mark after any that are left, and you can at once see what it has done for you. If you have not obtained most surprising results, all and even more than you expect, the manufacturers will promptly refund your money.

MEN'S FASHIONS

Fancy Pattern in Tweeed — Cloth Hat with Rolled Brim — Grosgrain Bands Are Liked — Cap with Back Decoration

SPRING BRINGS NEW HEADGEAR

NEW YORK — [Special Correspondence.] — Consideration of the well known pieces of headwear such as the derby, the soft felt, or the high silk hat does not by any means see us finished with the types of covering man chooses for his head, and with spring officially here there begins once again the trend towards the negligee which permits our friend the average citizen to contemplate two new articles of headgear which the passing of winter once more brings into style—the cloth hat and the cap.

In discussing the cloth hat it might be well to realize that it is no longer entirely a strictly negligee affair as it once was. Formerly this hat was reserved almost exclusively by the best dressers for wear with sport clothes or for the country. One of the reasons, perhaps, that its vogue did not spread to the cities is a criticism, a just one, leveled at it—that it did not hold its shape. Manufacturers of today have overcome this and, what is more, some of them model them exactly like the felt hat, with a rolled brim and a grosgrain band. These can be worn by the most particular dressers in spring and summer on the city streets with business clothes.

A dressy effect is attained by matching the cloth hat to the top coat; a gray tweed hat, let us say, with a gray tweed coat. Those who dislike the fedora shape and affect the nonchalant college crush in winter will find they are able to follow it through with the cloth hats, as some of them are made with the top of the hat cut and sewn in quarter sections so that they may be shaped at will.

However, the cloth hat was originally designed as a hat for the sport clothes of the country or country club, matching the knickerbocker suits, the tones harmonizing wherever possible. And it is in this sense that the cloth hat will probably find its main use.

Light colors are the most popular ones, sometimes with the already mentioned contrasting grosgrain bands, such as light gray with a black band and light shades of tan with brown bands. The more informal cloth hat seen on the golf courses makes use of a self band.

The greatest variety is possible in the color mixtures of these hats. There are tweeds, shetland wools, homespuns, with linen and silk for hot weather. The first three are made up in all the various shades of the material, close and loose weaves, with sometimes bits of gay color sprinkled through the material.

The cap which makes its appearance at the same time with the cloth hat is a more complicated creation, both in its materials and its uses. Unlike the cloth hat of today, the cap should be reserved entirely for sport or country wear. The only real excuse for the cap in the city is for motoring or worn with sport clothes to or from the golf links or tennis courts.

The cap is more comfortable and useful for golfing and motoring than is the cloth hat, for on the links the visor of the cap shades the eyes from the sun, which the roll brim of the hat often fails to do, and in the motor car the cap is impervious to the hat-removing breezes kicked up by the speed of the machine.

The answer to the obvious question why men wear cloth hats motoring and golfing when the cap is handier, and in the latter case seems to look better, offering likewise the advantage in some cases of the flexible, unbreakable visor, allowing it to be stuffed into the pocket, is simply that some men are not the type to take kindly to caps.

There are, of course, differently shaped caps, and it is always possible to pick one that will be more becoming than others. There is, for instance, one model which tapers towards the front and which would be recommended to a man with a thin face, etc.

Opinion is divided as to the popularity of the one piece and the eight piece cap respectively. Two years ago they were practically all one piece, but now the eight piece is back in favor with the meticulous dressers, and in the east seems to predominate.

As to linings, it is a fifty-fifty proposition, with the unlined ones taped at the seams. The unlined, of course, are a great deal cooler and in hot weather would be sought for that reason. But, on the other hand, the lined caps retain their shape a little better. When the cap is intended for motoring it is better to invest in the lined variety, as it is cool in a moving car anyway.

The tendency today is towards full caps. The conservative cap is quite plain with no plaits or buckles, etc. As in soft hats, tweeds are the predominating materials, often with a herringbone design. Checks, if not too large, are accepted. As in the cloth hats, it is well to match the knickers if it is to be used for golf or the top coat if for motoring. Although the plain and undecorated variety is pronounced the most conservative, the high class caps sometimes have a plait or so in the back or concede a point, as indicated on the extreme right of the drawing. Those who feel they can afford to invest in the neighborhood of $8 in a cap can get a beautiful one piece model made out of genuine camel's hair. These caps come in soft tan and brown shades and are a tribute to the animal from which they come.

THAT FIRST LOVE AFFAIR

What was your "puppy love" affair? Can you tell it now without a wrench of the heart—with a laugh, say? If so—The Tribune will pay $5 for each story published on "My Puppy Love" story." Write on one side of the paper and make your story brief. Address Puppy Love Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

LOTHARIO LOSES OUT.

HER folks were rich. I knew they were, because they had a stone deer in the yard. My folks were also well to do, but we could sport no such decorative grandeur, and every time I passed her place that unblinking animal sent terror to my heart, because I realized that a girl reared in such luxury would never look at me.

We both went to the same school. I was 13 and she was nine, and when I looked across the room and her bright black eyes met mine I ran in high gear the rest of the day.

I sold papers and it was by the closest saving that I managed to save enough money to buy her a weekly stick of red striped peppermint candy.

One day she ate so much of the candy that she became ill and was sent home from school. An investigation followed and the other boys gave our secret away. I was held up to ridicule and was solemnly warned by the teacher and her father that such demonstration of my youthful affection must cease.

I knew what I would do. I would run away and come back a great man, and I would buy her a bigger stone deer than her old father ever saw. He could just see if I didn't. My plans were perfected. Serious thought of my home folks never entered my mind.

I stayed after school in order to steal some remembrance from her desk to carry with me on my long journey. I found it—a soft little stocking rolled up in a tiny ball. It had been brought for a blackboard eraser. I laid my head on her desk and hot tears of misunderstood youth rolled down my cheeks. I opened her arithmetic, left on the desk, and there I wrote "Good by, I am going to the Klondyke. Fals woman, you will never see me moer."

I did run away. I got as far as thirty miles, and then my father came for me. But it was never the same any more. I was out of school two weeks, but she had another beau, and after a brief space of grief I, too, became engrossed in other charms.

Twenty years passed before I met her again, and one remark she make on that occasion I shall never forget. She turned to our mutual friend and said, "Get Bill to tell you about his quick trip to the Klondyke." K. A. B.

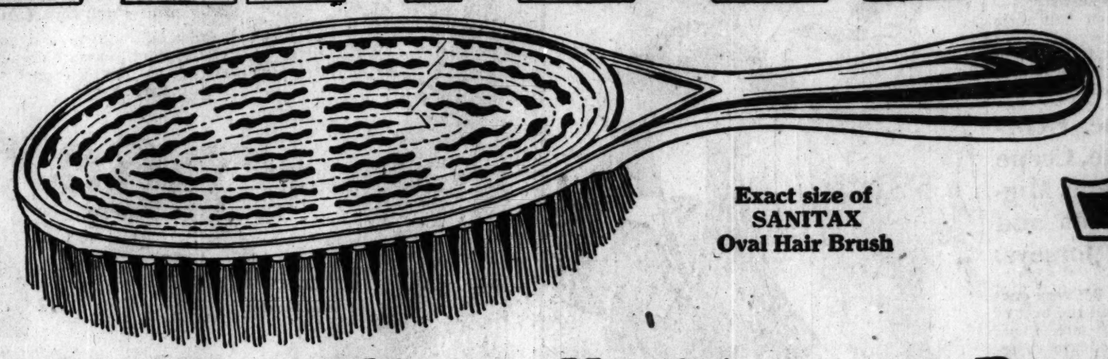
A Better and Cleaner Hair Brush

SANITAX



Exact size of SANITAX Oval Hair Brush

Keeps Your Hair Clean, Healthy and Beautiful

The SANITAX is the ONE Hair Brush that can be thoroughly washed, boiled or sterilized, every day, if necessary, without the least harm to the bristles or the frame.

Clean, Healthy Hair is Possible only with a Clean Brush

Brushing your hair with an unclean brush is harmful to the hair. And the SANITAX is the only hair brush that can be washed absolutely clean—boiled and sterilized, if necessary, every day without injury. The open-work construction admits sunlight and air in every nook and cranny, while water runs right through. There is no wood to warp or glue to dissolve. The open metal back and best quality of bristles, hand-drawn with non-rustable wire, make SANITAX different from all other brushes.

Respect Your Hair as You do Your Face

You would not care to put a towel to your face that is as unclean as your ordinary hair brush. Combing your hairbrush does not clean it of the dust, dirt and oily grime that rapidly accumulate. If you would keep your hair sweet and clean that it may grow luxuriantly and naturally you should brush it with a brush that you can clean thoroughly, every day. The SANITAX is the only brush that you can clean every nook and corner of every day, without injury.

SANITAX

A Distinctive Idea in Brushes

Meaning Cleanliness, Comfort and Convenience

All in One

This is the age of sanitation. Personal cleanliness is the greatest asset to health, happiness and attractive appearance. One cannot keep one's person clean in unclean surroundings, or in unclean apparel or by the use of unclean toilet articles. The SANITAX Hairbrush leads the way to greater hair cleanliness, greater hair comfort and greater hair luxuriance because it is the first hair brush that it is possible to cleanse absolutely and often, without harm to the brush, and without trouble to yourself.

Say "SANITAX" when you want a better hairbrush.

Your SANITAX is at your dealer's NOW.

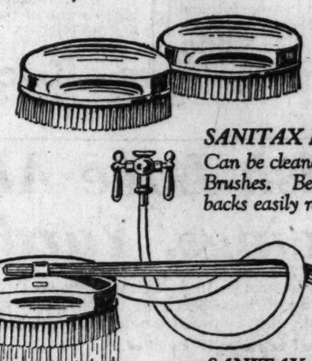
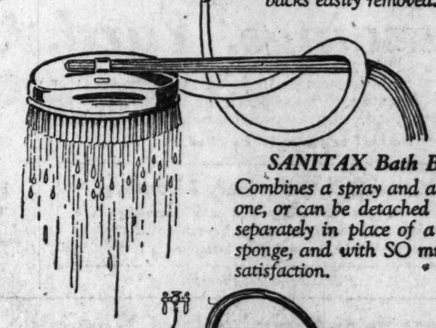
It costs no more than any other good hairbrush, but it is worth much more. Ask for a SANITAX today. It is "Patented." To be had wherever high grade toilet articles are sold.

SANITAX No. 426
Three-quarters actual size, showing method of cleaning with boiling hot water.



SANITAX Military Brushes
Can be cleaned like all Sanitax Brushes. Beautifully nickelled backs easily removed.



SANITAX Bath Brush
Combines a spray and a brush in one, or can be detached and used separately in place of a cloth or sponge, and with SO much more satisfaction.

SANITAX Shampoo Brush
Saves time and exertion and cleans the hair and scalp perfectly.

The Fans Cry Out! They Want That "Something Different"

"MONEY TO BURN."

Produced by Fox. Directed by Rowland V. Lee.

THE CAST.

"Lucky" Garrity.....William Russell
Countess Vecchi.....Sylvia Breamer
Ted Powell.....Hallam Cooley
Eppings, the butler.....Harvey Clark
Count Vecchi.....Otto Matieson

By Mae Tinee.

THIS tells of a chap who had money to burn;
So vurr' much coin had he, he gave not a durn.
He was bored with the market that ground out his dough;
He longed for seclusion. Where to go? Where to go?
A friend of this chap was a real estate bird;
Of the chap's great ambition to rest he had heard,
And he sold to our hero
(For seventy-five thousand dollars, with which I can find nothing to rhyme with)
A place in the country far enough from the town
That the noise of the ticker the distance would drown.
Arrived at the estate, the happy new host
Was confronted by spirits—met ghost after ghost.
Met auch (must use foreign languages when English won't make the meter mete)
—Met auch (it's German)—met auch a fair lady and her sick papa.
They HAD been the owners, but now—O, la la!
Our hero forgot he had money and—well,
Forgot he had troubles, that life had seemed—well—hell. (The ministers all say it, you know they do.)
At once all the birdies started right in to sing;
The winter of life turned to beyewtiful spring.
(I think I am QUITE a good poet.)
But more of this filium I really can't spill—
'Twould spoil your enjoyment, make your interest nil.
Be informed, though, however, it COULD have been worse.
And also been better. That's true and it's terse.
But it stacks up quite well as a fair program picture,
And now as a poet I feel I must quitcher.

WILLIAM RUSSELL.

Putting Romance in the Background.

It seems, doesn't it, as if the day of the merely pretty actress and the Adonis leading man was about over? Wherever you go you hear people wondering why the producers don't get hep to themselves and put out pictures featuring that fine old artist, Theodore Roberts, for instance; why, with unlimited resources to draw from, they don't occasionally produce a tale of the sea with salt tang and action that shall not be made entirely supplementary to gooey love scenes, wherein a heroine with sensatinal eyelashes and becarmined lips is saved in the last reel from a pirate host by a tall gentleman whose principal experience with water has been in his bath.

SYLVIA BREAMER.

They want to know why we can't have more adventure pictures. I was talking to a man the other day who mentioned the fact that a certain magazine which buys only stories of adventure and caters solely to a reading public that wants live wire fiction of this type has increased its issues from one to three a month.

"I'd go to the movies if I didn't have to see twaddle," he said. "But I'm sick and tired of mawkish sentiment. Don't I like beautiful women? Sure I do. But I'd like to see one of them really climb a mountain once for the pure joy of the thing and not because there was a man at the top. I'd just as soon see a picture based on a story of domestic life if it were possible to show the man and his wife in complete accord, but I'm tired of being shown that all husbands are either weak or wicked; that all wives are abused or faithless; that every little domicile has an 'other woman' or man hovering in the offing to swoop in reel three."

The man in question, who is a man of intelligence, talked steadily for three-quarters of an hour on the subject. He ended wearily by saying that he supposed his hopes were futile, for where could be found a director who had ever slept out under the stars or killed a lion?

Of course, I think he was a little rabid. We must have our romances, for love makes the world go round and we can't ignore it. Married life is far from being one purling stream of equanimity, and there are boulevard vamps, as courts of domestic relations show. Smooth villains prowl on the trail of the virtuous housewife, and prohibition and divorce have their places in real life, so in reel life we must show 'em up.

Just the same, there's no dodging the fact that the motion picture public is crying for "something different." And it seems to me what it needs is a vacation among the woods and waters. I think folks want to be relieved for a time of the final clutch and fadeout. No reason, of course, why a man mayn't love and marry a girl if he wants to, but he doesn't need to make such a divil of an amount of fuss about it.

They Want 'Em and They Need 'Em.

What's the matter with you, anyhow, that you don't applaud any more when the flag goes by in the pictures? It's the same old flag, you know, even if the war IS over.

The following letter came in the other day:

"Dear Miss Tinée: I answered the advertisement of a school that teaches scenario writing, and one day a man came to see me. He said that my letter had interested the heads of the school so that they had sent him all the way from the coast to see me. He said my letter showed I had unusual ability and he wanted me to let them show me how to make money.

"The man told me that there was no possibility of my getting any scenarios accepted except through their school, as they had contracts with all the big companies to only take scenarios recommended by the school.

"Now, Miss Tinée, it sounded like the bunk to me, but I thought I would write and ask you. Hasn't anybody a chance to get a scenario accepted if same is mailed directly to the producing company?"

Of course it's the bunk. The reliable companies want new ideas (and heaven knows NEED new ideas) and are ready and willing to pay for them.

And I may be a trusting little thing, never having submitted a scenario, but I don't believe reliable concerns will filch the idea and send the scenario back, any more than will a reliable publishing concern do the same with a story.

So if you have an idea, and it's a good one, go ahead and send it out. Fame and fortune CAN come to you without the aid of a school of scenario writing.

BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES

By Eye Witness.

Nineteenth Paper—Gibbon's "Rome," the Grand Cañon of Literature.

THE BOOK—

The most perfect historical composition that exists in any language.
FREDERIC HARRISON.

AND THE THEME.

Rome is the central lake in which all the streams of ancient history lose themselves, and out of which all the streams of modern history flow. Rome is the bridge between the past and the present. . . . The decline and fall of the Roman empire—the greatest, perhaps, and most awful scene in the history of mankind. . . . A revolution which will ever be remembered and is still felt by the nations of the earth.
EDWARD GIBBON.

THE most important thing for us to consider in talking together of these acclaimed masterpieces is not their grandeur but their urgency. Mankind has united to pronounce them great. But do they press upon us for a reading? Do they hold a meaning for us, and to us with the living voice speak a living message?

It is so that Gibbon speaks.

Why! 'twas only the other day that a prophecy he made more than a century and a quarter ago came vividly to fulfillment.

If you remember anything that Edward Gibbon ever wrote you will remember that passage of prophecy. It comes in his "Memoirs of My Life and Writings," one of the most entertaining autobiographies in our language because it is all about a purpose and what came of it, and it moves thus:

Our immortal Fielding was of the younger branch of the Earls of Denbigh, who draw their origin from the Counts of Habsburg. . . . Far different have been the fortunes of the English and German divisions of the family of Habsburg: the former, the knights and sheriffs of Leicestershire, have slowly risen to the dignity of a peerage; the latter, the Emperors of Germany and Kings of Spain, have threatened the liberty of the old and invaded the treasures of the new world. The successors of Charles the Fifth may disdain their brethren of England; but the romance of Tom Jones, that exquisite picture of human manners, will outlive the palace of the Escurial and the imperial eagle of the house of Austria.

Turn now to the lately published Memoirs of Prince Ludwig Windischgraetz. Here is his laconic entry on the crash of the dual monarchy and the flight of the emperor-king:

In March, 1919, the King took up his abode in Switzerland. The last of the Habsburgs returned to where the first of his race had come from.

Entrancing are the ironies of history.

Ancestors of this Prince Ludwig Windischgraetz fought and wrought alongside the founders of the greatness of the Habsburgs six centuries ago. It remained for their scion in our time to sit with Charles the Last in the deserted palace of Schönbrunn and to write finis to the chapter. The Escurial still stands, but the "imperial eagle of the house of Austria" is in the dust—outlived by "that exquisite picture of human manners."

Is Gibbon's history only a majestic specimen of a courtly and disused style? Is it a marmoreal relic—no life there any more but only stateliness of outline and the mute and austere beauty of something that spoke once with a commanding voice? Most persons like to think so. It gives them an excuse for avoiding a book that does indeed demand some application.

But they are wrong.

Gibbon's theme was the disintegration, the shattering, the final collapse of the last great republic until ours was born. His story is the story of the final failure of what was for many ages the most successful enterprise the mind of man had ever conceived or his hand had ever guided. That story comprehends more than thirteen centuries of human success and failure. The teller of the tragic tale is ever concrete, ever specific, ever instructive. Open his book almost at random. What is this on the first page of Chapter V.—that chapter in which he is going to lead us into the scandal of the sale of the empire (in the year 193) to Didius Julianus by the Prastorian guards. At the top and bottom of that page I read these instructive observations:

The power of the sword is more sensibly felt in an extensive monarchy than in a small community. It has been calculated by the ablest politicians that no State, without being soon exhausted, can maintain above the hundredth part of its members in arms and idleness. . . . The tyrant of a single town, or small district, would soon discover that a hundred armed followers were a weak defense against ten thousand peasants or citizens; but a hundred legions, or ten soldiers will command with despotic sway, ten millions of subjects. And a body of ten or fifteen thousand guards will strike terror into the most numerous populace that ever crowded the streets of an immense capital.

Does that give you something fresh and suggestive—and old and authoritative—in connection with militarism?

Once more, take that passage which brings Chapter III. to a close—that chapter in which he bears in on—on whom?—on you and me the peril inherent in the vaunted oneness of Europe—of the known world, indeed—in the age of the Antonines. That was about the last quarter of the second century of our era. He begins this passage with the declaration that the division of Europe into a number of independent states, connected, however, with each other by the general resemblance of religion, language, and manners, is productive of the most beneficial consequences to the liberty of mankind. He points out the fact that a modern tyrant, who found naught to restrain him, either in his own sense of what is right or in his care for the good opinion of his own people, would soon hear something to his disadvantage from his neighbors across his frontiers—as our friends the Germans did to their undoing when they crossed the Belgian frontier. He adds that the victim of such a monarch would promptly be given honorable refuge by those neighbors, that among them he would be able to earn his livelihood and make a new fame—as the Germans who came to our shores after the revolution of 1848 signally did—but, he tells us, all this merciful way out would be closed if the world groaned under absolute unity of administration. His conclusion of the whole matter is as vivid and as poignant as a passage in a tale of adventure:

The slave of imperial despotism, whether he was condemned to drag his gilded chain in Rome and the senate, or to wear out a life of exile on the barren rock of Seriphus or the frozen banks of the Danube, expected his fate in silent despair. To resist was fatal, and it was impossible to fly. On every side he was encompassed with a vast extent of sea and land, which he could never hope to traverse without being discovered, seized, and restored to his irritated master. Beyond the frontiers his anxious view could discover nothing, except the ocean, inhospitable deserts, hostile tribes of barbarians, of fierce manners and unknown language, or dependent kings, who would gladly purchase the emperor's protection by the sacrifice of an obnoxious fugitive.

Now, for the sake of being concrete and for the sake of avoiding the familiar and tedious admonition that "you ought to read Gibbon," this little paper has tried first to indicate to those who own the book, as almost everybody does, but who have never looked into it—as almost nobody does—why they might like to look into it. Having been thus self-contained, let the little article now exalt and extol Gibbon in the traditional manner. That manner is not an affectation or a pose. You, if you are unfamiliar with the book, will surrender to the tradition when you come really to know the book. You will say then, as the writer of the little paper does now, that this colossal work is at once the most extensive and most resplendent book of information in existence. It is monumental not merely because it is big but because it is majestic. It is momentous not because it is long but because it is alive. It deals with the heroes, the giants, the ogres of humankind. It tells of the leaders who, when you come to think of it, were maneuvering our forefathers—whether we be the lazzaroni and the peddlers from the foreign quarter in an American city or the staid descendants from some North German or mid-England family of yeomen—were maneuvering our forefathers, I say, from conquests on the shores of North Africa to other conquests or to subjections, on the misty frontiers of a land that we today call Scotland.

The first three names mentioned on the first page of this book are Nerva, Trajan, and Hadrian; the last two are Raphael and Michael Angelo. Nerva, A. D. 96; Michael Angelo, whose work we of today travel across the wide sea to behold, dying A. D. 1564. Between Nerva and Michael Angelo lie nearly fifteen centuries, and the pen of Edward Gibbon has touched them all to life; has made them, if we will heed him, our possession and our lesson. Let us measure him, if only for the satisfaction of curiosity, by rule of thumb:

His story, ever tireless, ever curious, ever moving in the most stately prose our language has compassed, covers nearly 4,000 large octavo pages, not counting its machinery of prefaces and index. That index fills 143 double-column pages in fine print. The events which took place from the time his story begins, not all of which he covered, nor, by the scheme of his work, was obligated to cover, fill thirteen double-column pages of the Encyclopedia Britannica's great chronology, one of the most valuable compilations in print. (It may be found under the word "Chronology.") But the narrative of Gibbon, the actual movement toward doom and fall, may be said to begin with the opening of the reign of Commodus in the year 180, and the empire's debacle may, roughly, be said to have come with the fall of Constantinople in the year 1453. Thus nearly thirteen centuries of movement.

Thirteen centuries of the laws, the literature, the social systems, the religions of our remote forefathers; thirteen centuries of their methods of city and of road building, of their errors, their cruelties, their ameliorations one toward another; thirteen centuries of the high personalities that guided them and of the base men who exploited and betrayed them; thirteen centuries of their wars, their tactics, their engineering; thirteen centuries of their constitutions, their general trends and tendencies and their idiosyncrasies that make us today what we are and of those subtle influences that still bewilder us while they mold us.

'Tis a panorama.

Sometimes I think of this book as a kind of Grand Cañon of the Colorado of historical literature—a book vast, splendid, intricate, seeming at first to unfold only chaos, but, by its mapping of trails that are safe to the foot, by its charting of subterranean rivers that lead to the open sea, by its pointing to the sunlit peaks of human aspiration and by its warning of the depths of human degradation has made itself a precious thing to struggling and bewildered men if they will but heed.

Next Sunday—Izaak Walton's "The Complete Angler."

Orchestra Series Ends This Week; News of the World of Music

By Edward Moore.

MR. STOCK and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will bid formal farewell to their audiences this week. Not that they will disappear from view entirely. They will be around for a full week during the music festival in Evanston next month, and unless there is a reversal of former habit, the orchestra, most of it, will spend ten weeks of the heated term at Ravinia. But the last subscription concerts of the season will be played this week at Orchestra hall.

FREDERICK STOCK.
[Sykes Photo.]

It is one of the conventions of an orchestral season that neither its end nor its beginning shall contain such extraneous incidents as a soloist or a new composition. Neither is necessary. At the first concert of the season the patrons are busy welcoming back the musicians and adjusting themselves for twenty-eight weeks of fine music. The final observance is a farewell that generally manages to become almost ceremonial in its fervor.

For the last concert Mr. Stock will play this list: Two overtures—at the beginning Berlioz's "Carnaval Romain," at the end Tschaikowsky's "1812"; a symphony, Brahms' fourth; and, pieces of lesser dimensions, Dukas' "L'Apprenti Sorcier" and Wagner's "Siegfried Idyl," the last having to do not with the composer's opera of that name but with the arrival on this planet of his son.

The first program, Oct. 14 of last fall, had this: Two overtures—at the beginning Beethoven's "Leonore," No. 3, at the end Wagner's "Tannhäuser"; a symphony, Tschaikowsky's fifth; and, pieces of lesser dimensions, Dohananyi's Suite for Orchestra and Georg Schumann's "Dance of Nymphs and Satyrs" from "Amor and Psyche." With proved and trusted music such as this, the orchestra can go far in the way of stirring interpretation, and the audience can follow it all the way, since no effort need be diverted into the attempt of comprehending anything new.

And so passes until the middle of next October Chicago's most justifiable claim to stand for the highest in music.

Gordon String Quartet Bows Wednesday.

The Gordon String quartet, newly organized, will make its first public appearance Wednesday afternoon at Orchestra hall foyer. The new body desires to revive the traditions of the former Chicago Symphony orchestra quartet, also to do for chamber music what the orchestra does for symphonic music—namely: to present works of all nations and all periods of the highest standards.

Jacques Gordon, the first violin, is the concert master of the orchestra. At one time he was a member of the Berkshire quartet and has played in chamber music concerts with Harold Bauer and Benna Moiseiwitsch. Henry Sellinger, second violin, occupies a chair among the first violins of the orchestra and came here from Minneapolis, where he gave concerts with the Sellinger trio. Clarence Evans, viola, has been a member of the San Francisco, Detroit, and Berkshire quartets and is now among the violas of the orchestra. Nahum Benditzky is a newcomer to Chicago, making his first appearance as cello soloist at Orchestra hall in January and having played various chamber music concerts and recitals in January.

The initial program will include the Dohananyi quartet, op. 15; Three Idylls, by Frank Bridge; and the Haydn quartet, op. 76, No. 2.

The musical school of Olivet institute will appeal to the generosity of the public on Tuesday afternoon through the medium of a musical to be given at the home of Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, 1524 Lake Shore drive. The program will be given by Winifred Lamb (Mrs. Louis Boysen), Mrs. Thomas Prindiville, Jacques Gordon, Rudolph Reuter, Patricia Collinge (Mrs. James Nichols Smith), and Arthur Kraft.

WINIFRED LAMB.
[Drake Studio Photo.]

Located in one of the city's most congested and poverty stricken foreign districts, the Olivet school provides individual instruction to hundreds of children to whom the musical door would otherwise be closed. The principal nationalities represented are Italian, Sicilian, Austrian, Bohemian, and Hungarian. By the development of the musical talent frequently found among these peoples, the school is not only a home of art but an effective agency for Americanization.

The school is equipped with eleven pianos for the purpose of affording daily practice privileges to pupils who have none in their homes; also with violins and other instruments for the same purpose. It has a staff of three, with six other instructors who come for a few hours each week. By careful economies it has been made possible to provide a forty weeks' course of instruction with practice privileges at a cost of $54. Of this the fees paid by pupils cover approximately one-half. An annual deficit is consequently inevitable, and in order to meet it Evan Evans, a vice chairman of the advisory council, has arranged this musical.

Mrs. Albert J. Ochsner is chairman of the council; Mrs. William M. Thompson, Mrs. Louise Yager, and Mr. Evans, vice chairmen; Mrs. R. G. Stowel, recording secretary; David L. Goodwillie, treasurer; other members, Mrs. Robert Peck Bates, B. F. Affleck, Mrs. A. F. Callahan, Eric De Lamarter, Mrs. Joseph N. Eisendrath, Miss Phyllis Fergus, Mrs. Clarence Hough, Mrs. William H. Hubbard, Harold F. McCormick, Frank E. Morton, Mrs. Dwight C. Orcutt, Mrs. George L. Robinson, Mrs. Byrde Kitson Schwarz, Mrs. Cora Willis Ware, Miss Henriette Weber, and Mrs. Arthur B. Wells.

Pity the Poor Musical Manager!

Wonder what local musical managers think about is suggested free of charges as a cartoon subject for Briggs. There is plenty of material for them in the caption. One hears about artists canceling their appearances for any or no reason—the real one generally being that the public does not show a sufficient financial interest in them; of a singer not yet come out of New York asking the mere trifle of $4,000 for a concert appearance here; of various incidents where the local manager is up against most of the expense and little of the income.

In an operetta of a former day—"Billee Taylor," if memory is correct—the tenor hero sang a ditty to this effect: "I work for 18 pence a day, for virtue is its own reward." This would seem to be the condition forced upon many of the local managers. Yet they continue in the service, and it is a real service. F. Wight Neumann, a veteran of the craft, is even now announcing a partial list of attractions for next season.

It includes—alphabetically—Harold Bauer, Pablo Casals, Geraldine Farrar, Beniamino Gigli, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Josef Hofman, Maria Jeritza, Fritz Kreisler, Kathryn Maisle, Sergei Bachmaninoff, Titta Ruffo, and Jacques Thibaud.

Once every two years Andreas Pavley and Serge Oukrainsky and their ballet school present a public ballet program. This biennial event will take place Saturday night at the Auditorium theater. Some 250 dancers will take part in the program.

FRANCINE DAGMARA.
[Moffett Photo.]

As operatic patrons know, Messrs. Pavley and Oukrainsky, former members of the Pavlowa Ballet Russe, are the ballet masters of the opera company. This performance will bring into the spotlight not only the leaders themselves and their school pupils but a number of the coryphees of the opera, those who dance under the names of Miles. Dagmara, Milar, Ellisius, and others.

Two new ballets will be given, "The Enchanted Princess," a Russian fairy story with music by Nikolas Sokolow, and "The Gate of the Redemption," by Liszt. There will also be divertissements, one of which will be Haydn's "Toy Symphony," in which the toy instruments of the orchestra, the drum, horn, rattle, cuckoo, nightingale, and so on, will be represented by dancers.

Schipa Guest of Swift Chorus.

Occasionally an artist appears who excels in the somewhat diverse callings of opera and concert. One of that order is due here Friday night. He is Tito Schipa, tenor. Having proved himself many times in opera and at least once here in recital, he will come here to be guest artist with Swift & Co.'s male chorus at Orchestra hall.

This chorus is one of many similar musical organizations that have grown out of commerce. Its members, associated in the firm whose name is borne by the choir, are likewise associated in art. They are trained and conducted by D. A. Clippinger, and have a membership of sixty-five.

Adelbert Huguelet will be the accompanist and Edgar Nelson the organist. The program will consist chiefly of short songs, including, however, such items of interest as Dudley Buck's cantata, "The Nun of Nidaros," and the organization's prize winning composition, "The Four Winds," by Bornschein.

If you think that certain opera performances progress in a leisurely fashion, you should take up some of the Chinese specimens of that art form. They gave one in Philadelphia last week—that is, they gave half of it. It lasted eleven hours, with a second part of the same length announced for next day.

As nearly as can be defined, it is not opera, but drama with music, speeches, songs, orchestra—Chinese orchestra—and much percussion. This perform-

Humor, Fine Acting, Lighten Drab Tale of Anna Christie

How rotten it was! Who's to blame for it—me 'r you? I guess neither of us. We're all poor nuts, an' things just happen, that's all.
ANNA CHRISTIE.

By Sheppard Butler.

SOMETHING to write about! Frequently this scrutator of things theatrical, perilously perched at the top of a Sunday column, finds himself put to it to get to the bottom. Events do not always materialize, entertainments are conventional, and the world, though amiable enough, offers no great lure to loquacity. But to the Cort last week came a play so vital, so pregnant with suggestion, and withal so tellingly acted that it invites the scribbling pencil or exigent typewriter. I defy you to see "Anna Christie" without feeling the urge to say something about it. It has ideas, dramatic honesty, meaty lines—even a quotation to put at the top of the page, as Eye Witness does.

Merely a time-worn tale, set in a frame of uncompromising and persuasive realism. The ancient apologia of a girl gone wrong, voiced in the words of the gutter: "We're all poor nuts, and things just happen." Common, everyday human beings, wondering again, as they have always wondered, at the inscrutability of fate. Not new or inspired, but vivid, racy, keenly alive, like a breath of salt air across the familiar artificialities of the stage.

GEORGE MARION and MISS PAULINE LORD in "Anna Christie" at the Cort.
[Abbe Photo.]

Here is a tawdry saloon on the New York water front. Greasy men face the bar, its mirror festooned with netting to keep off the flies. There is puzzlement over the inscription on a letter: deciphered, it appears to name Chris Christopherson, the old Swede sailor-man with the funny monicker who makes the place his hangout. Presently Chris arrives, and a whiff of the sea with him—a beguiling, sententious, mellow character in the person of a fine actor, George Marion. Half-drunk, he makes out that the letter is from his daughter, who is coming to see him. Sh Anna Christie comes into the play.

Fatherly pride seizes the maundering Chris. He tells of his daughter, whom he sent long ago to Minnesota. "Den," he explains, "she don't never know ol' devil sea. She don't know fader like me. I bet you she's fine, good, strong gel." There is irony in that. For when Anna arrives she sinks limply into a chair and demands a drink. She has been a woman of the brothels, and the life has "got" her. Little hope she has for this visit, or of help from any man, even her father. "Give y' a kick when ye're down, that's what most of 'em do. I ain't expectin' much," she says. Irony there, too. Each is hopelessly wrong about the other.

The Barge, and a Lover Out of the Night.

They meet, the father blissfully ignorant of his daughter's past, and here you encounter the first arresting flash of Miss Pauline Lord's superb acting. Slowly it dawns on her amazed comprehension that he not only is willing to accept her, but is glad to see her. She would like to show emotion, but has forgotten how. A fleeting, crooked grin is about all she can manage. Embarrassed, they depart for home on Chris' old coal barge.

EUGENE O'NEILL.

An interval and we are on the deck of the barge. Dense fog covers everything like a pall. Voices are heard, but no one is visible except when this character or that emerges into the dim light of a single lantern. An effective scene, lacking only the sound of lapping water to make it perfect in its illusion. Perhaps this could not be achieved.

Out of the night comes an Irish stoker, saved from shipwreck. He is boastful, garrulous, a strange type to Anna. With her revived faith in men and things, she falls in love. And this is tragedy, for the other new wonder in her life, the bond of sympathy between her and her father, is quickly broken. The old man hates the sea; no sailor shall have his girl.

The three—Chris, Anna, and the stoker—now have the play to themselves, and a catastrophe is imminent. It arrives in the shabby cabin of the barge—a place of hard, merciless daylight, in blinding contrast to the murk of the act before. The two men quarrel, elementally, and Anna, driven to desperation, flings out the secret of her past. "Who's to blame fer it?" she asks the father who neglected her. Then, to the stoker: "Would you believe me that lovin' you has made me clean?"

He will not, and hurls himself out of the door. The father follows. Again the brave, crooked grin from Anna. "That's right," she says. "Go on. Beat it."

There is more, but it is an indeterminate ending, and does not greatly help the action of the play. Still, life is a thing of indeterminate endings, and this one seems no compromise. Why insist on disaster when, morb often than not, the broken threads are patched together?

Undeniably, Eugene O'Neill has mitigated his habitual gloom in the writing of "Anna Christie," and it is vastly the better play therefor. It is all realism, but not all tragedy. Its tale carries more than a tinge of hopefulness. The character of Anna is shot through with flashes of humor that is no less spirited because it is ironic, and that of the old bargemaster is rich in droll, whimsical conceits. For all its piteous narrative, you laugh, much of the time, at "Anna Christie."

Not, I should say, a great play—surely not a perfect play—but incomparably the best of Eugene O'Neill's which Chicago has seen. Add the benison of uncommonly effective settings and some of the finest acting of the year, and you have a high adventure in the theater.

Poking Fun at the Famous: "Margot" and Some Others.

Miss Grace George's preliminary canter of half an hour or so with "Me and My Diary" meets with baffling reactions at the Princess. One audience laughs en ensemble; the next will be distinguished by its utter failure to respond to the lines and "business" which derive their meaning from the fact that the little play is a lampoon of Mrs. Asquith and her babbling book. The management grimly suggests that only those ticket buyers for Miss George who have read the profitable autobiography be admitted until after the curtain raiser is played.

MISS MAY ROBSON
in "It Pays to Smile" at the Olympic.
[White Photo.]

Miss Jennings' topical playlet and Miss George's adventure therewith combine to bring to mind that the American stage has never gone in for the play in which veritable personages are utilized as characters, duly labeled. True, we have had Bryan in revue and extravaganza ever since the June afternoon of '96 when he talked himself into the first of his series of nominations for the presidency; and Col. Roosevelt was, in his great days, the occasional subject of good natured fun in like entertainments. When the late N. C. Goodwin played King Lorenzo in "The Mascot" he "made up" into startling resemblance to the late Robert G. Ingersoll, then, of course, a live and militant figure in our public life; and pretty nearly all Chicago theatergoers who read the newspapers know the story of the $7-a-week usher whose resemblance to Woodrow Wilson won from Mr. Ziegfeld $100 a week for three seasons of the Follies.

But these examples were mere pictorial or topical décor. The English playwrights lose no opportunity for seizing upon public personages and weaving them into the body of both comedy and serious drama. Persons familiar with British politics of the period, 1908-'09, said they recognized a living celebrity in every masculine character of the prophetic Guy Du Maurier's laughed at play, "An Englishman's Home," done here at Powers' in 1909. We all remember the battalion of drama critics in Shaw's "Fanny's First Play"—each critic "from the life," although they meant little enough to American audiences. The title character of "Afgar," seen here last autumn, was designed by the English author of the libretto (although it was from a French original) to lampoon Horace Bottomley, a British M. P. and publicist who has won a large measure of editorial attention in this country because of his free and open expression of anti-Americanism. So, Mrs. Asquith in a comic play is a matter of course in her own land, where the rôle acted here by Miss George is played by Miss Ellis Jeffreys.

News and Views of the Stage and Its People.

Miss Clara Moores, last seen here at Powers' in the play called "Shavings," approaches the same theater in a new capacity—that of the leading player in William Hurlbut's knowing comedy, "Lilies of the Field." In this rôle she succeeds Miss Marie Doro, who had it for a time but is now off for Europe. Marsh Allen will have the part acted at the beginning of the play's career by Norman Trevor (now with Miss George in "The Exquisite Hour") and considerable prominence will be given to Miss Josephine Drake, who achieved a "hit" in the piece similar to that of the comic Miss Jobyna Howland in "The Gold Diggers." The Chicago engagement is scheduled to begin on May 1, following Mr. Gillette's departure from Powers'.

Easter, usually a time of revived activity in the theaters, finds Chicago with three of its sixteen standard playhouses dark. The Great Northern is no longer tenanted, even by the movies, and the doors are still closed at the Studebaker and Central. Not often does such a condition prevail in April.

Many men and women who take their playgoing seriously will gather in Evanston this week for the twelfth annual convention of the Drama League of America. Sessions will be held on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at the Evanston Woman's club. There will be addresses by Dr. William Norman Guthrie, Louis K. Anspacher, Walter Prichard Eaton, Donald Robertson, Arthur Byron, William Owen, and others; performances of various short plays, and a theater party at the Cort on Thursday evening.

Looking farther ahead than most, the Cort prepares to open the coming season with Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing's comedy, "Thank-U." The date of its arrival is now definitely set for the night of Sunday, Aug. 20.

Miss Vira Rial, a member of Mitzi's company in "Lady Billy," makes the surprising announcement that she doesn't care who knows how old she is. She will celebrate this week her twenty-fifth year as an actress, and there will be doings to commemorate the event. Miss Rial is a Chicagoan, the daughter of the late Jay Rial, long known as a manager and press agent, and Louise Rial, for many seasons a leading member of the old Dearborn theater stock company.

"Liebeszauber," one of the latest works of Oscar Straus, composer of "The Chocolate Soldier" and "The Last Waltz," will be presented for the first time in America at the Bush Temple theater this evening.

"Sally" leaves New York at the end of this week with the record of having rolled up what are said to be the largest gross receipts ever taken by an American entertainment during a single engagement. For its seventy weeks in New York the total is approximately $2,200,000. This is about $200,000 more than "Lightnin's" three years' earnings on Broadway.

Gallagher and Shean, the droll comics whose reunion has proved one of the great successes of the current vaudeville season, will be among those present in Mr. Ziegfeld's new "Follies."

Miss Marjorie Rambeau's new play, to be revealed in New York tomorrow night, has had its title changed again. It has been called, successively, "Up," "Jenny Jones," and "Her Three Husbands." Now it is "The Goldfish." Gladys Unger Americanized it from the French of Armont and Gerbidon, and Wilton Lackaye and Robert T. Haines will help Miss Rambeau act it.

Many of the players in the vaudeville theaters this week will contribute their services to the "T. R. Follies," to be staged at the Auditorium on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings by Theodore Roosevelt Post No. 627, American Legion, and the Gold Star Mothers of Chicago. The proceeds will be used for the relief of disabled and needy ex-service men.

Eugene Walter has a new play, "The Flapper"—a sufficiently descriptive title—in which, it is said, Miss Peggy Hopkins is to have the title rôle.

"Smooth as Silk," played here by Taylor Holmes, will be revived in Boston tomorrow with William Courtenay as the star.

MISS ANNETTE BADE.

She contributes, vocally and pictorially, to the pleasant scheme of things in the "Ziegfeld Frolic," at the Colonial, presided over by Will Rogers and his gum.

The New Plays

OPENING TONIGHT.

"It Pays to Smile" (Olympic)—Miss May Robson in a dramatization by Ethel Watts Mumford of a widely read magazine serial by Nina Wilcox Putnam—something about the adventures of an elderly spinster as companion to a wealthy, tireless, and rather wayward young woman.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"Just Married" (La Salle, April 23)—Miss Vivian Martin and Lynne Overman in a comedy by Adelaide Matthews and Ann Nichols. The piece, which has to do with farcical mixups on a French liner, has been an item of New York's theatrical fare for nearly a year. In the cast are Jess Dandy, Dorothy Mortimer, Isabel O'Madigan, John Butler, and Blanche Benton.

"Lilies of the Field" (Powers', May 1)—A comedy by William Hurlbut, dealing with a group of damsels somewhat akin to those portrayed in "The Gold Diggers." Miss Clara Moores will have the leading rôle, played elsewhere by Miss Marie Doro.

"Molly Darling" (Palace, May 9)—Richard Carle and various others in a musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Tom Johnstone, and Phil Cook.

Film Fans Cry for 'Something New' in Pictures

esting to run across somebody on the stake one has known in other days. Glad you wrote, and here's hoping you "repeat" soon.

D. M. S.: Your letters are as good as a tonic. That was SOME vision you had, and I must say as a seer you are there. I guess your French is pretty good. It looks like it.

JOHANNA: WOW!

MRS. J. H. S.: Your letter was forwarded. So Rodolf is your "crush" and Priscilla Dean's your husband's. Well, as long as you're both afflicted that keeps the case from becoming inTRICate.

KAY: Always glad to settle a dispute. Mr. Valentino was born in Italy and educated there. Address him care of Paramount, Hollywood, Cal.

J. M. K.: Address Mary Pickford care of United Artists, Hollywood, Cal. So far as I know, there are no studios in Chicago. The Rothacker plant does commercial work only.

LILLIAN C.: Glad to help you out. Priscilla Dean will receive letters addressed to her care of Universal, Universal City, Cal.

KICK KORNER

ITS OBJECT OBJECTION.

"Dear Miss Tinée: O, I've got something for the Kick Korner. It's this. I wish they would stop putting the cast of characters at the beginning of the picture. When you do see them on the screen you've forgotten what the name was, and while you're trying to think you miss part of the picture.
"K. I. R."

"Dear Miss Tinée: In devouring (literally speaking) the contents of your Kolyum Kick Korner, I note what H. J. R. has to say concerning Ralph Graves. H. J. R., as well as every other fan, can be darned thankful that there is at least one actor left in the movie field who is decent enough to give a little consideration, and that's Ralph Graves. H. J. R. must remember, too, that half priest and Sir Galahad are only highfalutin' adjectives employed by overzealous press agents. However, as far as I know, Ralph is a pretty respectable gentleman. If the movies are to have a renovating, H. J. R. and others are making a mistake by starting in on those who don't need it.
"T. W."

Browsing Backward

Dear Madame: This is my first offense as to your coil-yum. The following are a few photoplays which have stayed with me: "Lying Lips," "Male and Female," "The Kid," "Disraeli," "Passion," "Charm School," "Jim the Penman," "The Witching Hour," "Humoresque," "Garden of Allah," "Million Dollar Mystery," "Calling of Dan Mathews," "Money Moon." The above named photoplays were not all so popular in their time, but as I recall them they are the ones most prominent in my storehouse. No doubt there are others I have seen and liked as well, but I can't recall the titles, but I have a vague memory of the principal actors and plots. I will always remember the legless Lon Chaney, but can't remember the name of the play in which he starred.
And that's that. (Apologies to J. P. Mac.) Sincerely, W. BOLIN.

Dear Miss Tinee: The motion pictures which impressed me most were Mrs. Fiske in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." I had read the book and thought the picture good; Charles Ray in "The Clodhopper," W. S. Hart in "Truthful Tallliver," his masterpiece; Mary Pickford in "Daddy Long Legs," Norma Talmadge in "The Forbidden City," Will Rogers in "Old Hatch," Mabel Ballin in "East Lynne," and finally John Cumberland in "A Gay Old Dog," a classic. C. M. J.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Pausing to Let the Isle of Capri Cast Its Spell

By Mme. X.

NAPLES.—[Special Correspondence.]—To the real, dyed in the wool Chicagoan there is beauty in certain aspects of our city, its lake and sky and many towered expanse, which matches anything else that the world has to offer in the line of lovely landscape. Take the Lake Shore drive at sunset on a fine, soft spring afternoon when the reflection of the western radiance casts a faint pink and violet glow around the rim of the iridescent, shimmering, and pale blue lake, while the towers of the municipal pier shine ruddily in the sun's last rays; that is a picture which remains in the memory even when the wandering Chicagoan is face to face with famous beauty spots of other lands.

At the moment the writer is energetically loafing in what has for centuries been universally conceded to be, if not the most beautiful spot in the world, at least well towards the top of the list of such, the Bay of Naples.

The Golden Gate, the Golden Horn, Table Bay, the sea entrance to Lisbon are all contestants for the first prize for beauty as seaports, but none of the others has a soft purple volcano in the immediate foreground, smoking peacefully day and night with an unconscious air, as does Vesuvius. So bland is it that it makes one wonder whether Pompeii and Herculaneum weren't, after all, the creation of the guides who needed them in their business. Nor are the waters of these other ports rentineled by two such magic islands as Capri and Ischia.

Refuge of Varied Types.

Since long before the days of the Caesars, Capri has been the favorite retreat for the connoisseur seeking beauty and seclusion. This exquisite islet (for it is only about five miles long and, at the widest, two miles across) has from time immemorial attracted to it all sorts of people—emperors, scholars, artists, writers, poets, lovers, misanthropes, and many who rebel against the conventions, the guards which mankind continually sets up to protect the particular type of civilization which obtains at the moment.

Also the beauty and remoteness of Capri attract to it many whose perverted natures demand unnatural excitements. This is a recognized class here, but one which does not intrude on the pious pleasure which is taken in the exceeding beauty of the place by the lineal and loyal descendants of the Pilgrim fathers of New England who come here in droves by each day's steamer, such prim, respectable, earnest folk with red guide books under their arms and clasping well rolled umbrellas.

Tiberius' Spirit Lives.

Capri's fame was started by the Emperor Tiberius, who passed what were probably the happiest moments of his somewhat troubled life here. He is reported to have built here twelve wonderful villas. Their ruins are today the greatest asset to the island. They crown each of the fierce rocky peaks. They lie buried deep in each precipitous valley. They glimmer through the molten chrysophase which does duty as the encircling sea.

The Capri gardener, digging up his ground to plant his peas and beans, continually turns up fragments of the Phoenician glass, the Grecian statues, and the Etruscan vases which used to adorn these palaces of the Roman emperors. In the many grottoes which honeycomb the rocks hereabouts, other remains of Roman occupation are found by simply scratching the crumbling soil.

The spirit of Tiberius still prowls about the island. Mothers threaten their naughty children with him, saying, "Timberio" [the local rendering of the name] "will get you."

Tiberius was unlucky in not having won the favor of the newspaper reporters of his day. There was one, Tacitus, who particularly disliked him and gave him a bad name, a reputation which it now appears he did not deserve. Instead of having been a monster of vice, as Tacitus represented him, he was rather above the average of the Caesars. When in need of money and it was suggested that he should lay heavier taxes on the already overburdened people, he is said to have replied:

"It is for us to shear the sheep, not flay them."

But it is hard to undo the work of so popular a reporter as Tacitus, and it will be long before the name of Tiberius stands for anything but cruelty and treachery in this part of the world. In fact, these qualities are regarded as rather an asset to the island, a chief attraction, and any other view would be as fiercely combatted as any suggestion to build a pier at which the daily steamer could land its passengers is opposed by the boatmen who convey the traveling public to and from the shore. In Italy many what we would consider improvements are violently opposed by some contingent whose daily bread is menaced by such changes. This imparts a primitive, antiquated air to some phases of travel here.

German Still Spoken.

In the long ago, before the war days when the writer used to frequent Capri there were here almost as many Germans as Capresis. The language of Schiller and Goethe was heard on every breeze. "Reizend! Colossal! Prachtvoll!" sounded from every one of the matchless view points.

Having followed the late war and its reported results, having heard of so-called victories on the one hand and defeats on the other, we rather expected to find a change in the Teutonic tone of this historic island. In this we were much mistaken. The prevailing language is still German. The visitors here are largely of this race.

In the corner of the dining room of this hotel, the famous Quisisana, daily a son of the ex-emperor of Germany, Frederic Leopold, takes his luncheon and dinner in company with a young, military looking companion. The member of the house of Hohenzollern has inscribed himself on the register in a fine, free, dashing handwriting as "Frederic Leopold, Prince de Prusse," and notes Firenze (Florence) as his abode. We should rather have expected him to write himself as "Prinz von Preussen," the French form looking out of place in a royal German signature.

He is a younger son of the former emperor, and resembles his mother more than he does his paternal parent. He has a plump, not particularly majestice appearance; is rather blonde; wears a mustache and tiny side whiskers; (no, they are too small even to be called whiskers; it is merely some hair growing down in front of his ear), and sports a monocle.

Besides his immediate companion, an attractive blue eyed young man, there are two other young Germans, evidently ex-officers, who sit at a nearby table and talk to the Prince de Prusse.

Both tables are at the entrance to the dining room, and command a fine view of the people coming and going. The quartet takes a great interest in the passersby and exchange comments and smiles over the varying and sometimes grotesque passing throng, comments and smiles being quite evident to the rest of the occupants of the dining room. In fact, there is that in their attitude which makes one wonder whether they realize what happened on Nov. 11, 1918. Perhaps they do and we don't.

In one respect they are quite different from the young men one sees in the good old U. S. A. The young men of Uncle Sam's country don't as yet powder their faces, nor do they use lipsticks, nor do they tweek their eyebrows out with tweezers and apply the eyebrow pencil to its use. These marks of a higher civilization are unmistakably manifested on the Teutonic countenances of the Prussian prince's companions, and even the prince himself is not entirely guiltless of an intimate knowledge of face powder and perhaps just a tiny bit of lipstick, though he is not so conspicuously addicted to these embellishments as his companions.

Cardinal O'Connell Resting.

But this group of German war heroes is not our only source of interest here. At the next table to ours sits Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, and his suite, a monsignor, a young secretary, and a Boston business man, named Slattery. The cardinal is an impressive figure, large, stately, dignified. He is said to be an exceedingly learned man, speaking four languages quite perfectly. He has a rich, delightful voice.

He is taking a rest here and strolls about the narrow streets or sits in the garden in the pungent shade of the eucalyptus trees gazing out over the wide, pale blue wastes of the Tyrrhenean sea.

He, as you know, arrived too late for the convocation that elected the new pope, which was the cause of a change in the procedure of filling the chair of St. Peter. Hereafter the interval between the death of a pope and the election of his successor will be long enough to permit the American cardinal to reach Rome from America.

As each cardinal has to have a church in Rome, the church of St. Sabina has been assigned to Cardinal O'Connell. Here American priests will officiate and to it American communicants will come.

Americans at Capri.

Capri sometimes casts an instant spell over visitors. What was the island that made Ulysses and his men forget their wives and their homes and settle down there to live? It must have been Capri, for she has in recent times cast this same spell over many.

Some thirty-five years ago two Americans, the Misses Wolcott-Perry of Keokuk, Ia., and cousins of the late Senator Wolcott, came to the island for a week's stay and were so enamored of it that they sent for all their transportable belongings and settled right down to live on and be a part of the life of the place. They built a beautiful villa, one of the most conspicuous here, and have practically lived here ever since.

The younger sister died a few years ago and the elder, Miss Kathryn Wolcott-Perry, returned to her old home. She was, however, so unhappy there that she soon came back to her white tower, her lovely vine covered pergolas, and her delicious garden.

She has living with her at present her cousin, Capt. Edward Perry Hitchcock, and his wife. The latter is of special interest to Chicago people as she was a popular member of our Chicago Opera company. She was Miss Myrna Sharlow, and sang in many a rôle before she met and fell in love with Capt. Hitchcock. They were married here last June in the gleaming white little Greek temple which is the central feature of Miss Wolcott-Perry's Italian garden.

This temple is a circular affair of white columns like the temple of the Vestal Virgin at Tivoli near Rome. It is paved with strange African stones which were dug up from the vineyard of the villa and which once were used in one of the palaces Tiberius must have built on that site.

Among the objects excavated in the same garden was half of what once was a huge Phoenician glass platter, a lovely piece of opalescence. The imperishably lifelike qualities with which the Capresis endow Tiberius and his family are illustrated in the reply of Miss Wolcott-Perry's gardener when she asked him why all the things, the glass and pottery, found in her garden were in such a shattered condition:

"O, signorina, don't you know that Timberio's mother had a terrible temper, and when she fell into rages she broke everything she could lay her hands on?"

Villas for Solitude.

American dwellers on Capri are as hospitable as any western pioneers. Almost every day visitors from across the sea drop in on the owners of villas here, sometimes only for a cup of tea and sometimes to spend several days.

In the latter class are four young Chicago girls who spent a few days with Miss Wolcott-Perry and Capt. and Mrs. Hitchcock lately on a trip through Italy. They were Miss Viola Merriman, daughter of D. A. Merriman, vice president of the American Steel and Wire company; Miss Ruth Huey, and the Misses Helen and Catharine Byrne. This quartet has now gone northward to Rome, Florence, and Venice.

Among the innumerable people of note who have sought seclusion, peace, and beauty here have been within recent years many of the modern English writers. Hichens used to spend much time here, though he has not been back for some time. H. G. Wells lived here a large part of last spring. Compton Mackenzie has a villa here now that he built a few years ago. Its name, "Villa Solitaria," shows what he sought. It stands much alone on the edge of a precipitous slope, hanging over the hissing and seething waters which curl and break at the feet of the nearby Faraglioni rocks and on the even more jagged and unfriendly stones of the shore.

Apparently even this rather [illegible] spot does not satisfy this [illegible] writer, for he is at this moment up in England purchasing an entire [illegible] the British channel. It would [illegible] that novel writing is a paying [illegible] for one does not build villas on [illegible] for nothing and then fly off and [illegible] whole islands in the English [illegible] without having a fairly fat bank account.

Far from the Land of the Free.

The Russian Socialist Gorky [illegible] to Capri after his disastrous attempt to visit our country some years ago. Do you remember when he came to our shores and was not allowed to enter the country because his companion, a charming and presentable woman, was not married to him?

They came to Capri. Capri never inquires as to such private matters as your marriage license. There he bought a villa on one of the [illegible] narrow, steep pathways and lived [illegible] the Russian revolution lured [illegible] back to Russia. But all during his stay here he would never let an American cross his threshold.

I believe we gave Masterlinck, the famous Belgian poet, much the same reception when he came under similar circumstances to visit our country a few years ago, didn't we? Foreigners cannot understand us and our political principles, our views on matrimony and our unbelievable prohibition laws.

I am sure that if those who framed the eighteenth amendment and put it through at that fatal moment when our thoughts were on war and not on legislation had been brought up on the "vero vino di Capri," the mellow, amber, sun kissed beverage of this island, they would never have brought the Americans to the pass where even the most high principled citizens [illegible] to break, without detection, the law of the land—at least, I suppose they are still doing it. It seems long since I left the miscalled land of the free and the home of the brave and I don't know what may have happened in the [illegible] interim.

If it is supposed to be restful to get away from the daily papers, to a land guiltless of automobiles, and where the shrill call of the telephone is never heard, then we are resting; but we confess that never again will we complain of that shrill call, nor object to the honk of unmuffered car, nor sink under the burden of several perfectly good dailies. We came to see why Americans left home. The problem is still unsolved.

Lake View Woman's Club Completes Its Twenty-ninth Year

By Kate Webber

THE annual meeting and luncheon, with election of officers of the Lake View Woman's club, will be held at the club rooms, 2732 Hampden court, on Tuesday. This club, founded in 1893 by a group of women under the leadership of the late Helen C. Peirce, is concluding its twenty-ninth year of successful work. It has lived up to the ideals of its founders and, though changing with the years, its object is still to know the present time and do what it bids.

Among the active club committees is the library committee, through which a library of 300 books with bookcase has been given to the Boys' Brotherhood Republic, as well as many magazines and smaller groups of books suitable to their needs to other organizations.

The committee for the aid of the handicapped supervises the lending of the Helen C. Peirce memorial fund for the handicapped, to establish in business those equipped for a trade, but unable to get a start.

The Marine hospital service committee dispenses refreshments and good cheer to the boys in the Marine hospital one day each week.

The committee for friendly coöperation with ex-service men has done much good work in its short existence.

The education department has a committee which is working with the Vocational Supervision league, being one of its most active supporters. It also sends delegates to the American speech committee, the committee on public affairs, and the Boys' Brotherhood Republic.

The art and literature department sends delegates to the Municipal Art league, contributing to the picture fund and other work carried on by the Art institute.

The philanthropy department has many activities; it does much local child welfare and relief work, also sends delegates to the Glenwood manual training school, Park Ridge School for Girls, and Travelers' aid.

The civics and economics department has given much attention during the last two years to civics, under the leadership of Mrs. Robert McCall. Her classes have been open to the public for a nominal fee, with the object of educating all who wished to take advantage of them, in their increased responsibilities as American citizens.

The afternoon programs of the club, which are given under the auspices of these departments, are noted for their timeliness and suitability, being the result of the work of the unusually large program committee, which each year devotes much time and thought to this most important feature of club life.

Officers and directors for 1921-22 are Mrs. Samuel D. Snow, Mrs. Louis J. Hotchkiss, Mrs. Guy C. Duff, Mrs. E. I. Bucklin, Mrs. J. M. Coen, Mrs. John Sutcliffe, Miss Laura Goebel, Mrs. W. R. Ramsey, Mrs. A. J. Simpson, Mrs. Herbert Harley, Mrs. C. W. Johnson and Mrs. Lewis B. Sinclair.

MRS. SAMUEL D. SNOW.
[Monfort & Monfort Photo.]
The Lake View Woman's club, of which Mrs. Samuel D. Snow is president, will close the season's activities with a luncheon and meeting on Tuesday at the clubrooms, 2732 Hampden court. The club was founded in 1893 and in its twenty-nine years of existence has aided in philanthropic work of various kinds, as the accompanying outline shows.

MRS. JOSEPH T. BOWEN.
Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen has been appointed by President Harding to represent the United States at the Pan - American conference of women to be held in Baltimore from April 20 to 29. For this conference and the convention of the National League of Women Voters, to be held simultaneously, Illinois will have forty delegates, the Chicago women being Miss Jane Addams, Mrs. Ira Couch Wood, Mrs. Henry W. Cheney, Mrs. William G. Hibbard, Mrs. George Bass, Mrs. Catharine W. McCullough, Dr. Rachelle Yarros, Miss Mary McDowell, and Miss Edith Rockwood.

MISS MABEL RITTER.
[Swisher Photo.]
Members of the Casa Maria club at 411 East Oak street will receive this afternoon from 4 until 7 o'clock in the clubrooms. Tea will be served and there will be a program. Opened last July, with accommodations for ninety girls, the club has shown remarkable growth under the direction of Miss Rebecca Gallery. There are diversions for girls of all tastes and a homelike atmosphere which the members find most helpful when they are at home from their daily work. Miss Mabel Ritter is chairman of the committee for today and will be assisted by a large committee of the girl residents.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

The Chicago Woman's club will meet on Wednesday at 2 o'clock in Recital hall to hear William Hard speak on "America's Opportunities in the East." The art and literature department will hold a business meeting Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock.

A tea will be given on Tuesday at the Congress hotel for the women interested in the campaign of the University of Notre Dame for a half million dollar development and endowment fund. The drive, which will open intensively early next month, will have the support of the mothers, wives, and sisters of the alumni.

The Woman's City club will hold its twelfth annual meeting in the clubrooms tomorrow from 10:30 to 4 o'clock. The president, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, will preside. There will be reports from the thirty-two civic committees. There also will be an election of ten members for the board of directors. The polls will close at 2 o'clock. The parliamentary law class will meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in Room 1730. Tuesday at 11 o'clock the citizenship class will meet to hear George A. Quinlan discuss "County and State Aid Roads." The afternoon citizenship class will meet at 2 o'clock to study "City Streets and Bridges," the speakers to be Ald. John Toman and City Engineer Murdock. There will be a luncheon for the Cook county affairs committee on Wednesday at 12 o'clock. The evening class in civics and parliamentary law will meet on Wednesday evening at 6:30. Thursday morning at 11 o'clock the class in parliamentary law will meet in the club lounge. The public health and child welfare committee will meet at luncheon Thursday at 12:30, and the Americanization committee will meet Thursday afternoon at 2:30. The young woman's auxiliary of the club has arranged its monthly social and civic evening Thursday at 8 o'clock. Friday afternoon at 2:30 the Thirty-third ward branch will meet at Rutherfold field house. The regular monthly book review evening of the club will be held Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Miss Pearl Field will discuss "Recent Poetry." There will be a luncheon meeting of the education committee Saturday at 12 o'clock.

An artists' tea on Friday from 3 until 5:30 o'clock at the College club will mark the opening of the annual art exhibit of club members. Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph F. Ingerle will be guests.

The annual meeting of the Chicago Alumnæ club will be held on Saturday at the College club. Luncheon at 1:30 will be followed by an address by Prof. James Weber Linn. There also will be election of officers, with the exception of president, Mrs. Howard Willett holding that office for another year.

The Chicago Outdoor league will have an arbor day program at its meeting on Tuesday at the Chicago Woman's club. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 o'clock followed by talks by the following speakers Mrs. Henry W. Austin, Mrs. Albert A. Michelson, Archibald O. Coddington, Mrs. Henry Holsman, and Miss Lena M. McCauley.

MRS. GEORGE LENZ.
[Morrison Photo.]

Mrs. George Lenz and Mrs. Thomas P. Casey are in charge of arrangements for the annual meeting of the first district, I. F. W. C., to be held on Thursday at the Morrison hotel. Luncheon at 12:30 will be followed by the afternoon session, at which Mrs. A. E. Kaltenbrun will preside. The Woman's Allied Drug club will be hostess.

Henri David will speak before Le Cercle Français on Tuesday at 3 o'clock, having for his subject "The Prince of Poets."

The dramatic circle of the Central Eleanor club will present two plays, "The Florist Shop" by Hawkridge, and "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire" by Barrie, on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the assembly hall of the club, 17 North State street.

Tomorrow from 10 until 5 o'clock the annual meeting of the Illinois Women's Athletic club will be held at 820 Tower court. The club will give a dinner dance and card party on Thursday evening at the Congress hotel. Mrs. William Westerlund is chairman of arrangements.

There will be a meeting of the Dental Women's club on Tuesday evening at 109 North Dearborn street. Dr. Sadie Bay Adair will speak.

Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick will be the guest at the annual spring luncheon of the Drama league to be held on Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock at the Congress hotel. Frank Bacon will speak, and among the other theatrical persons present will be Arthur Byron, Helen Shipman, Grace George, Norman Trevor, also Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Byron, and Louis Anspacher.

Elizabeth Kipp tent No. 16 will give the annual camp fire dinner for civil war veterans on Wednesday from 11:30 until 2 o'clock in Room 601 Masonic temple.

Mrs. Charles O. Sethness will preside at a meeting of the Chicago Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held on Wednesday at the Great Northern hotel.

Mrs. George W. Lamson of 4104 Ellis avenue will give a luncheon on Friday at 12:30 o'clock for the Women of the Empire State.

The annual luncheon and final meeting of the Musicians Club of Women will be held tomorrow at 1 o'clock at the Drake. Helen Rosenfield Walton, Louise Ayres Garnett, and Jeanne Woolford will give the program.

BORN TOO LATE

By Guy Lee.

("But this is the thing that's a-trubbelin' me; there ain't no more worlds to diskiver, you see."—Old Poem.)

Ja Wohl, my young friend, is a willing Ulysses;
He travels by choice; there is nothing he misses.
He had just had a start on his teens when he ambled
Away one fine morning, and rambled and rambled
All over the west, 'mid its prairies and mountains,
And drank deep of lore at their limitless fountains.

Ja Wohl is a youngster; it tickles him much
To count railroad ties and go hungry and such.
He has a swell time as a wayfarer sore,
And if he goes broke—why, it tickles him more!
For the great Open Spaces he yearns and he burns,
And he laughs at the woe and discomfort he earns.

I can't see his dope; I love dinners and beds;
But the lack of them gives him no tremors or dreads.
His latest stunt beats me; he's chosen a task a
Timid man views with shudders—he's off for Alaska!
What a tragical shame! What a pity Ja Wohl's
Tardy birth killed his chance to discover the poles!

NOW! World-famed Artists on Double-faced Records!

—the New Brunswick Idea that enables anyone to obtain a representative record library, quickly and economically!

Brunswick Gold Label Records

EVERY family can now have the de luxe recordings of world-great artists on double-faced records! This marks a new era in musical development. An era of representative music library in every American home. Just twice the music on each record! Both sides used instead of the costly single-faced record of operatic and concert selections. It is a part of Brunswick's nation-wide campaign to place world's best music, by great operatic stars of Europe and America, within the reach of everyone. Richard Strauss himself, Claire Dux, Pattiera, Chamlee, Huberman and other internally chosen artists of the New Hall of Fame, on double-faced records. New numbers are released every month. Watch for them.

Celebrated Hyland New York $20 to $35 Millinery at $9

The Hyland Model hats, the very models that so many of America's most exclusive millinery stores chose for their Easter hats, the models that have been the envy and despair of New York for the past month—secured for our patrons because of our vigorous efforts and tremendous outlet enabling us to buy the entire Hyland gathering of $20 to $35 model hats—which you'll find grouped here now, regardless of value, at $9.

Sixth Floor—State Street

Street hats, afternoon hats, evening hats, Theatre hats, sports hats, all in the newest models, all reflecting fashion's whims as seldom before.

The Hyland label in each hat means a certain mark of superiority graces the collection—included are taffeta, georgette crepe, Canton crepe, Italian milan, French haircloth, French felt, and fabric and straw combination hats; large drooping models, irregular brim models—but it's quite impossible to properly describe them here—all the wanted trimmings, all the wanted color combinations, plenty of the smart black hats —all hats that you would have to pay $20 to $35 for, now

The Drama league is giving a luncheon Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock at the Congress for Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick. Frank Bacon will talk on the work being done by the league for the boys of the Union League foundation. Louis K. Anspacher of New York also will speak.

The music school of Olivet institute will benefit by a musical on Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, 1524 Lake Shore drive. Mrs. Louis Boysen (Winifred Lamb), Mrs. James N. Smith (Patricia Collinge), Mrs. Thomas Prindiville, Jacques Gordon, and Arthur Kraft will give the program. Mrs. George Halleck Taylor is chairman of the committee in charge. Tickets will be on sale at the door.

The Sunbeam league will give its annual charity card party Tuesday afternoon at the Hotel La Salle. The proceeds will be used to support the kindergartens at the Cook county hospital, the Home for Convalescent Women and Children, the Destitute Crippled Children's home, and Emerson house. Mrs. Edward Bessey, Miss Adelaide Moore, Miss Cecile Murphy, Miss Glady's Lowry, and Miss Helen Johnson will act as hostesses.

The French Modern theater will give Francois Coppée's "Le Passant" Tuesday afternoon and evening in Kimball hall. Miss Muriel McCormick and Mme. Marguerite will take the leading rôles.

The annual charity card party under the auspices of Alpha chapter, Beta Gamma Upsilon sorority, will be given Friday afternoon at the Sisson hotel. Mrs. John T. Kemp of 6039 Michigan avenue is president of the chapter.

Members of the Chicago Historical society and their friends are invited to be present Friday evening at 8 o'clock when the noted archaeologist, William C. Mills, director of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical society at Columbus, O., will speak on "Recent Explorations in the Ohio Mounds," using lantern slides to illustrate the re-examination of the Great Mound City group. Prof. Mills is in Chicago to attend the midwestern meeting of the Anthropological Society of America.

The advertising fraternity of Chicago will give its annual charity ball for the Off the Street club Friday evening at the First Regiment armory. Frank Thomas, C. H. Stoddart, C. D. Heller, C. H. Porter, F. E. M. Cole, E. T. Gundlach, Gilbert Falk, William Grathwohl, Harry Shoemaker, A. G. Ruthman, L. H. Brownholtz, and D. E. Northam are on the general advisory committee.

The date of the concert for the benefit of St. Luke's hospital has been changed from Tuesday, April 25, to Friday, April 28. The concert will be given in the afternoon in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone. Mrs. William E. Casselberry Jr. is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Mrs. Milan H. Hulbert is general chairman of a concert to be given Sunday afternoon, April 30, at 3:30 o'clock, in the Auditorium theater by Lucien Muratore for the benefit of the Alliance Française. The other committees and chairmen are as follows: Publicity, Mrs. William Dow Harvey and Miss Katherine Shortall; tickets, Miss Harriet Stuart; boxes, Mrs. Paul Winslow; ushers, Mrs. Cochran Supplee and Miss Phoebe Norcross; programs, Mrs. James Bernard Mullen; flowers, Mrs. Hibbard Casselberry; dainties, Mrs. Paul Winslow; candies, Mrs. Doris Chapman; floor, Mlle. Zelie Barthelemy.

[Koehne Photo.]

Miss Juanita Kreuder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Kreuder of 639 Addison street, and Richard Westerschulte, son of Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Westerschulte of 750 Junior terrace, were quietly married last Monday morning at Our Lady of Mount Carmel church, the Rev. Joseph Casey officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Westerschulte, accompanied by his sister, Miss Nina Westerschulte, have left for Europe, where Miss Westerschulte will study voice at the Royal Academy of Music in Vienna. Mr. and Mrs. Westerschulte will tour Europe for six months.

Plans are progressing rapidly for the mammoth benefit to be given Monday evening, May 8, at the Auditorium theater for Emerson house. Mrs. William H. Scriven, Miss Muriel McCormick, and Mrs. Hathaway Watson are in charge of the affair. The Emerson House settlement was abandoned about two years ago because of a lack of funds, and only the nursery is functioning now. It is to raise money to reopen the settlement that Mrs. Scriven, Miss McCormick, and Mrs. Watson have been asked by the board of charities to organize the benefit. It is hoped that about $4,000 will be cleared by the program, as the women are soliciting the advertising personally. Mrs. George W. Dixon is treasurer of the program committee. Debutantes are acting as models for illustrated cuts in the program.

Discobolus Marks Best Period of Greek Sculpture

By Anne Ellis.

The Discobolus, by Myron, a sculptor of the fifth century B. C.

IN that last hour of day when Apollo's feet wandered slowly westward, trailing light and the first breeze of evening fell fresh from his moving garments, the youths of a little Grecian town in Eleautherea came to the meeting place of athletes to run, to jump, to throw the quoits in order to become five powered for the great four yearly contests. It was a familiar and diurnal sight, this practice of the Olympic games, and the people of the villages of Greece went to watch the progress of the youths much as the people of our own small towns go each day to the railway station to watch No. 10 come steaming from the east.

Yet because centuries ago one watched in Eleautheres, we all have profited. If among the crowd of watchers Myron had not stood, we would not have had that familiar figure loved since childhood, the Discus Thrower. Perhaps if we knew more about life of the sculptor, we might discover that he suffered from some bodily infirmity that prevented him from becoming a contestant in the sports and which might in a measure explain his entire preoccupation with athletic perfection. It is true that Greek sculpture can be divided into three classes, statues of deities, statues representing and commemorating sports, and statues that were to portray mere beauty; but Myron never, so far as can be discovered, made a statue of a female figure that was either correct or beautiful. He made a famous group of statues of Zeus, Athene, and Hercules, but the Athene is inferior and he was criticized for it as universally as he was lauded for his other works.

For centuries after the discovery of the Discobolus it was thought to have been an ideal figure, but a comparitively recent papyrus from Egypt established what some critics had already suspected—that it is an actual portrait. Myron was commissioned to make the statue to be erected at Olympia, and since a man had to be three times victor before a portrait could be used we know that Timanthes, of whom the papyrus inform us the statue was a portrait, must have been three times winner.

It seems rather a remarkable feat to win three times, because since four years elapsed between the games a winner had to sustain the record against contestants twelve years younger than himself. The record throw of the disc was about 100 feet and the weight of the disc usually about twelve pounds.

One exception to the rule of being three times victor was allowed when Ladas, a runner, died at the goal and Myron made a statue which was later set up at Olympia in memory of the event. Unfortunately it is lost, but a writer of his time tells us it made the beholder gasp, like the victim, for his breath.

Myron may be said to be the first Greek sculptor to study and portray anatomy with the exactitude which later became a canon of Greek art. He was born in the province of Boetia and trained in the famous school of Argos, and was an older contemporary of Phidias. He had a son Lycias who was later a renowned sculptor.

Myron was as famous for his animals as for his figures of athletes. His cow on the Acropolis is said to have been so lifelikethat it fooled other cattle and insects. It was in bronze and life size.

The Discobolus was found in Elis near the sanctuary of Zeus. It was in bronze also and exactly life size, Timanthes having been 5 ft. 8 in. in height. It was the wonder and astonishment of his countrymen, and authors of the time made thirty-six epigrams about it. It seemed especially remarkable to them that Myron could so truly have caught the moment of motion and turned it to bronze, in spite of the fact that he had watched the discus thrower so often. It is apparent how startling this must have been to the Greeks, who in their statues had before this time—and almost always later—made their figures weather deities or merely decorative figures in attitudes of restful inaction.

Familiar things, like familiar relatives, often take on a new character when looked at through the eyes of others, and the Discus Thrower through the eyes of the writers of Myron's time seems to me, I confess, a much more lively thing than I had seen with my own. To me it was a frozen fountain, a moment of beautiful fluidity turned to bronze. To them it is the living, breathing likeness of a hero caught at the moment of his heroism. It is the mind and soul and talent of a sculptor incarnate. It is the junction of imagination with skill. It is the perpetuation of motion and the perfection of grace. It is invention as well as art.

Kathleen Wheeler, sculptress, has been spending some time at the Joseph Cudahy place in Lake Forest engaged in making the portraits of two very distinguished members of the Cudahy family. The years of Tim and Nanturia are drawing to a close, but their faithfulness and beauty will be immortalized in bronze so that when reminiscent conversation turns to their praise on winter evenings after they have gone, their portaits will prove to skeptical strangers that Tim was a wonderful Irish setter and Nanturia a splendid mare.

Following Mrs. Cudahy's example, Mrs. Prentiss Coonley has engaged Mrs. Wheeler to do bronzes of her hunter and her daughter's Shetland pony. Mrs. Wheeler has not progressed as rapidly with this work as she would like, however, because so far both animals refuse to remove their winter coats, and they are not good models with them on.

Louis Alexander Neebe of THE TRIBUNE staff is at present exhibiting a collection of paintings at 140 South Dearborn street in the offices of Archibald Harris. Mr. Harris, who has an office with large wall spaces, allows one artist each month to exhibit his work there free of charge, and even does what he can to help sell the pictures. Mr. Neebe's exhibition will be open daily, except Saturday, from 9 to 5, and on Saturdays from 9 to 1, until the 9th of May. The offices of Archibald Harris are Suite 515 Marquette building. The public is invited to attend.

The Chicago etcher, Pierre Nuyttens, was especially commissioned to make the drawings of the statesmen gathered at the conference for limitation of armament at Washington. They are to be on view soon in eastern galleries and later on in Chicago. They were first displayed in the Belgian embassy, as Mr. Nuyttens is a Belgian by birth.

The University of California extension division is proposing an art in America educational tour, May 15 to July 15, to see the masterpieces of painting and sculpture and other fine arts in the museums and galleries of the United States.

The American Federation of Arts will hold its thirteenth annual convention in Washington, D. C., May 16 to 20.

The Royal university of Florence, Italy, announces summer holiday courses for students, Aug. 16 to Sept. 15, to include lectures on the history of Italian art, with visits to museums and galleries in and near Florence.

The once famous art critic Sheridan Ford, whose book about and quarrel with Whistler once caused a furor, died in Detroit, Mich., last week. He made several artists famous when he was writing for New York and continental papers and magazines. Not long before his death he bought a number of pictures by a young Detroit artist, Roy Gamble, for various rich men in that city and New York. It was Mr. Ford's belief that Gamble will one day be one of America's great painters.

Two paintings by Boucher were recently acquired by John McCormack, the tenor. They belonged to the Wallace collection and were purchased through Sir John Murry-Scott, a friend of the former owner and executor of his estate and a friend also of John McCormack through whom he made his first appearance in London. The pictures, "La Musique" and "Diane at Endymion," were exhibited twice in Paris.

Chase house is having an exhibition of paintings by Morris Topchevsky, a young Russian who studied at the Art institute under Krehbiel and won the Goodman prize at the Art Students' league in 1920. The paintings are mostly of the Chicago water fronts.

James E. McBurney will take a landscape sketching class to the western slope of Colorado during July and August this year. Information about the class can be obtained by addressing Ila McAfee, 1521 East 61st street.

HIGHBROWS OF EUROPE SLAM THE CINEMA :

By FELIX ORMAN

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—Such a to-do as they are making in Europe over the present danger to old world culture! And this time the great war is not to blame! Thrones may have been toppled over, kings sent scurrying away while the going was good, business may have been sent to pot, and things generally turned topsy-turvy—all on account of the late unpleasantness between nations—but, mind you, the problem now is not traceable to the war. It's the movies that caused the trouble!

And loud and long are the lamentations in certain quarters. Some say it's all due to those Americans who, lacking culture and all sense of beauty, have foisted on the world this pernicious influence, which, strangely enough, the culture soaked Europeans have let descend upon them in full force. Yes, the movies have done it—and it's a shame!

Grand opera is no more what it used to be. That noble institution of the drama has suffered a marked decline, some detecting evidence of senility. The ballet and pantomime have lost their charm for the public. The stately galleries stored with the art treasures of painting and sculpture have no more the appeal they once exerted. Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford, and Nazimova are said to mean more today than Leonardo da Vinci, Rembrandt, or Michael Angelo.

O, these dead times! And the movies are to blame for it all.

Crowds Flock to 'Em.

But nobody seems to be complaining but the highbrows. The crowds flock to the cinemas, while the artists and writers of exalted station stand by and deplore the low state to which things have come. O, yes, nothing but the movies could have done it; and no people other than the Americans could have worked this evil. The ideals of Nevada are being implanted in Lombardy and Normandy. And with all their wailing the people still keep going to the movies—more's the pity!

Take the situation in London recently, for example. It all started while J. Stuart Blackton's prizma-color film, "The Glorious Adventure," was being shown at the Royal Opera house, and the critics were hailing it as a great work of art—"oil paintings come to life," etc. There was a gathering of international celebrities in London at the time. The Londoners like the movies, and go to them unashamed. This was all too much for the high priests of the older arts.

Serge Diaghileff, impresario of the Russian ballet, refused indignantly to have anything to do with a film. Why? Because the ballet is art and the film is not art. Tush! That's what he thinks of the cinema, and he snaps his slender fingers with Slavic impetuosity. And the pity of it is that the films might have been art, said he, but that hope has perished. The cinema has descended to the trivial. Tush again! The films are a menace to art and European culture.

Register Fury and Contempt.

Then along comes Richard Strauss, German composer, who was giving a concert or two in London. He was asked to conduct the orchestra for the premiere of "The Glorious Adventure" because all fashionable London would be at Covent Garden to see Lady Diana Manners' film debut. Talk of applying a match to a gasoline soaked pile of timber or waving a red flag before a high tempered bull—that was nothing to the way Richard acted when this rash suggestion was made to him. What, conduct the orchestra in a cinema—he, Richard Strauss! Shades of Beethoven and Mozart! [Register fury and contempt.] How terrible, these films!

Somewhat more gently, but nevertheless firmly, Mr. St. John Ervine, who writes good dramas that are well known in America, and also turns out two columns of ever so intellectual dramatic and art criticisms for the Observer every Sunday, wielded his hammer against the movie menace, as the guardians of the older arts call it. Hear Mr. Ervine: "The films are corrupting the imagination of the public. . . . The cinema is only for mental epileptics!" O, isn't it awful! St. John assumed a real apostolic wrath, or righteous indignation, let us say.

And after that came Gordon Craig, apostle of high art and strange mysticisms in the theater. With hand against brow and an expression of melancholy he delivered himself of a diatribe against the pictures. Far better not to quote. It was too terrible. If the hold of the cinema continued to clutch the minds of the people, art was lost—hopelessly, unutterably, deplorably. [And all the time his distinguished mother, Ellen Terry, and his son were acting in films.]

Then a further chorus took up the wailings and lamentations, and echoes were heard from Paris, Munich, Rome, Vienna, etc.

Something has got to be done about it. We cannot let Europe go to pieces this way. Let's call another conference at Washington—for artistic disarmament, or something like that!

Orchestra Series Ends This Week; Notes on Music

ance was an incident in the convention of the On Leong Merchants' association. It is called "Lok Qua," and deals with the history of China from the time of the construction of the great wall until part of it was taken down to allow trolley lines and railway systems to pass, ending with a display of the red, yellow, blue, white, and black flag of the Chinese republic.

The best information on the subject is to the effect that it was presented in the language in which it was written.

The annual festival of the Civic Music association at Orchestra hall Wednesday night will introduce, as is customary, the combined children's choruses of the association. This choir will be directed by Herbert E. Hyde and will sing a dozen or more songs while the Civic orchestra plays accompaniments written by Mr. Hyde. The orchestra will also be featured, with Frederick Stock as conductor and Eric DeLamarter and George Dasch as assistant conductors. At the end there will be community singing led by Frederick W. Carberry.

The glee clubs of the Carter H. Harrison High school will sing "The Chimes of Normandy" on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday night of this week.

ROSA RAISA.

When the Chicago Opera association returns from its journeying out to the Pacific coast several of the artists will make individual appearances before dispersing for the summer. Among them will be the famous dramatic soprano, Rosa Raisa, who is announced later in this month in a recital with her husband, Giacomo Rimini, at the Auditorium. With the exception of Mary Garden, she has been longer with the Chicago Opera than any other woman in the company.

GLENN DRAKE.

Among the less frequently heard musical performances will be a program given today at the Illinois theater by Glenn Drake, tenor, of songs used in Christian Science churches. The poems in most instances are from the pen of Mary Baker Eddy, with such composers as Frederick Root, Albert Conant, James G. MacDermid, Frances Allitsen, and others. Mr. Drake will be assisted by Ebba Frederickson, violinist, and Robert Macdonald, accompanist.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

Did He Change His Mind?

A caddy at the club, ordinarily quite normal in his speech, was apt to stammer badly if excited or surprised.

One day he was caddying for a well known player, who, arriving at the seventh hole, a particularly difficult one, remarked, "I did this hole in three the other day."

"What?" said the caddy. "Well, sir, all I can say is that you are a l-l-l-l——"

"Steady, boy, steady," interrupted the player, in a reproving voice.

"You're a l-l-ucky man, sir," concluded the caddy. C. E. H.

Same the World Over.

Mrs. Jones was on Mrs. Smith's back porch in the cool of the evening discussing with her the faults of certain children of their neighbors and their neighbors' inability to see these faults.

Finally Mrs. Jones said: "Could you recognize the faults of your children?"

"I could if they had any," was Mrs. Smith's retort. C. R.

Even the Hens Knew.

A family of slender means became quite wealthy during the war. The change was reflected not only in their purchases but even in the attitude of the children. The father had purchased a large farm stocked with cattle and chickens. One day the little daughter of the family was showing a visitor around the farm.

On visiting the hen house, the visitor asked interestedly, "Do your hens lay many eggs?"

"O, they can," was the haughty reply from the little girl, "but in our new position they don't have to."

Colors—Absolutely Fast

Ever since the days of hoops and bustles, women have used Fruit of the Loom for white sewing. They have always known it as a fine, smooth, durable cotton fabric of unvarying quality.

Now that this famous fabric is being made in colors, the same high standard naturally applies to the coloring. Fruit of the Loom colors are fast—absolutely fast—guaranteed fast, through repeated washings and constant exposure to the sun.

Fruit of the Loom

You will find Fruit of the Loom in plain colors and interesting printed designs at the same stores where you buy the white goods. (If you are unable to get Fruit in colors, let us know.)

Many leading stores also sell Fruit of the Loom in ready-made garments—in white and in colors: porch dresses, aprons, boys' shirts and blouses, men's shirts, pajamas, nightshirts (white only), and other articles—all guaranteed satisfactory.

Always look for the famous Fruit label—it means something; and in white goods notice the name on the selvage.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

Last week's composite list of best sellers at five leading Chicago book stores was:

FICTION.

"Kimono," by John Paris.
"St. Theresa," by Henry Sydnor Harrison.
"The Beautiful and Damned," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Memoirs of a Midget," by Walter de la Mare.
"Simon Called Peter," by the Rev. Robert Keable.
"Maria Chapdelaine: A Tale of the Lake St. John Country," by Louis Hémon.

NONFICTION.

"Painted Windows," by "The Gentleman With the Duster," author of "Mirrors of Downing Street."
"Little Essays of Love and Virtue," by Havelock Ellis.
"The Little Garden," by Mrs. Francis King of Orchard House.
"Outwitting Our Nerves," by Josephine A. Jackson and Helen M. Salisbury.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:
"If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson.
"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hémon.
"The Beautiful and Damned," by F Scott Fitzgerald.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Parody Outline of History," by Donald Ogden Stuart.

By Fanny Butcher.

"THE climate and the scenery of America have no more power to counteract the inevitable ruin, corruption, and stagnation which follow cross-breeding than the climate and scenery of central Italy had to perpetuate the genius of the ancient Romans, or than the climate and scenery of the Attic plain had to perpetuate the glories of ancient Athenians," says Kenneth I. Roberts in his most stimulating book, "Why Europe Leaves Home."

The problem of immigration is one which the lay man and woman of America almost never consider.

It is a problem of life or death—life if immigration is limited, death if it is unrestricted, he says.

Mr. Roberts' book is written in a jaunty manner, easy enough for the most d. b. m. or his wife to read, with an occasional mot juste which the so-called clever flapper can steal and palm off as her own observation. To a simple person like me it is full of facts which make one think. Europe is scrambling, literally pulling hair and rending clothes, to get to America. It will lie, steal, beg, do anything to get to America. It is not daunted by the word that two million men are out of work. It argues that if America is so rich that it can feed Europe through the relief associations it will feed refugees to America even if it will not give them work. Europe thinks that America is paved with gold and that there are no laws. Europe does not want to come to America for religious or political freedom. "It must not be misrepresented as a sentimental journey to long-lost and passionately missed relatives. It is a movement to a better job."

The crop of relatives in Europe is the only crop which did not suffer during the war, Mr. Roberts says, and the sending of one member of a family to America as a reason for getting in all his sisters and his cousins and his aunts is a successful game which even the dullest peasantry has discovered. A few of the men want to come to escape military service, but most of the emigrants from Europe are seeking nothing but money.

Mr. Roberts thinks that the Jewish immigrant is the most dangerous to America because he comes in the greatest numbers, has no creative trade, does an "air business," never will be a farmer, insists upon going directly to the slums of the great cities, and because he is aided by the Hebrew Immigrant Aid society, which is called the Hias in Europe and which is, according to Mr. Roberts, the greatest travel bureau in the world. It feeds and clothes Jewish emigrants, conducts a newspaper whose purpose is to stimulate immigration, cables relatives in America, demanding that they send the amount of money asked by their European kin for their passage, and has even tried to get the state department "to allow American visés to be issued by Hias officials in Europe without interference by American consuls, so that Jews would not be put to the annoyance of going all the way to an American consulate and of standing in line in order to get an American visé."

Incidentally, Mr. Roberts' stand on the Jewish immigrant has been attacked in congress by Representative Sabath of our town, so I hear.

Europe is eager to get rid of her undesirables, he says, and officials of European countries seem to think that it is America's humanitarian duty to accept all the human liabilities from which they want to be free.

But the most passionate argument which he puts forth is that America is a Nordic country now, that most of the immigrants which Europe is now sending us are of the Alpine, Mediterranean, and Hebrew races, which have always been subservient races, and that the inevitable result of their influx into this country at even the present one-third rate will be a mongrelization of race and a consequent disintegration of American stock.

His suggested remedy is an immigration law which will allow only a fixed number of immigrants to enter America each year, which will accept as immigrants only those persons who are essential to the well-being of the country, which will keep them away from the slums and get them into the section of the country where they are needed. He thinks a nonpolitical immigration board should be appointed to operate like the federal reserve board and the interstate commerce commission, that the needs of sections or industries should be placed before the board, and the board, through American consulates in Europe, should import the number of laborers, skilled or unskilled, which the board recognizes as necessary to the proper cultivation of American life and industry.

America's future is at stake, he believes.

The Living Part of B. L. T.

Here it is: "The So-Called Human Race," a sort of scrapbook of the Line which we would all have kept if we hadn't been so busy with our race for so-called fame and fortune, a distillation of the quips, a brew with a mental kick after a formula possessed by B. L. T. All our old friends are in "The So-Called Human Race," the Gadder, the London Busman story, the Delectable River, the man who doesn't know anything about art but knows what he likes, Mr. Dubbe and his program study class, the definition of highbrow, low-highbrow, high-lowbrow and lowbrow, the Academy, Socrates and his learning Greek at the age of eighty-one, the GET/FAT excitement—every one, all of them looked at with the kindly, satiric eye of one of the members of the human race that wasn't a failure.

B. L. T.

Scraps of things from Anatole France, the lovely definition of poetry by Lord Dunsany, the parody on "A Shropshire Lad," and keen observations, with bits of verse here and there, everything, as B. L. T. once said, after "Our Method: We select only things that interest us, assuming that other people will be interested; if they are not—why, chacun a son goût, as the cannibal king remarked, adding a little salt."

Henry B. Fuller has written a pleasant foreword, in which he confides that he has done little editing, for B. L. T. had left his papers practically ready for this the first of his selections from the Line.

Both Tribute and Technique.

"Caruso and the Art of Singing" is written by Salvatore Fucito, who was for five years the coach and accompanist of Caruso. Mr. Fucito says that two considerations prompted him to write the book. "First, my desire to pay my tribute to the memory of a friend and a great artist; second, the hope that I should pass on to all who are concerned with the art of singing Caruso's methods in breathing and producing tones, his vocal exercises and his views on vocal technique, his ideals of singing, as well as his practical advice to singers."

CARUSO.

Fodder for the Drama Leaguers.

Two new plays have been added to the Modern Play Series, which supply the little players of the country with material. They are "Thursday Evening," by Christopher Morley, and "Sir David Wears a Crown," by Stuart Walker. "Thursday Evening" is such elemental simplicity as to be produceable by any community group which has among its members: Item, one young married couple. Item: Two mothers-in-law. "Dr. Faust," which Arthur Davison Ficke wrote some years ago as a nonacting play in blank verse, has been rewritten as an acting play, and it was produced—with great success—at the Provincetown Players by Maurice Browne and Ellen Van Volkenburg, the wholly self-sacrificing parents of the Little Theater movement in America, a dramatic blessing which Chicago should be ashamed of herself for losing.

The height of something in rare book sales was one which took place a week or so ago at the Silo galleries of a Bible owned by Charles J. Guiteau, the assassin of President Garfield, with the owner's autograph on the flyleaf.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

A CURIOUS PHENOMENON.

I never know what next you'll find
To agitate your little mind;
What you may do I must confess
Is past the power of man to guess;
But far beyond all shade of doubt
One certainty is mine, old scout:
If I should take you any place
I'm sure to have to wash your face.

Though I should scour and scald and scrub,
Though I should rinse, though I should rub
Your little smiler till it glows
A pure expanse of white and rose,
Ere thirty seconds have ensued,
You'll have regained your nigritude,
And I can't take you any place
Till once again I've washed your face.

No matter what you seem to do
Your face acquires a dusky hue.
If you should walk, if you should ride,
The dirt your features soon will hide—
Why, even when you take your nap
It seems to soil your little map,
And should I take you any place
Again I have to wash your face,
Also your neck,
Likewise your ears,
And your little mitts, too—
Both of 'em.

Varied Activities of Women

When advised to pay an income tax of 3 cents in a lump sum an Atlantic City woman became indignant and decided to pay it in four installments. To pay it this way will not only cost her an additional cent but she must pay 3 cents for each 1 cent money order issued.

The Turkish Order of Chefakat has been conferred upon Mrs. Lew Wallace, widow of the author of "Ben Hur," and Mrs. "Sunset" Cox, wife of the New York statesman.

Forty-one moderately salaried business and professional women in New York have solved the rent problem by purchasing a large apartment house, which is run on a coöperative basis.

RIALTO.

Haley and O'Brien:

"If I had known what a fool you were I never should have married you."

"You might have guessed it when I proposed."

"You never deserved a wife like me."

"And I never deserved rheumatism either, but I've got it just the same."

"After we were married you bragged you gave the minister $10 too much; you know you only gave him $5."

"Well, that was $10 too much."

"I wonder if you've remembered that tomorrow is my birthday?"

"Indeed I did. I went into a department store today and said to the floorwalker: 'I want a birthday present for my wife.' He said, 'How long married?' I said, 'Ten years.' He said, 'Bargain counter to the right.'"

The Britannica—A Literary Masterpiece of Infinite Value

WHEN a man places the Britannica in his home he knows that he has at his command the means to satisfy his every want for information, no matter how varied or exacting are his needs.

The information he obtains from the Britannica is of such high quality—accurate, comprehensive, authoritative—that he has an intense gratification for its unwavering dependability to keep him and his family well informed.

This magnificent work furnishes to the man and to every member of his family, information of such a character as to be of the greatest possible help and inspiration. For there has been built into this great book a touch of genius—a fine honesty of purpose to give to all mankind complete access to the knowledge of the world.

This great work is a literary masterpiece, a recognized authority on knowledge. Its range of subjects is so vast that it is of immense daily value to scholars, journalists, financiers, business and professional men. It appeals alike to men and women.

The Britannica has been furnishing such information for more than a century and a half. Is it any wonder that the Britannica has endeared itself to people in every part of the English speaking world? Is it strange that it stands today as the greatest work of its kind in any language, and that more sets of the Britannica have been sold than all other encyclopaedias combined?

It is no exaggeration to say that the Britannica can be of more actual value to the family than any other book or combination of books. Based on its usefulness in the home, the Britannica is the best possible investment. Simply to own the Britannica is a profound satisfaction, for its possession gives to the man and his family a sense of comfort and security against embarrassing ignorance.

The low price and easy terms, on which the Britannica is sold, make its purchase easy and agreeable. These sets are printed on fine India paper and bound in several styles to please the individual taste. We will be pleased to send you, without charge, our large illustrated descriptive booklet.

JAPAN TIGHTENS ITS HOLD ON CHINA : : : : : : :

By CHARLES DAILEY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MUKDEN.—Wholly aside from the Shantung question, which gives promise of being a serial story, Japan is asserting a stronger attitude in China as a result of the decisions reached at the Washington conference.

"Japan is consolidating its gains," explained a European military man who has visited all the Japanese occupied territory in China. Japan, being a next door neighbor and having most at stake, knows that it will be many years before China will be in a position to take advantage of the benefits of the treaty formulated in Washington and therefore intends to let nothing slip in these uncertain days.

Not that she is "pulling any rough stuff." Far from it. Every day or so the Japanese consul general in Mukden, or the Japanese military adviser, or the Japanese police adviser calls at the yamen of Gen. Chang Tso-lin and tries to consult with him regarding affairs in the ninety-nine year leased territory in Manchuria. But Chang Tso-lin never has recognized the treaty enforced under the twenty-one demands and is always too busy to see them.

So the Japanese operate through the tottering, vacillating cabinet in Peking or go it alone. Many complaints are piling up. Some are trifling, some exaggerated in the public prints, and more are merely nagging. But Japan is digging in just the same. If China ever gets on its feet again Japan will be more firmly intrenched than ever.

Japan thinks it will be time enough to talk about leaving China with its troops and its postoffices and abandoning its extraterritoriality and all that when Great Britain actually leaves Weihaiwei or France quits the leased territory it also promised at Washington to evacuate. China in its present state deserves no better than it receives, and no one knows it better than the representatives of the powers who signed the treaties in Washington.

Run Chinese Traders Out.

Since the conference adjourned the nail has been driven in the coffin of the silver standard in Dairen and rapidly is extending to all parts of Manchuria. When the gold standard was enforced last year upon the Chinese in the Produce exchange at Dairen the silver standard also was continued because the Chinese can do business in no other way without heavy loss, owing to the radical fluctuation of silver in relation to the gold yen, since their purchases in other parts of Manchuria and in Mongolia are of necessity made in silver.

The governor of the Kwantung leased territory issued an edict forbidding the use of the silver standard. A petition was sent to Tokio by the Exporters' Association of Manchurian Agricultural Products and also by the Chinese merchants asking that the silver standard be continued as well as the gold. But Premier Takahashi, after taking the matter up with the cabinet, decided that only the gold standard must be used in the dealings.

Japan also has given notice since the adjournment of the conference that foreigners intending to travel through the leased territory, inclusive of the port of Dairen, must provide themselves with passports which shall bear the visé of a Japanese authority. Unsuspecting travelers who recently have reached Dairen by steamship have been put to no little annoyance owing to their failure to obtain a Japanese visé.

The military governor of Kirin province protested a few weeks ago that the Japanese military police in Hungchun are forcing the Chinese farmers to become Japanese subjects. He wrote the ministry of foreign affairs in Peking asking that a protest be lodged with the Japanese legation. Mr. Obata, the Japanese minister, about the same time lodged a protest with the Chinese foreign minister against the enforcement of a new regulation governing the shooting of wild animals and game in the interior. He maintained that the regulation is causing a great deal of inconvenience to the Japanese residents of Fengtien province by interfering with their fur gathering activities. One complaint counterbalancing the other, and China having a cabinet crisis on her hands, both questions drag.

Policed by Japanese.

Another angle of the Hungchun dispute has been carried to Tokio, where the Chinese minister has formally demanded the withdrawal of the Japanese military police from Hungchun before he will discuss the situation further. Foreign Minister Uchida seems anxious to clear this situation up and has asked that negotiations be resumed, but that Japan be permitted to station military agents in the Yenchi circuit; that ten Japanese police be retained in those districts that are densely populated by Japanese and that one ying (company of fifty men) of Japanese police be quartered permanently in Yenchi to keep a watch on Corean malcontents. China so far has refused to agree on the ground that the presence of Japanese police is a violation of Chinese sovereignty. Meantime the Japanese police remain.

After many months of conversations the Chinese foreign office has obtained the consent of Japan to the surrender to the Chinese government of the telephone service established in Yenchi and Hungchun. It is provided, however, that while the Chinese may charge specified rates for messages the Japanese military shall enjoy exceptional privileges both in the use of the telephone and telegraph. It is also made incumbent upon the Chinese to notify the Japanese at the first report of an uprising by any Corean malcontents that may occur in the district covered by the lines.

The Japanese are organizing an aviation school in Manchuria with experts sent from Dairen, and have established what is known as the Manchurian United Aviation association, composed solely of Japanese aviators, for controlling the three eastern provinces.

Meantime the economic development of both the leased and "special interest" territory in Manchuria goes on. The colonial bureau of the Japanese government has formed a real estate company with a capital of 20,000,000 yen for the laying out of rice paddies in Manchuria and Mongolia. The company will receive a bounty of 1,000,000 yen. The climate is hardly suited to rice culture, but the Japanese prefer rice to wheat. The latter with kaoliang is the cereal diet of the Chinese in Manchuria and Mongolia.

Improve Wireless Plants.

Elsewhere in China, Japan is preparing for the day of evacuation by making improvements that will last until that date arrives. Two masts and one more attenae were added recently to the wireless plant in Tientsin. New attenae have been strung from the mast to the tall chimney in the legation in Peking. Two new masts, together with an arc transmitter, have been completed at Chinwangtao. The wireless plant at Hankow is one of the newest design and the second and more powerful plant at Tsingtao is now in operation. The plant at Tsinanfu has been put in good condition. Should Japan and the other powers evacuate China soon the cost of the recent improvements will be reckoned in figuring the amount China must pay.

Formal complaint has been filed with the provincial authorities at Hankow that the Japanese are adding to their concession there by encroaching on Chinese soil. False surveys are alleged and the foreign office is asked to make a strong protest to Japan.

The worst charge against the Japanese is that brought by the poor people who are suffering from the loss in exchange due to the light weight copper coins that are manufactured by Japanese and shipped into China, where they are put into circulation as Chinese coins. Chinese money changers and tobacco merchants met recently in Shanghai to take up the question of losses they have suffered through these light weight coins. They reached the conclusion that under present conditions there is no way in which the importation can be prevented, owing to the methods employed and the cost of detection.

They Laugh at This in Vaudeville

M'VICKERS.

James Grady: The best place for mothers to go with marriageable daughters is to Sulphur Springs, because they are good places for matchmaking. If a man eats dates, is he consuming time? My landlord told me he was going to raise my rent. I told him I was much obliged, because I couldn't raise it myself. In some parts of the world fruit lays on the ground. In New York fruit stands on the corners. Elopements are getting fashionable; I read this morning of a horse running away with a young widow. Talking about large vegetables, I know a man in California who raised a pumpkin so large that his two children use a half each for a cradle. I was sick; the doctor said all I needed was exercise. I've been a letter carrier for the last five years.

Undivided Responsibility

IN SETTING up its policy of doing business, Holland Furnace Company changed all previous customs and methods in the warm air heating industry.

And the results of economy and comfort that followed have been so impressive as to excite a greater public interest in warm air heating than was ever before expressed for any kind or type of heating system throughout the entire history of heating.

If you are building or remodeling your home, or if your present heating system is not satisfactory, you will be interested in the information frankly and fairly recounted on this page.

How Undivided Responsibility has made warm air the finest as well as the most economical heat in the world for any kind or size of house is a pleasing proof of the wisdom of a business policy which provides and insures that in each transaction the man who buys shall profit more than the company who sells.

The Three-Way Plan

In the usual way that furnaces were sold this could not be done. The manufacturer made the furnace and sold it to a dealer. The dealer sold it to a home owner, and sent out a tin-smith or day-job-man to make the installation.

In view of the fact that more than fifty per cent of the responsibility for successful operation rests upon the plan and manner of installation, how could there be any actual guarantee of satisfaction through such methods?

The finest violin squawks horribly in the hands of the novice—and the best made furnace is robbed of its efficiency through incompetent installation.

Yet hundreds of thousands of furnaces have been (and many still are) "installed" by men who know nothing at all about the science of heating—men who never even understood the natural laws of air circulation.

The dealer, the plumber and the tin-smith are preoccupied—furnaces being a side line. Even if they desired to specialize in them, they haven't the technical knowledge and do not have opportunity to obtain scientific training.

No matter how conscientious such a man may be, his installation is bound to be substantially guesswork—untrained judgment, to say the least.

We believe there has been more poor workmanship in the field of warm air heating than in all other types put together.

No wonder that many who thereby have enjoyed little of the rightful benefits of their investment speak of it as "hot air" heat. "Hot air" installation would more correctly name the fault.

Food for Thought

And there is food for thought in all this. For, anything that can be subjected to such abuse and still survive must have as its foundation a service that is fundamentally sound if wisely used.

The simple, undeniable fact is that a good Warm-Air Furnace, wherein the installation is scientifically designed and erected to meet the specific requirements for the house for which it is purchased, becomes the very finest home heating system in the world today.

And now, through Holland policy of Undivided Responsibility, this quality of heating is available under the Company's guarantee to every home.

No other method equals good Warm-Air heating, for health, comfort, ease of operation and economy of design.

Stop and think of just a few plain, common-sense reasons; and make some obvious comparisons with other types that cost much more. Take, for instance, the question of radiation as against circulation:

Radiation Against Circulation

Breathing stagnant air is just as unwise as drinking stagnant water. Radiated heat remains in one room and becomes stagnant, while with a Holland Furnace—Holland installed—all the air of every room is changed at least four times every hour. A constant, healthy, stimulating replenishment—a complete, scientific, ventilating ciculation, without drafts.

Again, radiated heat is of very necessity dry. Standing water must be kept in each room to evaporate. On the other hand, Holland heat is moist and natural through scientifically controlled evaporation in the furnace itself.

Then, take the question of floors and basement. A heating plant that keeps the basement cold is sometimes foolishly pointed out as an advantage. A little thought will tell you that a basement totally cold makes warm living room floors impossible. It is just as wrong to make a refrigerator of one's basement as it is to overheat it. Between the two there is moderation, and common sense.

Holland basements are intentionally comfortably warm—and the floors of Holland heated homes are likewise comfortable and safe for children. Basement warmth rises to the floor and is never lost.

Consider These Facts

Take up every phase of health, comfort and economy, point by point:

Evenness of temperature throughout a room and throughout a house naturally protects health.

Yet in rooms supplied with radiated heat an even distribution is next to impossible. Not being in circulation, the air rises and lodges near the ceiling as it becomes heated, while the colder air settles to the floor. In many tests of rooms unscientifically heated, the temperature at the floor has been found to be only one-half that of six feet higher—45 and 90 degrees respectively. Cold feet and hot heads do not make for either comfort or health.

In a Holland heated home the temperature throughout each room and throughout every room is the same, to almost mathematical precision. And there are no cold corners, no stuffy stagnant air to breathe, no climatic changes in going from one room to another.

Great Savings

For practical economy of operation year-in-and-out, prices-in-and-out, strikes-in-and-out, a heating plant must burn with full efficiency either hard or soft coal, coke or wood. Holland is designed for the use of any and all kinds of fuel.

In addition, there is the great saving on first cost of plant and installation, and the continuous saving on fuel, over any other type of heating. A warm-air system costs less than half that of steam, vapor or hot-water.

And should the fire go out in the coldest weather there are no pipes to freeze, causing discomfort and expensive repairs.

An important advantage of warm-air installation not usually thought of is that of saving room. There are no radiators or steam-pipes to obstruct the placing of furniture or to mar the decorative scheme of a room. Holland registers open from inner sidewalls—out of the way, inconspicuous, clean and convenient.

Also, there is the ease of firing—a few minutes' attention morning and evening—thermostatic control of temperature if desired—the quick response of comfortable heat on early winter mornings or to meet sudden weather changes during the day.

Then think of the early autumn and late spring days and evenings, when only a little fire—just to take the chill off—makes the house so comfortable. A little waste-paper or a few kindlings in the Holland—and happy hours above.

And back of all there is the Holland policy of Undivided Responsibility.

Holland One-Way Plan

The Holland Furnace Company deals direct with all its customers, and holds itself solely responsible for every Holland plant installed. Every Holland furnace is made in Holland factories. Each system is planned to fit the individual house for which it is purchased. And the actual installation is made by trained Holland installers.

In other words, Holland does not simply guarantee the quality of materials, shouldering the responsibility for installation upon some dealer or tin-smith agent.

Holland does the entire job—guarantees the entire job after it is completed—and stands back of it to insure that you have a heating plant that will successfully heat your home. And the cost is less; because good workmanship is always true economy.

It is this policy of Undivided Responsibility that has resulted in the marvelous growth of this Company, from its inception a few years ago to its uncontested leadership today. In a little more than six states, to which Holland service has been extended, Holland installs more furnaces than any other company sells throughout the entire world.

Such a record could only be established through the good-will of those served. Every Holland owner is a Holland booster—a "warm friend."

Now, before house-cleaning, is a splendid time to have your furnace installed. Holland prices are down to rock-bottom—and there are easy terms if you desire them.

Without obligating you in the least, we will gladly submit complete information and estimate.

Write, telephone or call at your nearest Holland Branch. There are over 240 of them listed below.

Special Spring Terms

For the benefit of those who wish their work done and out of the way before house-cleaning, we will install a Holland at once upon small payment to cover delivery expense—no other payment until July first, and then one year to pay in easy monthly installments.

GEOLOGY

AIR BREATHERS OF THE SILURIAN.

WE are standing on the shore of the Silurian sea. The sky is clear and blue over us, and a cool, almost raw, wind is raising white caps on the water. The land that we have just crossed was desertlike, alkaline, and dusty. In low spots there were mosses and algas making a miserable attempt to be green, but the high places were yellow and parched.

Water was a welcome sight to our eyes. Our thirsty throats needed it. We quickened our step, and stooped to the water to drink. O, so nasty! The sea was brine, charged not only with salt but with salts. There will be no drinking here.

We push on up the bare strand for several miles to a place where a meandering river empties in. Its water is warm, and green with algae, but it is drinkable, and we take it. The Silurian age in America was an age of drought and salty inlets. The land was low and rolling, frequently indented by estuaries. Some of them were cut off for long intervals from the ocean and became bitter. The remains of these shallows are still to be found. Every summer they evaporated, and every winter rain and flood washed gritty mud into them. Salty shales can still be found in Michigan, Ontario, Ohio, and New York that were laid down in the Silurian age.

The river we have found flows into the sea by a broad delta, with innumerable little islands at its mouth. As we stand watching the green waves come mingling with the blue, a something moving on the sands attracts our eyes. There are others like it. A moving thing on land in Silurian times is unusual. It is revolutionary.

The world is still too young to bear land loving creatures. They might starve to death upon its arid wastes. Yet here we behold little curl tailed animals running about, dabbling their feet in the ripples on the shore. We come closer. Our presence does not frighten them. They have no instinct to fear us, for no enemies of our size exist on their small horizon. They are scorpions. Right well built scorpions they are, too, except that they are amphibious, like frogs, and must return to the water from time to time to replenish the water in their gill cases. They are eating worms and molluscs cast up on the shore. As we watch, one of them runs into the shallows for its prey, stings it, and drags it out.

The Water Scorpion Dragged a Trilobite from the Shallows.

The Silurian Sea.

Beneath the surface of the water there is life. It resembles the pond life of today, but is much lower in evolution. The air breathing scorpions are a great step in advance over their aquatic cousins, the eurypterids, and their still more distinct relatives, the Trilobites.

In Silurian times an air breathing life was forced on many creatures. When their native pools dried up everything could either breathe air or suffocate. There was a high premium put on progressive evolution toward lungs, and a death penalty for those who held back. It was at this time that the ancestors of modern insects ceased to be bottom crawlers and became preeminently animals of the air. The air breathing anthropoda have now evolved so far that they have few water living relatives left. All insects respire free oxygen, even such aquatic forms as dragon fly larvæ, whose gills are full of air instead of blood.

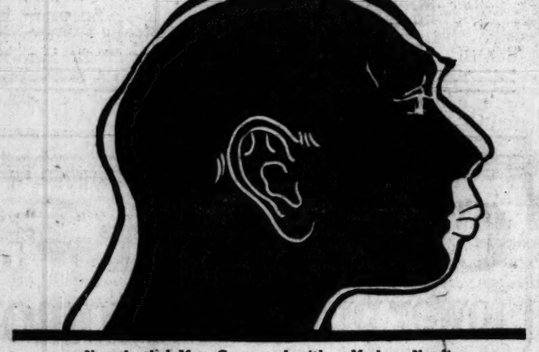
MAN

THE EVOLUTION OF FAILURES.

EVOLUTION has been criticized because there was a supposition that it favored the belief that man was a lineal descendant of the apes and at one time our ancestors dwelt in trees and behaved with simian manners. Evolution teaches no such thing. Anthropologists and biologists are agreed that man's ancestors were essentially creatures whose homes were in grottoes and sheltered spots.

Man never was an ape. From the first cell to the present, our forbears have been the most intelligent beings the world afforded. If this were not so, we would not be supreme today. Apes and monkeys are specializing away from the human stock as rapidly as they can. Every generation of them is more monkeyish than the last, while each of ours is more human.

Man sprang into importance suddenly, in a geological sense. There are no traces of his bones among the hippotomi, saber tooth cats, camels, elephants, and hyena dogs of the ages before the Pliocene. Our early ancestors undoubtedly were small. There is some indication that shrews and lemurs are distant relatives of ours who fell into green pastures while we kept on the hard road. Our prototypes remained small until their plan of life was all complete. Their hearts were right, their feet and hands were right, and their minds were sharpwitted before they attempted to compete with the fierce brutes of past days. Our childhood evolution is all done when we are small, so that when we are grown we can go forth to conquer obstacles.



Neanderthal Man Compared with a Modern Nordic.

Man's rise has been so rapid that he has left but few spoiled attempts behind. A dozen types of rhinoceros have been tried and found wanting. Lizards have been put in the scales, and more than nine-tenths of them discarded as impractical creatures. Molluscs by the hundreds have been so ill fitted to their plan of life that they had to be allowed to die. We know this by their fossils.

Man has few fossils, but some of them tell an interesting story. It appears that a race of man was tested out before your ancestors and mine came into Europe. Neanderthal men were given half a million years to prove what they could do. They proved to a patient and tolerant nature that they could do nothing. They are all dead now.

Racially, the Neanderthals appear to have been of the same stock that made the Nordics. They were Aryan in their essential plan. Their remains show it. The short Nordic Saxon type, with its long palms and short fingers, short arms and legs and long trunks, heavy brow ridges with slanting foreheads, wide sharp noses, and heads long from the ears forward, is the nearest approach to the Neanderthal among living men.

Yet the gulf between the two is immense. The Neanderthals were a dying race long before the Cromagnons came to finish them. Their weaknesses were the weaknesses of Nordics, greatly magnified. They could understand external things, but they had no understanding of themselves. Their ability to fight did not keep pace with their sympathy for each other. Their skulls show a keen-witted, destructive, quarrelsome race, but one that lacked incentive to progress.

CHEMISTRY

COMPOSITION OF WATER.

WATER is a compound of oxygen and hydrogen gases. When these two substances burn water is produced.

Hold a cold plate in a gas or alcohol flame for an instant. When you remove it little water drops can be discovered where the flame touched. How did they get there? Could it be possible that they came from fire?

It is not only possible; it is true. Gas and alcohol contain compounds rich in hydrogen. When they burn the hydrogen leaves its old carbon yoke mates and goes over to the oxygen. The result is water.

The Chemistry of Water.

Hook several strong dry cell batteries together, and thrust the open ends into a glass of water. Bubble escape from one wire, and the other is blackened. The free gas is hydrogen; the copper is blackened by the attack of nacent oxygen.

Make electrodes of graphite sticks from a lead pencil. Carbon in the shape of graphite is not readily attacked by oxygen. Both oxygen and hydrogen now come bubbling off. Collect them in bottles of water turned mouth down. You notice at once that twice as much hydrogen as oxygen escapes. There is twice as much hydrogen as oxygen in water, so the symbol for the latter is H_2O. Mix the oxygen and hydrogen together in small quantities and light it. It explodes with a sharp whistle, forming water once more.

GETTING GLASSWARE CLEAN.

WHEN a piece of glass is chemically clean it has a peculiar, rather sticky feeling to the touch. To clean glass, first subject it to some strong acid like nitric or sulphuric. If it is quite dirty, put some potassium bichromate in the sulphuric acid. The acid destroys all organic substances. Then dip it in caustic potash or strong soap. Rinse in clear water and polish with an old, clean cotton cloth. If you breathe on dirty glass the moisture persists for a little time, but on clean glass it vanishes at once.

Through the MICROSCOPE

INSIDE A SLICE OF BREAD.

WHAT kind of a view of your slice of bread does that gnat yonder get? I just noticed that she was flying about it.

"Why," you exclaim, "how would it be possible for me to know? I haven't gnat's eyes."

True, but we have a microscope, and its lenses approximate closely a midget's nearsighted vision. Let us put the bread on the stage of our magnifier, and lower the lenses into focus. At first you can see only a yellowish blur. This corresponds to the fly's view when a few inches above the bread. An insect's sense of odor is usually keen, and they fly by scent quite as much as by sight. As our glass draws closer the details of the bread appear. Do you recognize them?

"Why, this doesn't look like bread at all!" you say. "I see a glassy substance hollowed with caves and grottoes! Each one is full of fairy tracery!"

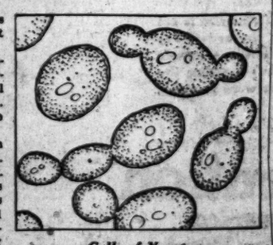
Here is the crust. Now what do you observe?

"Caverns charred and terribly squeezed. Some of them are quite collapsed. The outside is brownish and black, and the burning extends to considerable depths inside."

The things you call caverns are really little bubbles in the dough. Do you remember how bread is made? A dough is mixed of flour, grease, salt, yeast, and such other lesser ingredients as the recipe may call for, and is then set away to rise. If we should look at it a few hours later we would find the whole substance alive with living yeast germs.

Yeast is a fungous plant related to toadstools. It grows on starchy or sugary foods. The yeast in the dough found warmth and moisture exactly suited to its needs. Each cell of it began reproducing at an enormous rate. Every new generation of yeasts added numbers to the swarms that were feasting on the flour.

Bubbles in Bread.



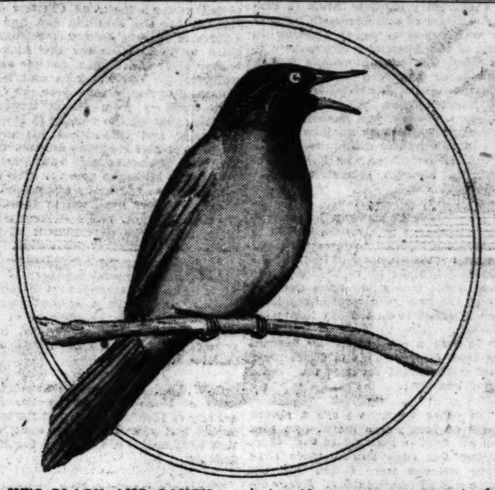
Cells of Yeast.

Yeast produces two chemical substances in the dough, alcohol and carbonic acid. You can smell the alcohol if you breathe close to the fresh dough. You can see the mass rising as the carbon dioxide is liberated.

When the dough seems light enough it is worked into loaves and baked. The heat of the oven kills the yeast. It volatilizes all the alcohol and drives off the carbon dioxide. As these gases expand they push out their prison and as they escape they rupture the restraining walls of the bubbles, creating the delicate tracery you so admired in the bread.

If fermentation is allowed to go on too long some of the alcohol turns to acetic acid, and the dough turns sour. The baker generally manipulates the oven to form a hard crust of collapsed bubbles about the raw dough inside which holds back the gases in the loaf until their pressure can expand the bread and prevent it from being soggy.

Birds



HE'S BLACK AND SAUCY.

GRACKLES are characteristic birds of spring. They walk around pertly in their glistening black and purple bronze plumage. When you come near one he looks sideways up at you out of a lemon yellow eye, as if to say:

"Well, big clumsy, I see you're here!"

Grackles are among the few birds that will visit cities. They can be taught to be tame, like pigeons, and to eat popcorn out of people's hands.

ELECTRICITY

THE SUBSTANCE OF ELECTRICITY.

ELECTRICITY is made of particles. There are two kinds of them, protons and electrons. Protons are positive electricity and electrons are negative. Both have been isolated. We do not know what they look like, for their size is far below the grasp of any magnifier yet invented, but something of their masses, their paths, their affinities, and their habits has been learned.

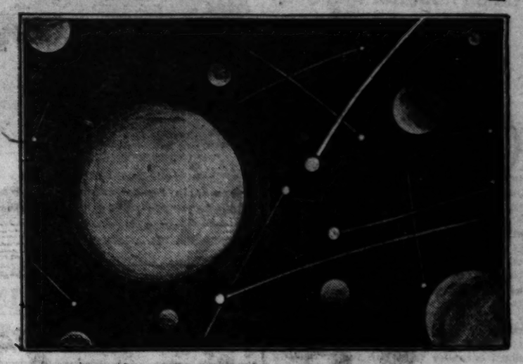
Protons are large and heavy, while electrons are small and active. Every proton weighs 1,845 times as much as an electron. Protons form the centers of little solar systems. Electrons are the satellites of protons. They revolve in orbits, and so far as is known they follow the same laws of gravity that larger bodies obey.

The distance between proton and electron in atomic systems is large. They appear to be almost up to the same ratio as the space between the earth and the sun.

Space about particles of electricity is empty. If we could see an atomic system we would behold a crowd of massive sphere in the center, attended by a swarm of flying motes, ceaselessly revolving.

Electricity from all substances, metals, waxes, oils, organic bodies, and even gases is invariably the same. We are therefore led to believe that all electrons are pieces of matter just alike.

We know what a proton is. It is the basic part of the hydrogen atom.



Satellite Electrons Circle Protons.

Hydrogen, the gas that is used to fill balloons, to make explosive soap bubbles, and which forms so extensive a part of the atmosphere of the sun and stars, and of water here on earth, is composed of swarms of atoms. Each atom consists of one large proton with one little electron circling about it. A helium atom consists of four protons and four electrons. There is strong evidence that all matter contains protonic hydrogen as a base, and in the substance known as nitrogen this has been proved to be so.

When a proton loses an electron from its normal family it is said to have acquired a positive charge. When it gains one, its charge is negative. It is unfortunate that electrical symbolism was fixed before the true nature of positive and negative charges was undersood, but we will have to make the most of it now, and remember that the terms mean just the opposite of what they say. Positive means less electrons than normal and negative means more.

When you rub two dissimilar substances together, such as a woolen cloth upon a gutta percha comb, the latter carries off a negative charge. The surface of the hard rubber was not smooth, even though it seemed so to you. Electrically, its myriads of atomic systems were loosely bound together and gave a diffused boundary, much like the edge of a cloud.

When you rubbed the comb on the wool the outer molecules of the one ploughed through the outer molecules of the other. Energy from your arm gave the atoms in the comb power to rend electrons loose from the atoms in the wool and carry them off. The wool, being rubbed, had fewer electrons than it could hold and was positively charged, while the comb was gorged—had more electrons than it needed, and so was negative.

ASTRONOMY

Naked Peaks Glare Down on Us.

IMBRIUM AND THE TEMPLE OF THE SUN.

EXPLORERS, descending into the depths of the crater of Mauna Loa, assert that the volcano is a gigantic cauldron. The level floor is the top of a subtarranean column of molten lava. The sides often rise sheer from the glowing lake inside, and slope gradually down beyond, forming the contour of the island of Hawaii. Mauna Loa is one of the largest active volcanoes in the world, but it is dwarfed into complete insignificance beside those of its class on the moon.

There are dark roundish markings on the surface of our satellite. We call their aggregate the man in the moon. In telescopes all semblance to a man's face vanishes, and a landscape is revealed—harsher and more fire scarred than your imagination can picture. The surface of the moon is pitted with craters. Mount Vesuvius is accounted a large volcano on earth, but on the moon it would be of the most insignificant size. Eruptive volcanoes there average about fifty miles across. Their ashes gleam out on the darker underrock. The underrock itself is also lava.

The spots which make the man's face, and which astronomers call Mare, are the floors of cauldra of the Mauna Loa type. The Mare Imbrium is one of the largest. It is over three hundred miles across. At one time there was on ocean of fire in it. There is no fire now. Utter cold of planetary space reigns over the hardened scoria.

The Arrow Points to Mare Imbrium.

We alight from the telescope, and walk upon the surface of Imbrium. The slate gray sheet extends in all directions. Our horizon drops away so rapidly that we can see for only a few miles, although there is no air to blur our sight. Distant objects stand in as sharp relief as those nearby. The rocks we tread are vitreous and glassy, smooth in spots and sharp as glass in others. Dust lies everywhere, full of boulders and grit. How light we feel! We can jump eighteen feet from the ground with no more effort than we would expend to jump three feet on earth, and we come down slowly and lightly, like feathers fall. The moon has little gravity.

We pause to look into a crater we chance to pass. Its cup is a mile across and extremely deep, blown out of solid rock. What a blast there must have been to dig it. There are hundreds of thousands of craters on the moon just like that. We explore its depths. The rocks about it are fissured and cracked from the shock, and at the bottom is the inevitable throat.

Walking on across the stony sea, we approach the lava's rim. Evidences of the edge are all about us, long before we see the naked walls. Cracks and chasms as deep as the canyon of the Colorado river parallel the shore. Out on the open lava a rising and falling tide could be accommodated, but near the shore the fiery billows alternately pulled and piled, creating a bulwark of high mountains flanked by parallel fissures. Along many of the vents are strings of craters. How they must have boomed and sputtered as the cracks opened. Along others are eruptions of exuded lava, great cones of layered rock, like gigantic stalagmites built up from below.

As we trudge on the scene grows rougher and wilder. The crests of mountains appear over the horizon. Marks of fire, shattered rock, and twisted hills grow on every hand. The mountains we are approaching are the Lunar Apennines. They stand clear and sharp above us, frowning in the shadows and gleaming where the sunshine falls on them.

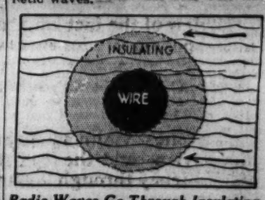
A natural amphitheater indepts their rugged range. The hard floor of Imbrium extends inside, like a land rocked bay. To the sides and behind the mountains tower miles above us. A great chasm cleaves its side and floor. A mightier chasm splits the Apennines from crest to foundation, so that we can look through them to the mountains in the distance.

We stand at the entrance of the Temple of the Sun. Three miles away on either hand its pylons rise. Over us its towering crags glare down. "Are you alive?" they say. "What errand carries you to come into our land of death?" The vault above our heads is black as ink, with staring stars like eyes, although the sun is shining. There is no air about us and no sound. "Time means nothing," say the mountains. "Here time has no mark. Yesterday was like today—tomorrow will be like it—every tomorrow will be changeless. There was never life upon our fire burned peaks. On earth you have change, and change makes life possible. Here nothing ever happens. Blot out all clouds from the world, all air, all living things, strip and melt the rocks, rend and fissure them with dynamite until they lie in heaps, pour lava over them to cool to stone, take away all seasons, all twilight, all hope forever, and your earth will be what our moon is—a dead planet."

RADIO

INSULATORS AND WIRELESS WAVES.

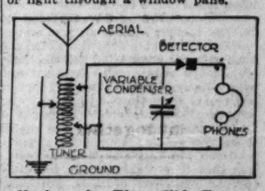
RADIO waves pass through insulation. Many readers have written in to inquire if an insulated aerial will work. It will. The insulating makes no difference in receptive power for a radio. The confusion in the builders' minds is doubtless due to a misunderstanding of the nature of electricity and electro-magnetic waves.



Radio Waves Go Through Insulating.

Electricity and hertzian waves are not the same thing. Electric currents are processions of moving particles, while wireless waves are agitations in the ether. The two bear much the same relation to each other that the sounds from falling stones have to the stones themselves.

Electricity is a tangible, corporal substance that must stay in the metal because the outside insulating is not suited for its propagation. Radio waves can go through insulating material like sound goes through a card or light through a window pane.



Hookup of a Three Slide Tuner.

When radio waves strike metal they excite fresh agitations of the atoms there, generating electrical disturbances. Insulated wire is more expensive than bare wire, so the latter is generally employed in places where it is just as good. As far as any difference exists in receptive power, there is none.

Questions and Answers

T. R. JR.: As closely as I can judge from your picture you seem to be a Hamite. Your forehead, nose, cheeks, lips, and jaws are especially significant. Hamitic peoples inhabit large tracts of north Africa, as is shown on the map. They differ from the Semites in these regions principally in language. Hamites are one of the oldest civilized human stocks. Their skins are dark, but they are true members of the Caucasian division of mankind, and are most closely related to Arabs and other southwestern orientals.

C. I. B.: "Level" on the surface of the earth in the ordinary sense means the surface this sphere would take if it were completely encompassed by water. All verticals are referred to the center of the earth. "Level" in an astronomical sense means a mathematical line, such as is taken by a beam of light.

J. B. S.: I think you take too finite a view of man's creation. It is rather for us to discover what the facts of the universe are and shape our ideals and beliefs with them than it is to set up imaginary standards of perfection and be hurt when they are proved too limited. Evolutionists do not teach that man is descended from a tadpole. They say that as we evolved we passed through a stage related to the tadpole's present structure. Do not belittle the pollywog. If you were to study him, watch him, and try to know something of his life, hopes, and struggles I am sure that you would get a broader view of creation.

MATHEMATICS

I Broke This Mirror—So.

FRACTURES ARE RADIAL.

FRACTURES always tend to be radially symmetrical. When the blow occurs at one point only the shock expands in a figure that partakes of the nature of a conic section. I selected a well annealed mirror as a substance most likely to be homogenous. On its center I laid a steel ball, which, as is well known, was tangent to the glass at only one point. I struck the sphere a blow with a hammer. The glass fractured with a ping, and I was rewarded with ten radial cracks from a focus in as near perfect symmetry as the formation of the molecules allowed.

MOTORDOM

Cooling System Needs Attention About This Time

Clean Radiator and Good Connections Give Service.

BY HIGH SPEED.

ONE of the most thoroughly efficient units in the modern motor vehicle is the cooling system. The average car owner pretty nearly forgets the existence of this part of the car's anatomy except for the rare occasion when something goes wrong in it. Now, it is generally possible to forestall any failure in the cooling system if certain simple rules of maintenance are followed, and it is to suggest how this may be accomplished that the present article is written.

While there are today two distinct methods of keeping the motor within the necessary temperature bounds, we shall consider first the water cooling, which is used on all except two American cars. In the water cooling system the liquid is contained in jackets around the cylinders, and it is kept in motion constantly in order that it may remain at a temperature low enough to perform its function.

In the main, water cooling systems are all very much alike. The water in the jackets circulates around the cylinders, picking up the excess heat and then going to the top of the radiator, whence it flows downward to the bottom through cells or tubes, getting rid of much of its heat on the way. A fan is provided to such air in through the tubes of the radiator, assisting in the dissipation of the heat. Without the help of the fan, it would require a much greater area of radiation to get rid of the heat.

Water cooling systems are divided into two distinct types, known respectively as thermo-syphon and pump. The thermo-syphon depends for its effectiveness on the working of a simple natural law. Hot water is lighter than cold and rises to the top. In the thermo-syphon system the water near the base of the hot water jackets becomes heated first and, following this law, rises to the top, displacing the cooler water there. In this way a circulation is set up; the hot water rises, flows down through the radiator, where its heat is carried away. Obviously, with this method of keeping the cooling water moving the passages and tubes of the water system must be of generous size and the radiator must be located well above the water jackets, so that the outlet pipe will slant upward, the inlet pipe showing little deviation from the straight.

The thermo-syphon water system has the great advantage of simplicity; in fact, nothing could be simpler; it follows directly the working of a natural law. When properly designed, the system is quite adequate to ordinary demands. It is particularly effective on small engines. The matter of design is paramount with respect to this type of cooling system. In the thermo-syphon cooling system obstructions are more serious than in the pump system, because there is not the positive flow of water which tends to push minor obstructions of foreign matter out of the way. The thermo-syphon system must be kept rigorously clean.

In the pump cooling system a centrifugal pump, driven from the engine, forces the water around the system, thus maintaining the circulation needed for proper cooling. As long as the engine is running the pump is operating and the water is circulating. The pump system is more expensive to install, which explains why a majority of our American cars use thermo-syphon cooling.

The cooling system does not need any very great amount of attention. It should be thoroughly cleaned out at least once a year and it is advisable to take the radiator to a firm specializing in this work for cleansing. As much as four pounds of muck are often taken out of one radiator. Many car owners find it advantageous to fill the cooling system with a strong solution of washing soda and water and then run the engine for half an hour. This helps reduce scale deposits and when the system is drained and flushed out two or three times with clear water a noticeable improvement in operation is inevitable. Once a year the rubber hose connections should be renewed and the fan belt should be tested to see that it is tight enough to insure proper operation of this important unit.

EIGHT WHEEL TRACTION

The eight wheel bus has come to California roads where unbroken pavements have made highway traffic a state feature. The feature is said to prevent skidding, to add to the vehicle's traction, and to give it easier riding qualities. In Los Angeles it is planned to use the busses to replace many street cars.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Find the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question George E. Fuller, Mgr., Power Farming Bureau, Monadnock building, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Should horse drawn vehicles be barred from the loop to speed up traffic?

Where Asked.

North Clark street and Chicago avenue.

The Answers.

James Ward, 3909 N. Bernard street, taxi chauffeur—I would not say that horse drawn vehicles should be barred from the loop, but they should not be allowed on the car tracks in the loop or any other vehicle that doesn't go over five miles an hour. Another thing, no cars should be parked more than six inches from a curb. That would give all vehicles a chance to go right through downtown, and they have as much right in the loop as the auto. In fact, if you look up the ordinances you will find it is the mechanically driven vehicle that is legally barred from the downtown section.

Charles E. Klein, 2105 Avers avenue, musician—I don't see why horse drawn vehicles should be barred from the loop for any reason whatever. They have just as much right on the streets as a vehicle run by gas. They don't go quite so fast, but that is not sufficient reason for barring them from our downtown streets. A tax is collected from the owner of a horse drawn vehicle the same as from the owner of an auto.

E. J. Johnson, 160 East Ohio street, billiard parlor proprietor — I believe horse drawn vehicles should be barred from the loop. They are serious obstructors to traffic. Many men say it doesn't pay to drive their autos downtown. Horse drawn vehicles are slow goers. Everything that can be done to speed up traffic in a general way for the greatest number ought to be done.

S. E. McCafferty, 754 N. Clark street, salesman—No, sir, horse drawn vehicles should not be barred from the loop in order to help speed up traffic. Horse drawn vehicles served us in the past and they probably will continue to do so in the future, especially on short hauls. We should not hinder the commercial life of the loop just for the benefit of auto traffic.

A. M. Endres, 2441 Sunnyside avenue, railroad clerk—No, horse drawn vehicles should not be barred from the loop in order to speed up traffic. It is no fault of the business man that no provisions have been made for horse drawn traffic

Illinois Owners Get Half Million License Plates

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—[Special.]—Emphatic denial was made by Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson of statements in an article which has appeared recently in some of the downstate newspapers to the effect that the automobile department is or has been swamped with applications and is behind in sending out license plates. The report, the secretary believes, was inspired in the first place by persons anxious to find an excuse for their delinquency in securing license plates, and it has been reprinted through ignorance of the real conditions.

"The article states that the automobile department is a month behind in sending out plates," Secretary Emmerson said. "As a matter of fact, the department is right up to the minute in sending out plates and from the first day of the new year applications have been attended to on the day they were received.

"To date a total of 533,000 licenses has been issued. This is 60,000 more than were issued during the same period last year.

"In other words, we are a month ahead of last year's mark, and that was the banner year up to that time. During the rush season more than 10,000 licenses were issued and the plates mailed out each day. Every application has received attention on the day it reached the department.

"For several weeks a force of inspectors from my office, armed with authority to arrest delinquents, has been scouring the state in an effort to force those who have not applied for licenses to send in their applications at once."

Removing Gears.

When attempting to remove sprockets or gears from the shafts to which they are attached by means of taper or plain fits and keys, care must be exercised not to use the hammer too freely, for fear of either fracturing the gear or springing it out of line. A so-called pulley puller or special jack may be improvised without difficulty under almost any circumstances and by its use the part may be removed straight without imposing any undue strain upon it.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

TWO of the most important business changes in recent years along auto row were completed last week with the final establishment of W. E. Butler, veteran air cooled motor expert, as Chicago distributor for the Franklin car, and of Lafayette Markle, former Studebaker chief, as distributor for the Rickenbacker six. Mr. Butler, former sales manager for the Franklin and later Holmes distributor, took over the Chicago territory from Frank Sanders, who last year led the country in Franklin sales, and established his headquarters at 2317 Michigan avenue. Mr. Markle's Rickenbacker headquarters are at 2315 Michigan avenue. The latter change was formally announced at a Rickenbacker luncheon in the Congress when Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker made public the development of 600 monthly Rickenbacker production.

A. Johnson, general manager of the Stutz Chicago company, 1424 Michigan avenue, announces a special demonstration week for the showing of the new Stutz "D. H." motor and compensated spring suspension, beginning tomorrow.

C. W. Nash announced last week that sales of Nash cars during the first quarter of 1922 have exceeded the same period last year by 50 per cent, and that 5,025 orders are on hand for April delivery.

The active safety first campaign waged in the Franklin factory last year brought about a decrease of 38.2 in the number of plant accidents.

Meeting the Demand That Grew Overnight

April production of the Radio Corporation of America in vacuum tubes, used in radio transmitting and receiving sets, will reach 150,000.

The production schedule for May calls for a total delivery of 175,000 vacuum tubes.

Program will reach 200,000 a month or more in June, according to public and trade requirements.

CRYSTAL detectors served the purposes of the larger number of amateurs in the early days. The great demand for vacuum tubes is a development of the past six weeks, due entirely to the sudden popularity of broadcasting.

Although machines play a part in the major processes of manufacture, tubes are still largely made by hand. The hand work plays a far more important part in making vacuum tubes than in any other piece of electrical apparatus with which the public is familiar.

Manufacture of the delicate vacuum tubes used as detectors, transmitters and amplifiers, has been subject to the usual difficulties in bringing about quantity production.

During the first eleven months of 1921, the factories produced for the Radio Corporation of America an average of 5,000 tubes per month. This rate of production, small as it seems now, was gradually producing a surplus. Then, suddenly, in one or two territories, broadcasting jumped into popular favor over night. On December 30, the production schedule was increased to 40,000 tubes per month. In January of this year, the Radio Corporation of America pushed the schedule to 60,000 per month—a figure largely in excess of the demand at that time.

Setting the Production Pace

The present concerted demand, due to the further expansion of broadcasting, came early in February. On February 3, the factories were asked to do everything in their power to reach 75,000 vacuum tubes—to try to reach it during that month. They did their utmost. They came close to the production goal, and the following month, March, they not only reached 75,000, but bettered it by several thousand. April calls for 150,000, and May for 175,000.

In the event that no surplus results from the present expanded program, facilities will be further increased. It is easier to increase production now than it was four months ago, because it is easier to increase the size of a large and well trained organization than to build a new one. Technically trained forces are required in the factories, which are working with skill and energy. The factory forces are fully conscious of the present public interest in their work and their own important function in the program of the Radio Corporation of America—a program based upon the sound business policy of serving the public faithfully and intelligently.

The production program of the Radio Corporation of America is set higher than the existing demand during the month the orders are placed at the factories. It is frankly recognized, however, that one prospective purchaser may inquire at five stores, thus creating the impression that five sales would be made if the tubes were in stock, whereas only one would be made.

KALES Hindview MIRROR

You are Safe in Buying a Kales "Hindview"

Of course you will sooner or later equip your car with a rear vision mirror.

Drivers are rapidly coming to realize that it is the handiest, most necessary accessory they can put on their cars. Once properly installed, drivers are never satisfied to be without one.

There are a number of points to be watched in buying a mirror. The support is important. An insecure support which rattles or requires the use of a wrench or screwdriver in order to change the position of the mirror is a constant nuisance.

The Kales "Hindview" Mirror is supported by a ball and socket joint. It can't rattle—jars and vibrations can't change the position. Yet it can be moved in any direction by a touch of the hand, because the ball is an accurately machined sphere—there are no springs to break or washers to wear out or loosen.

The quality of material and workmanship is all important. A mirror may look good, and yet be so cheaply silvered or water-proofed as to become useless after a few weeks of service.

Proper fitting is essential. Kales' dealers can fit any make or model accurately. Kales' engineers have studied every car and provided a large variety of attachments to put the mirror on your car where it should be to give you the best service.

Kales "Hindview" Mirrors are made by one of the oldest and best concerns in the parts industry. The finest materials and workmanship obtainable are put into this mirror. The best heavy flawless plate glass is used, durably silvered and water-proofed.

You are safe in buying a Kales "Hindview" Mirror.

Crusader—a new and lower priced Kokomo Fabric Tire

WE don't know where you can buy more honest tire mileage for the same money than is contained in the Kokomo Crusader fabric casing.

It has every qualification you look for in your tires--sturdiness, durability, distinctiveness. And the price is the first element of satisfaction.

Go to your Kokomo dealer and ask to see this new Kokomo tire. Examine the handsome twin-stud tread; the tough, flexible body; the firm, shapely bead.

A seasoned tire building experience makes these lower priced Kokomo Crusader casings mileage investments without equal.

Particularly noteworthy is the Twin-stud tread of the Crusader casing. Like the famous Twin-grip tread of Kokomo cord and fabric tires, it rolls lightly but stops skid.

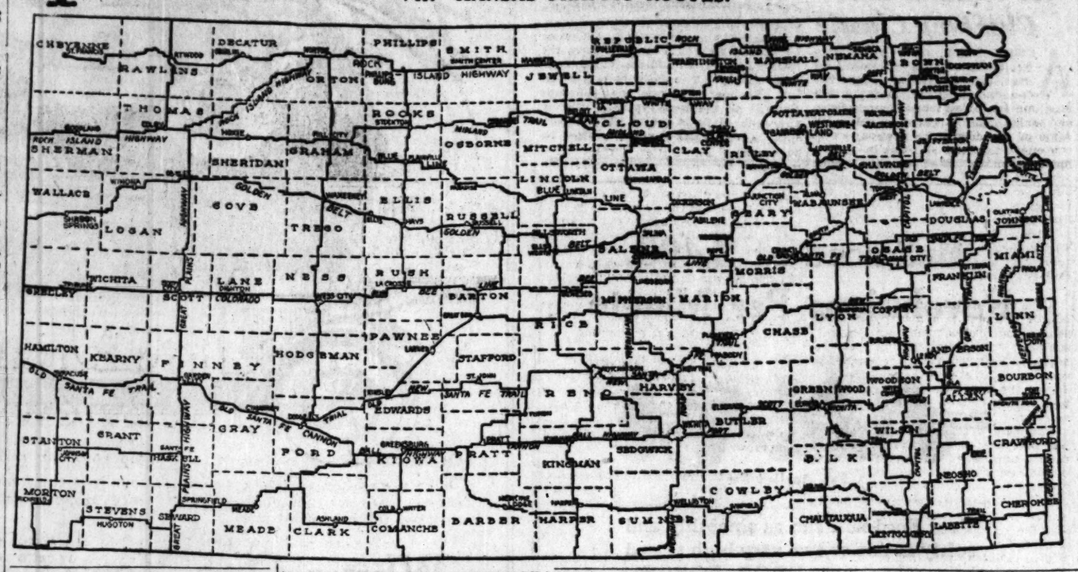
VII. KANSAS TRAFFIC ROUTES.



Tommy O'Connor and Auto Speeder Named Crime Pals

Chief Fitzmorris Joins Safety Council in Jail Pleas.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

TOMMY O'CONNOR is less dangerous as a citizen of Chicago than any one of a hundred reckless motor car drivers in the opinion of Chief of Police Charles Fitzmorris. He believes, too, that there is but one practical way to stop the city's traffic menace which took the lives of 660 people last year — send reckless drivers to jail for every flagrant violation.

CHIEF FITZMORRIS

"Every man or woman who drives an automobile in Chicago in a manner to endanger human life should be in jail," he declared vehemently in pledging the cooperation of his department in the national fight against speeders. "I drive a car, have driven a car in Chicago for a long time and I know something of the cause and effect of reckless driving. Strict enforcement of the law is the weapon immediately at hand, the practical, effective cure for the evil as far as motorists themselves are concerned. Education in safety rules is the essential in the case of careless pedestrians and to care for our children.

"My children are dearer to me than uncontrolled freedom, in the use of my car and there are hundreds of thousands of children in Chicago worth anything and more that we can do to make the streets safe at the expense of speeders. The police department has declared war. That's all. We'll see that violators of the vehicle law are arrested and we want to see the courts back us up with equal justice in every case."

Fixing of speeder cases in the police department is a thing of the past, according to the chief. Soon after his appointment reports were received of considerable traffic in speeder cases before they reached court, cases "fixed on the street" or headed off before they could be made matters of record. Strict orders were issued against such reported procedure and the chief devised a report blank which makes the issuing of every vehicle slip, whether for speeding or other violation, a part of his own office record. The officer who issues the slip is required to telephone the chief's office immediately and dictate the data to be written on the record and filed. A second check is made to see that the officer and violator are on hand in court on the day appointed.

Recently 200 patrolmen were assigned to traffic duty in the outlying districts and at dangerous intersections and a police representative was asigned to watch every case going through the Speeders' court. This move, together with the excellent safety work done through the school system by the boys' safety patrol, another movement launched by Chief Fitzmorris, actually reduced the number of accidents last year, even though automobile fatalities increased.

William Otter, president of the Chicago Safety council, pointed to the same practical solution of Chicago's automobile safety problem.

"We have been too lenient with reckless automobile drivers in Chicago," he declared, "and they have run wild in consequence. When public safety is at stake individual lawbreakers should not be taken into consideration. Every man found guilty of speeding, driving a car while intoxicated, or driving in a way to endanger the life of others in Chicago should be made to serve a jail sentence. Fines imposed in minor cases do serve as punishment, but to the average speeder a fine means little. Our laws provide for imprisonment and they should be enforced to the letter no matter whom they hit.

"The Chicago Safety council has accomplished much in an educational way. It is now completely organized and is functioning with more and more success as a purely civic power. It has been instrumental in introducing practical safety lessons into the curriculum of our public schools, where every child is being trained in the basic rules of self-protection and in guarding against all manner of danger.

"Preventable accidents have been reduced in this way, but the speeder menace is outside of this educational circle for the most part. At present we receive reports of many traffic law violations, particularly those at grade crossings, and write letters of warning to the offender, the highway committee of the council thus acting as a vigilance body. We know, however, that the great majority of Chicago automobile drivers are careful and that the 5 per cent who drive recklessly, violate the law, and cause the danger can be stopped only through court action and jail sentences."

The Safety council, organized two years ago by E. J. Buffington, Samuel Insull, Harold F. McCormick, Charles H. Wacker, and Thomas E. Wilson, is now composed of 300 representative men who donate their services to this department of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

SAVE THE MAPS

KANSAS offers a highly developed system of patrol and maintenance and thousands of miles of wide, well kept gravel and earth boulevards to the tourist this year as its best contribution to the national highway fund. The state is proceeding as swiftly as possible in its paving program, but as yet has not been able to connect any completely improved route from border to border.

Concrete, brick, and macadam surfacing is scattered over small areas in all parts of the state. Pavement already connects Lawrence and Topeka, and leads west to Silver Lake along the Golden Belt trail. Wilson and Montgomery counties have completed paving the Capitol trail through their sections, while pavements also radiate for short distances from Hutchison, Fort Scott, Garden City, Oswego, Junction City, and Beloit.

The main trails through the state, Golden Belt, Old National road, Midland trail, and Cannonball and all north and south main routes are well graded and constantly maintained. Most of the permanent structures have been put in and pavements will be laid as soon as highway forces can find authorization for them. Kansas roads generally are good from May 1 to late fall.

Scouts Push Into Desert to Blaze Lost Wagon Trail

IN an effort to open for motor travel the hitherto unexplored sections of the California desert places, a charting party of the Automobile Club of Southern California is now tracking the wastes of the west.

Romance stalks hand in hand with death in this latest road making expedition, for the objective of the party will be the last resting place of the "lost Mormons" who endeavored to reach the coast in the pioneer days of '49.

Far to the north of Death valley the club party will seek for the lost wagons of the Mormons, which are reported to be lying somewhere in the desert, guarded by the bleached bones of the mules which dragged them across the burning sands. The object of the search will be the establishment of a route into the desert to be known in that section as the "Lost Wagon" trail.

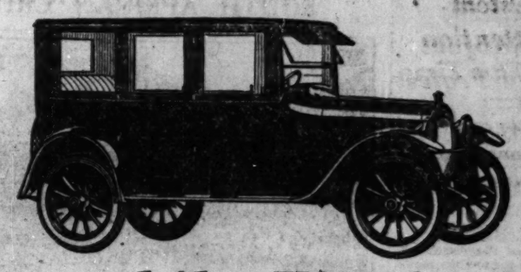
Leaving southern California the club party has pushed far into the desert, acording to a report just received, and is at the present time plowing its way through Death valley in a resolve to reach the famous Furnace Creek ranch, the last outpost of civilization in this torrid area lying hundreds of feet below sea level.

All water holes, the life savers of travelers, are to be charted by the club expedition and will be marked by metal signs anchored in the shifting sands by huge redwood blocks.

Three weeks will be needed by the party to penetrate the heart of the desert, during which time the club signs will be continued into Nevada by way of Goldfield, Tonopah, Gold Reed, Hiko, and Alamo. With the return of the scouts, maps will be drawn by the drafting department for motorists all over America to use in touring the waste places.

CONNECTING ROD REPAIR.

In cases of emergency a connecting rod bearing that has burned out may be patched up by removing the connecting rod cap, cutting a piece of sole leather to the proper size, and then clamping the connecting rod cap to the connecting rod itself.



Hupmobile Finely Built

It is almost impossible to wear out the Hupmobile. The first Hupmobiles, built 12 and 13 years ago, are in use today, all over the world.

Owners, and those who buy in the used car markets, would tell you its depreciation is slower and smaller; that its price as a used car is proportionately higher.

Back of its longer life and rare economy, is, of course, the way the Hupmobile is built.

The fact is that many of its important parts are identical, in material and in manufacturing costs, with the same parts in the cars of the highest price; and Hupmobile shop practices are exceptionally fine and close.

N' York License Plates Subject of New Protest

Registration Tags Mar the Appearance of Cars, Owners Complain.

MANY owners of motor cars registered in New York state are complaining of the registration plates which they are obliged to carry, according to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. They insist that these plates mar the appearance of their cars and could be much improved by the expenditure of a little more money per pair than at present.

During 1921 there were 779,344 cars registered in New York state, that paid a total of $10,288,858 in registration fees or an average of $13.20 each, yet the motorist is in 1922 obliged to get along with plates that cost about 17 cents per pair and are anything but good to look at.

A movement has been started in Arizona to have the 1923 license plates for motor vehicles made of copper instead of sheet iron. While it is estimated that a pair of plates of the former metal will cost 18 cents more than a pair of sheet iron plates, nevertheless those behind the movement feel that the extra cost is warranted if it will procure more durable and attractive registration numbers.

There are some, too, who urge that the copper plates could be used for two years by inserting into the plate, as was formerly done in California, a small disk with a design indicative of the registration year. The ease with which such disks are counterfeited, however, has discouraged such a course.

Beat the Bolt.

It is a common failing of socalled stove bolts to become loosened after a comparatively brief period of service in holding together wooden and metal parts. The failure is apt to come through the loosening of the head in its seating, this permitting the nut to obtain enough slack to rattle loose on its thread. A simple way of preventing this difficulty is to enlarge the slot across the head of the bolt, cutting the ends pretty deep by the aid of a file and then bending over a short length of copper wire, of the size to fit in the slot. In this way a couple of ridges are formed on either side of the head, which effectively prevent its turning so long as a reasonable amount of pressure is brought to bear upon it.

Improve Sheridan Road.

Kenosha county, Wis., is preparing to let a contract for repairing and widening Sheridan road for its entire length through the county and has a bidder awaiting the approval of the state highway commissioner. The well known road will be widened for its entire length there, making it not less than eighteen feet wide at any place. The work will be started as soon as possible with the expectation that it will be completed by the first of July.

Sales Conditions Better.

Carload shipments for automobiles at the beginning of 1922 showed a 150 per cent gain over a year ago. Reports of sales conditions from all over the country show improvement.

GREASY FORD AXLE.

It is a not uncommon experience with owners of Fords that when the lubricant in the rear axle has become thinned by long use it tends to work its way out and be spattered all over the wheels and brakes. An easy cure for this is to drill a small hole—3-16 of an inch is about right—in the bottom of the axle housing on each side. The thinned grease which gets to the ends seeps out through these holes. Care must be taken to place the holes high enough to allow enough grease for lubrication of the differential gears, and also they must not be placed too near the end of the differential housing.

SOUTH AFRICAN CRITICS

It requires more than a roadless land and hostile people to keep the American automobile to the beaten paths. Here is a car that has penetrated into the Transvaal after fighting for every foot of the way through South Africa. The natives, who are still a bit suspicious of the "devil-devil," are of the Swazis tribe.

Indiana County Plans to Escape Crossing Menace

IN all future road construction in Lake county, Ind., railroad grade crossing will be eliminated in so far as possible, according to County Engineer Ray Seeley, following a conference with the board of county road commissioners and representatives of the Lincoln Highway association.

It is in Lake county, near the Illinois state line, that the association, with the coöperation of the state of Indiana and Lake county, expects to construct this season its "ideal section," designed by the foremost highway engineers and other authorities of the United States. The county commissioners have appropriated $25,000 toward the improvement, which is expected to center the eyes of highway authorities in every section of the world on the county.

Mr. Seeley pointed out that the resolutions adopted by the association's technical committee specifically called for the elimination of any railroad crossings at grade. The ideal section site selected lies between Dyer and Schererville, and does not itself cross a railroad. However, the Chicago, Indiana and Southern railroad crosses the Lincoln highway just west of Schererville and within a quarter of a mile of the east end of the ideal section. It is this crossing that Mr. Seeley wishes to eliminate when the state completes the pavement from the end of the ideal section into Schererville.

Mr. Seeley will not stop with his efforts to eliminate this crossing, however, as he pointed out to the commission that there were hundreds of grade crossings in Lake county, many of which can be promptly eliminated by proper relocation of the highways and provision for overhead or subway crossings. Mr. Seeley says he will approve of no plan for new highway construction which does not provide for subways or overhead crossings wherever at all practicable. His stand has been cordially indorsed by the highway association and its technical committee.

St. Louis Record.

Reports in the National Safety News show that automobile fatalities in St. Louis dropped from 192 in 1920 to 97 in 1921. Education in schools is one of the biggest factors in bringing about this improvement.

St. Louis safety council also decided upon a safe driver's school, organized thirty-five leaders of boys to junior safety cadets, sent an individual letter to every automobile driver involved in accident, and engaged in many other Buy More Motors.

The 40 per cent rise in wheat and corn prices is putting transportation units to work hauling grain and the food animals. Increased movement of staple farm products by rail and highways is a prelude to better times always. Public service transportation corporations are awakening to the fact that they are not merchandisers of steam or electricity—but of transportation. They looked at first upon the bus as an interloper into their field. But with the increasing purchases of busses by electric lines and in a few instances by steam roads, it is plain to be seen that the older and larger transportation systems have determined at last to actively enter this field of transportation.

Higher Education.

Motor cars and motor trucks are being used by many colleges for extension courses and for general purposes. Amherst, Dartmouth, Williams, Massachusetts Institue of Technology, Carnegie Institute of Technology, University of Michigan, Cornell, Harvard, Vassar, Wellesley, Columbia, and Johns Hopkins are among the institutions having motor transportation equipment.

Early Fall Set for Annual Hill Climbing Classic

AUTOMOBILE owners and manufacturers will be interested in the announcement that the fourth annual Pike's Peak hill climbing races, the biggest competition of the kind in the United States, will take place this year on Sept. 4.

These races are held over the Pike's Peak auto highway, the highest automobile highway in the world, starting from the five mile station and finishing at the topmost point on Pike's Peak, and are the most spectacular contests of the racing season. To the car making the best time, regardless of class or event in which it is entered, goes the Penrose trophy in addition to the cash prize money. The Penrose cup given by Spencer Penrose of Colorado Springs is the most valuable trophy ever offered for a motor car competition. Cash prizes for the contest total $2,100.

AVIATION

Amundsen's Plan to Fly to Pole Takes Courage

Forced Landing May Cause Much Tronble.

BY MORROW KRUM.

NOW the heroism of the aviator is to be combined with the sturdy courage of the arctic explorer. Capt. Roald Amundsen, famed scientist, who more than once has followed dog sledges into the dreary precincts of the far north, plans to leave the edges of civilization in an airplane, fly to the north pole, land there, and, after making the proper scientific observations, return.

There, without carrying the project any further than the formulation of the plans, is enough to set the ordinary man dreaming. And the full story, if the plan is successful, will present a mighty colorful chapter in the world's history.

Capt. Amundsen set out from New York the other day. His big ship—a JL-6—made a forced landing somewhere in Pennsylvania. The landing did not damage the machine nor the persons aboard. It was merely a forced landing. Such landings are old stories to aviators, though somehow a forced landing by a big ship will always cause a sensation in newspaper headlines, thereby slightly hurting the flying science.

But to the unbiased the mere fact that the JL-6 had a forced landing in a flight between New York and Chicago tends to show the possibilities of the north pole hop. Such a landing may be caused by any number of trivial things. A gas lead may choke, a water pump may break, the magneto may refuse to function—anything may happen, and the ship will come to earth.

The explorer's plans are somewhat vague, but dispatches from New York seem to indicate that he will use two ships. The JL-6 will carry a heavy load of supplies, fuel, and so forth. The Curtiss Oriole will accompany the larger ship and, perhaps, be used for the last long hop to the pole. The Oriole will carry three persons and much fuel.

But both ships will probably fly far from the outposts of civilization. They will cover the distances quickly, will fly farther in two hours than men and dogs could travel in a day. On that fact the explorer is relying.

There are any number of possibilities of danger in the undertaking. Should a forced landing develop, the explorers may never return. Say they arrive at the north pole and land on the ice. Then say the motor freezes up—it will be a long walk back, and there will be no dogs to help.

So the attempt to fly to the pole presents one of the most dangerous expeditions ever attempted by man. Its successful accomplishment will put a great feather in the hat of aeronautics. It will be a story that will keep many a library light burning late into the night

TO FLY

[Kadel & Herbert Photo.]

Capt. Roald Amundson, noted explorer, landed in America recently and set about at once preparing for his proposed flight over the north pole. He will use a Junkers all metal monoplane on the trip.

Astor's Air Yacht to Have Comforts of Modern Sedan

THE monoplane air yacht which Vincent Astor has bought for sport and utility is being built in the plant of the Loening Aeronautical Engineering corporation, and will be delivered in June.

The cost of the machine is not given, but there will be no economy in fitting the yachtlike cockpit. The Loening flying boat carries five passengers. The seating arrangement will be similar to that in a sedan motor car.

With its 400 horsepower Liberty engine, Mr. Astor will be able to fly at a speed of 135 miles an hour, with 120 miles an hour as the craft's comfortable gait. The Loening flying boat has demonstrated its ability as a climber, but the great sport of air yachting, according to Grover Cleveland Loening, the designer, lies in racing over the water at a height of forty feet.

Study New Field

You should fly low over a strange field and study it carefully before you try to set the wheels down. There are many strange things to learn after the bus loses flying speed. There may be a ditch, a bit of mud, or some deep grass. Look the field over with care before you land.

DRAIN YOUR RADIATOR.

If you leave your ship outside in the winter time you must drain your radiator. Do not turn the prop on a frozen motor—it will break the pump.

New Airship Gas Is Developed by Californian

Costs Less Than Helium and It Will Not Burn.

CURRENIUM is the name given to a new gas for airships demonstrated recently at Los Angeles. It possesses a lift about equal to hydrogen, and has noninflammable and nonexplosive qualities which promise to revolutionize the airship industry. Currenium is a manufactured gas and can be produced in any quantity by an electrolytic process at a cost, it is estimated, about $100 per thousand cubic feet less than it is costing the government to produce helium.

The new gas has been developed by Dr. Edward Curran, head of the research department of the International Transportation and Manufacturing company of Los Angeles, which controls the formula and all rights in the product. It is the result of several years of research work by Dr. Curran, who is a chemist, and who produced the gas successfully in 1918. He was not satisfied with the certainty of purity under production, and so continued his development of the process for three years. As a result the company owning the formula is preparing to engage in the manufacture of the gas.

Currenium weighs 6.2 pounds to the thousand cubic feet at a barometric pressure of thirty inches and a temperature of 40 degrees Fahrenheit. Its lift under these conditions is, therefore, 73.8 pounds. In a demonstration made by Dr. Curran at Los Angeles March 13, a flame was passed through the gas and an electric spark inserted in it without setting it off or occasioning fire or explosion. The purity was allowed to drop below 80 per cent without affecting the flame or fire test. Currenium was put into a small balloon, demonstrating excellent buoyancy.

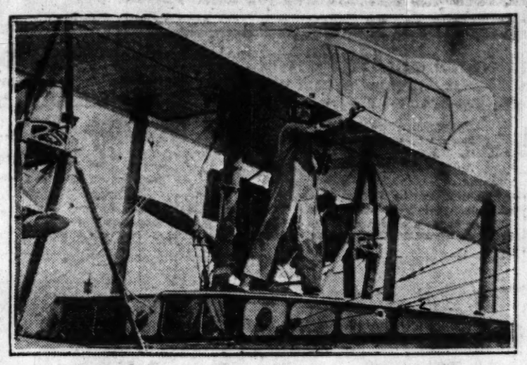
The test was witnessed by W. G. Scott, president of the Aero club of southern California, and other members of the club, and the Commercial Aircraft association of southern California.

A small elongated balloon filled with currenium was allowed to drop in purity, and a flame was applied to the end of the balloon. The gas did not explode, and the balloon was only burned where it was brought into touch with the flame, the currenium escaping through the hole thus made. Under certain conditions of extremely low purity, which give practically no lift, and which would never be allowed to exist in aircraft, it was found possible to unite currenium with oxygen and air and cause a flame, but without explosion.

FLY HIGH.

Never fly over a city under 2,000 feet. If it is a big city take it higher.

PILOT CALLS FOR HELP.



The photograph shows Pete Ryan, naval pilot, sending up a kite from a "lost" airplane. Attached to the kite is an antennae, through which the aviator will flash to the world his plight. Naval aeronautical authorities plan to supply each plane with such a kite so that stranded aviators may send messages to their bases.

New Stabilizer Tested Abroad; Called Success

A YOUNG Frenchman, Georges Aveline, has invented an automatic stabilizer which promises to go a long way in making flying practically safe. Experiments are now being conducted in France with this stabilizer by the Messageries Aeriennes company, and a report on tests made above Le Bourget in a Farman "Goliath" indicates that the stabilizer is capable of great service in traversing large banks of fog and in taking off from aerodromes covered in fog.

In this latest test several pilots were on board the Goliath, which flew through the fog and emerged into clear air at 1,500 meters altitude, effecting the climb without difficulty and without intervention from the pilot. At this altitude several turns were made, both left hand and right hand. The engines were than throttled down, and the machine descended to within fifty meters from the ground, without the intervention of the pilot. During the descent the engines were several times opened up and throttled down, the machine automatically climbing when the engines were opened out and gliding when they were throttled down. Three times during the flight the pilots were changed, the machine flying entirely without pilot during these changes.

The invention employs a form of the pendulum principle, and part of the device is electric, part pneumatic, and part aerodynamic. The pendulum portion, which is only partly to be regarded as a pendulum, consists of an inclinometer in which the fluid is mercury. This mercury is contained in a disc with a narrow circular groove, and serves to make and break an electric contact, which operates the valves that admit compressed air to the air cylinder, whose pistons actuate the control cables.

Light for Hampton Roads

Within a few weeks a flashing white light every 4 seconds, flash .08 second, eclipse 3.2 seconds, of 4,000 candle power, will be established, 65 feet above the water, on the corner of hangar No. 1, naval air station, naval operating base, Hampton roads.

The light is located 1,400 yards 94 degrees 30 minutes from the clock tower.

Approximate position: 36 degrees 57 minutes north, 76 degrees 18 minutes west.

Come in Fast

The old rule of "coming in fast" is just as good as ever. Always keep your speed when you may need it. The slogan of the student is "your safety is in altitude and speed."

ON April 3rd a Dort standard touring car piloted by Lynn Hockensmith, an amateur driver, beat all previous nonstop records between San Francisco and Portland by 3 hours and 26 minutes. The running time checked by Western Union was 25 hours, 51 minutes—faster by 2 hours, 29 minutes than schedule time of Shasta Limited — the fastest train between these two cities — another striking confirmation of Dort reliability.

WESTCOTT
The Car with a Longer Life

New Models
Show 1923 Features

SCORES of ideas that point the way for 1923 motor car construction and finish have been built into the new Westcott Series A-44 models.

These ideas—representing distinctly new developments, yet thoroughly tried and tested—mean the ultimate in satisfaction for the owner.

HERE are a few of the outstanding features in the new cars:

Westcott exclusive permanent top without extra cost.
Thermostatically controlled carburetor, giving greater power, economy and speed.
Chassis lubrication by new 500 pound oil pressure system.
New braking development which leaves rear axle free from rods and tubes.
Easy handling. Car turns in a circle with a radius of 18 feet.
Wheelbase 120 inches. Comfortable seats and plenty of room.
Hand-crushed leather to match the body finish.

The first of these new cars are now in Chicago. We would welcome an opportunity to show you the many points of definite superiority to be found in the new Westcott A-44 series.

Pint 75c

Penetreen

Will Stop All Auto Squeaks!

Those annoying squeaks are costly—they mean wear—of springs, chassis and body. PENETREEN ends them. It penetrates between and separates the wearing parts.

It is easily done. Just a few minutes time every thousand miles. Applied to one side of the springs from the handy can, it Shoots Thru. It spreads a liquid cushion of oil and graphite between the leaves.

It dissolves the rust that eats away the surface of the springs. Crystallization and breakage are eliminated.

Resilient, buoyant springs result. You ride in comfort—quietly. Springs, fenders and body are silent.

Winter has left its mark. Conquer the squeaks and remove the rust. Renew your car with PENETREEN.

Satisfactory results are unqualifiedly guaranteed. The price of a pint can of PENETREEN is 75 cents. Sold by dealers everywhere in Chicago.

FARM AND GARDEN

Farms Made It What It Is Today, Chicago Told

By Frank Ridgway.

BUILD a great Chinese wall around Chicago, cutting it off from the surrounding rich agricultural section which has made the big inland metropolis what it is today, and see how long the Windy city will live. Steel mills, plants, and factories might hum, and crowds continue to swarm in and out of the big stores for a few days, but the grinding, buzzing business of it all would soon be hushed if the cattle and hogs and sheep, grain, and other farm products were stopped outside the impenetrable wall. Then Chicago, with all its energy and independence, would come to understand how entirely dependent it is upon agriculture.

HERBERT QUICK. [Apeda Photo.]

"Chicago is just a great big farm town. Just so fast as the farming land around here has developed, just so fast has Chicago developed. The background of Chicago was built up by pioneer farmers who came west and developed the agriculture in the middle west. Chicago is as dependent upon agriculture today as it was years ago. Back in '66 when farmers pulled their schooners across Illinois and into Iowa, Chicago was a little bunch of houses on the lake front. That's all it would have ever been if it had not been for these pioneers who came west to cultivate this rich agricultural land."

One of Iowa's Pioneers.

That is what Herbert Quick said, on a recent visit to Chicago. His father was one of the pioneers who helped to grow wheat and other crops in Iowa and send them to Chicago in early days. Herbert Quick himself was born and brought up in Iowa. He is now one of the country's leading agricultural economists, a journalist, and author of several leading books, including "The Brown Mouse," "Double Troubles," and "Vandermark's Folly," most of them dealing with farm problems.

One of the first things these early settlers did in Iowa and Illinois was to grow grain, ship it into Chicago, and buy plows, barbed wire, reapers, and other farm implements made in Illinois. More farmers came in, implement factories were started in Chicago, wholesale grocery houses were established one by one, and as agriculture grew Chicago grew. If Chicago is to grow in the future as it has in the past, Chicagoans must take interest in the problems of agriculture, he said.

Idle Land Area Grows.

Mr. Quick was thinking particularly about Chicago's relation to the development of middle west agriculture when he said, "Cities instead of being effects of the development of the country are becoming pulsating tumors on the body politic, drawing to themselves the population from the farm against the true interests of both the city and country."

Neither agriculture nor business in cities can go forward as it should, said Mr. Quick, with a population in the rural district that is not prosperous, without an adequate transportation system, without a proper land system, and with a greater and greater proportion of land falling into the hands of people who do not work it.

Too Many Landlords.

The tendency for farm tenancy to increase in this country is the most ominous thing in American life, declares this economist. "Farm land prices have a tendency to remain high and prevent the proper readjustment of the ratio between land values and farming profits. High prices are tending to contribute to the crowding of cities and make us an unbalanced people."

"Most people think that rising land values are a good thing for the farmer," Mr. Quick went on. "This is not true. Land is something the farmer must have, just as food and shelter and clothing. When land is cheap and in the best possible location it is a good thing for the farmer."

Rising land values boost rents, and ruin many tenants, and crush agriculture. "The result is," remarked the author, "that land, like diamonds, is going into the hands of people able to own both land and diamonds. Both are too precious for the working persons to own."

Advocates Single Tax.

In suggesting remedies, Mr. Quick advises making the ownership of land for rental purposes less profitable. He is an advocate of the single tax, and thinks that in a country groaning under taxation, as is the case with ours, wise legislation would help the land tenancy problem by exempting from taxation improvements in cities and country, and concentrate taxes on the land values which oppress the man who must have land to use. This, he thinks, would keep farm land values down and encourage all men to improve the lands they occupy.

There is no problem of the country that can be called strictly a rural problem, he added. It is just as much to the interest of the people in the city as it is to the farmer to ponder deeply in trying to improve the present inadequate transportation, change the land owning system to make it fair for the farm tenant, and improve the rural educational system.

Moving Coast Inland.

Chicago is a world city because it is located in the heart of America's richest agricultural section, but Chicago can never realize her ambitions until adequate facilities have been provided to transport the farm products that are produced in the central west states. Building the St. Lawrence deep waterway and electrifying the railroads that lead into the city are two chief ways of solving Chicago's problems in handling the enormous amount of agricultural products that pass in and out here every year.

It is Mr. Quick's opinion that increased freight rates put Chicago 700 to 800 miles farther away from the sea than she was. By building the St. Lawrence deep waterway Chicago can resume position to become the great transportation center it is destined to be.

FROM HERE AND THERE

The whole world bows to dairymen in the United States when it comes to owning cows with world records in the production of milk and butter, but it took a Canadian farmer to set the pace in producing prolific calf raisers. Dominion farmers claim the honor of having a cow that has produced eight calves in the last two seasons, triplets and quintuplets. Hollis Williams, Estlin, Sask., has a pure bred Jersey cow that recently gave birth to five normal calves, each weighing thirty pounds, or a total of 150 pounds. None of them lived. Last year the same cow produced three normal calves.

Not many successful farmers wait to repair their implements after they go to the field to work; most of them order the repair parts and patch up their plows, planters, and cultivators before the busy season opens.

The fact that asparagus is now being shipped at the rate of a carload a day to eastern markets from California and Pacific coast shippers call it a light shipment for this time of the year—usually three cars a day—indicates that truckers and gardeners in the middle west could afford to devote many more acres of land to asparagus.

Out in Kansas poultry men have a saying that runs like this: "If a man 'lays for you,' he should be arrested; if a hen does not lay for you she should be executed."

Senate Committee Votes Against Free Seeds

Gardeners who are accustomed to receiving free seed from their congressmen may be disappointed this year. According to information coming from the American Farm Bureau federation, which has representatives looking after the interests of the farmers at Washington, the free seed may not be expected again this year. The senate subcommittee on agriculture recently voted to eliminate the $360,000 item which the house has put in the agricultural bill for the purchase of seeds to be distributed free by members of congress to gardeners in both city and country all over the United States.

Senators William J. Harris, Georgia; Pat Harrison, Mississippi, and Lee S. Overman, South Carolina, voted to retain the appropriation.

Evidently Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, does not approve of the distribution of free seed, for he did not include this item in submitting his estimate of the department's expenditure. It was written in on the floor of the house.

Chemists Say Home Grown Sweet Corn Has Best Flavor

DISCOVERIES recently made by chemists have had a tendency to popularize the growing of sweet corn in the home garden. Gardeners have learned from the facts uncovered by scientists that chemical changes take place in the kernels when corn is not used soon after it is broken from the stalk.

This change greatly decreases the value of that typical roasting ear flavor so individual that it is unparalleled in any of the other crops grown in the garden. Growing sweet corn in the home garden where the ears can be pulled a few minutes before they are to be cooked is the only sure way of getting that superior quality of corn and flavor.

Gardeners have not depended upon scientists to find out all there is to know about sweet corn; they have been trying out a few things themselves. They have done away with that prejudice against yellow corn that once existed. In fact, a few years ago yellow grained roasting ears were looked upon with suspicion, but today Golden Bantam sweet corn heads the list. Several other yellow varieties have been running the white ones a close race.

Seymore's Sweet Orange and Golden Giant varieties that mature within eighty to ninety days have become favorites with many. Golden Bantam is a little earlier and is still the favorite with most gardeners.

For extremely early corn, the kind that is even earlier than Golden Bantam, plant a few hills of extra early white grained varieties. There are several early standbys to select from, including Early Fordhook and Early Dawn. Howling Mob comes a little later, and it is reliable.

Locust Due This Summer.

Orchardists are warned to protect their trees against the seventeen-year locust this summer. According to W. P. Flint, state entomologist of Illinois, brood thirteen of the seventeen-year cicadao will probably be abundant in the northern part of the state this summer. The adults will begin to appear in May and continue into June. They may come in large numbers in sections where there is timber, or around big orchards. Wherever new orchards are set in northern Illinois, the trees will have to be guarded against the ravages of these insects. Cloth screens are used where they appear in large numbers. The only damage done, Mr. Flint says, is the egg puncture made by the females in the twigs and small branches. This may kill or deform young trees. Sprays and dusting materials will not keep the insects off the trees. Field crops are not damaged by them.

A Rainbow Garden OF Gladioli for $1.00—

RARELY are finest flowers the most easily grown and surest of success. But such is the case with the gladiolus. This flower seems peculiarly adapted to the middle west. Our hot, dry summers do not discourage it. If given reasonable care it is sure to reward you with wonderful blossoms. On our farms in Illinois and Michigan we grow hundreds of acres of gladioli, producing thousands of bulbs of the highest quality. Our prices are even lower than those asked by dealers who are not specialists. A planting of Vaughan quality bulbs, dug up and stored over winter, may be replanted next year and will constantly increase.

Our Rainbow mixture, all large bulbs, 1¼ to 1½ inches in diameter, prepaid to 600 miles from Chicago.

T1—20 best kinds, each different $1.00
T2—3 sets of T1 (60 bulbs) 2.50
T3—125 bulbs, 30 kinds 5.00
T4—Homewood mixture, 50 MEDIUM bulbs, but all bloomers, not less than 5 colors 1.00
T5—Standard mixed, per dozen ..... .45

Will your GARDEN give you something for nothing?

Can you get out of seeds any more than the grower has put into them?

If you think all seeds are alike, just plant Ferry's pure-bred Seeds. You will be as much surprised as the first man who tasted the melting sweetness of Ferry's sweet corn.

To produce pure-bred seeds the 600-acre Ferry Stock Seed Farms and Trial Gardens are continually testing, discarding, improving. Plants tend to revert to the traits of imperfect ancestors. Runts and freak varieties will creep in. Suitable types for home gardens must be developed into even better varieties. Infinite care is required to meet these ever-changing conditions.

The results are shown by Ferry's pure-bred Seeds, which tend to grow true to name, true to every good quality which you have a right to expect.

Ferry's pure-bred Seeds are sold "at the store around the corner." At their price of 10 cents per paper they give you the most for your money—in vegetables for your table and for canning. Write direct to us for Ferry's Seed Annual. It is more than a catalog. Send for it. It's free.

To retailers who want to sell Ferry's Seeds

For your convenience, Ferry's Seed Service, Inc., has an office at 208 W. Washington St. Phone Franklin 4437, whenever you need more pure-bred seeds, or wish a new box. If you have never sold Ferry's pure-bred Seeds, now is a good time to start. Like all fine merchandise, they sell easily.

Blood will tell—invariably in garden seeds. Plant Ferry's pure-bred Seeds.

"I struck him in the face —it was necessary."

WHEN Marie Angouleme walks into the drawing room of the Dunbarton-Kents to apply for a job as chauffeur she notices at once a mystifying strangeness about the whole family. Dunbarton-Kent bequeathed his millions to his widow to hold in trust for his two handsome nephews and niece. They were to receive the money provided they committed no crime during the period of trust—and one of them had been reared as a thief!

ALL Long Island is upset over a series of mysterious robberies of millionaire estates—committed with the daring and ingenuity of a master thief. It is a sinister atmosphere into which the little French-Canadian war heroine enters, just after her escape from the fearsome "woman in sables" and the "man next door."

ELIZABETH DEJEANS, the author of this new Sunday Tribune serial, has known adventure herself. But, more important, she knows how to write of adventure as do few other authors. "The Romance of a Million Dollars" is a sensational Blue Ribbon serial that will be equaled by few, if any, stories of adventure published this year. Don't fail to start it in next Sunday's Tribune.

Marie dropped on one knee, using the other for an improvised desk. Hers was the attitude of an officer in the field penning a dispatch, entirely without self-consciousness and gravely earnest. She was a pleasing picture, young and velvety eyed and innocent faced—she looked a young nineteen. She was uniformed in tannish brown, a mannish jacket and breeches and tan boots laced to the knee, a picturesque ensemble.

It was a tall woman, muffled in furs, and elegantly gowned. Marie knew about furs; merely by touch she could tell the denomination and quality of a pelt. These were sables, the real Siberian, and must be valuable. They framed a striking face, a woman of indeterminate age, but not old; strong, regular features, and lashes and brows as black as jet. She was taking the unoccupied berth opposite.

Breck Dunbarton-Kent was as markedly dark as his cousin West was light. There was a shadowed look about his dark lashed eyes, and his face was so immobile as to be remarkable. His was not exactly a sullen personality, unapproachable rather, distinguished but too unsmiling.

Of Bella it might be said that one of the beautiful long icicles which hung from the eaves of Kent house had draped itself in artistic garments, had haloed its regular featured face with corn silk hair, and had invaded the family circle. She was a superbly built woman, wide shouldered and small hipped, and with extraordinarily long fair lashes and surprisingly light blue eyes.

Despite her remarkable bulk and rough speech, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was lettered. She wore an apparent red wig. Her small eyes looked pugnaciously out of a huge countenance. And her chins were treble. Nevertheless, there was an air of culture as well as an amount of impressive force about the big woman.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Methodists Will Give Holy Week Tithe to Missions

By the Rev. W. B. Norton

A HOLY week tithe, one-tenth of the current week's income will be contributed today by members of the 25,000 churches of the Methodist Episcopal church, as a special offering for missions, home and foreign, in addition to all previous and regular gifts. An appeal was sent out by the board of bishops showing the imperative need of sacrificial giving, and the committee on conservation and advance, 740 Rush street, Chicago, has received word that persons in all walks of life, bankers, manufacturers, laboring men, and housewives, have accepted the plan. Several in the millionaire class have pledged. It is expected that every one of the 200 Methodist Episcopal churches in Chicago will bring in their quota.

One can scarcely attend church anywhere today without hearing a special musical program. Easter has become symbolic of spring and a new outlook on life among churches who do not worship Christ, and in Jewish synagogues and temples it is simultaneous with Passover. All Catholic and Protestant churches will be radiant in flowers and jubilant with music. No day of worship is so widely observed by all classes as Easter.

THE REV. DAVID E. GIBSON.
(Gibson, Sykes & Fowler Photo.)

The Rev. David E. Gibson, former president of Gibson, Sykes & Fowler, photographers, and for twenty-seven years filling almost every position a lay worker could hold in connection with the Episcopal cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, 117 North Peoria street, is now priest in charge of the cathedral shelter which occupies the clergy house, Sumner chapel, and St. Mary's mission house, which remained unharmed when the cathedral building itself was destroyed by fire. For over thirteen years Mr. Gibson has managed the mutual improvement committee of the Oriental consistory, thirty-second degree Masons, and has aided 50,000 persons connected with Masonry. He continues this benevolent work in connection with his other duties.

Father Gibson, as he is now called, conducts religious service every Sunday afternoon at the bridewell, and on alternate Sundays, at 9 a. m. at Cook county jail. In connection with the cathedral shelter he directs daily the housing of eighty homeless men and the selling for 5 cents of coffee and rolls—giving them away where there is absolute need. Many are provided clothing and, what is better, employment. The sick are visited, and every ministry in baptism, matrimony, burial, giving of the sacraments and preaching is performed. During March, 4,352 were fed and 2,488 were given beds with all the attendant privileges of a sanitary home, baths, separate lockers, reading and social fellowship.

The redecorated and refurnished Sumner chapel will be reopened today with Easter services at 11 o'clock, the sermon being preached by the Rev. J. B. Haslam of Nashotah house, Wis.

Bishop Charles P. Anderson ordained Father Gibson a deacon on Sept. 21, 1919, and a priest on Oct. 16, 1921, and appointed him to the shelter in November. Constant improvements in equipment are going on, and it is hoped that a new building for mission purposes will in time take the place of the former cathedral.

A sunrise meeting, 6 to 7 a. m., will be held today at 53d street and Lake Michigan by the united congregations of Hyde Park churches. Dr. Daniel Protheroe will lead the singing, and the Rev. William Chalmers Covert, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will preach.

Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, will speak at 7 p. m. at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall. At 8 o'clock Easter music will be given by the choir of 100 voices, and the Rev. David Hugh Jones, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Evanston, will speak on "The Living God and the Dead Christ."

Sam Small, widely known evangelist, associated at one time with Sam Jones, will begin a series of two weeks' meetings tomorrow evening. His first address will be at the Morgan Park Methodist Episcopal church.

The Children's Receiving home, Maywood, managed by the Lutheran Woman's league of Chicago and vicinity, having 1,000 members, has received a legacy of $5,000 from Miss Isabelle Newton, one of the pioneer residents of Chicago.

The glee club of James Milliken university of Decatur, Ill., will sing at 3:30 today at the First Presbyterian church, 41st street and Grand boulevard, and at 8 p. m. at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall.

Rickenbacker

AFTER a more searching investigation than ever a prospective owner could afford to make—

—And in the light of our 20 years' experience in the engineering, manufacturing, and sale of automobiles—

—We have selected the RICKENBACKER car because it is the ONLY car embodying the outstanding advances in engineering taught us by the war.

—Charming in appearance, light in weight, perfect in balance, free from vibration, economical, and decidedly in advance of the crowd.

That is why we have become the Rickenbacker distributors in the great Chicago Territory.

RESORTS AND HOTELS RESORTS AND HOTELS

There is a "something" about the Rogers Park I have never been able to get in any other hotel I've managed. It's unusually homelike, for one thing, and it's always cheery. But it is more than that, for the Rogers Park has a distinctiveness of its own. Personally I like to think that this place has a soul. In fitting it out, I told the furniture men, the carpet men, the plumbers, the decorators, to give me the best there was. I said I would willingly pay twice as much for mattresses, or half again as much for chairs and tables, for instance, if they would build things right!

And they did. They put their hearts into their jobs, just as did the building contractors, and I believe that the "differentness" of the Rogers Park today is the direct result. I believe my hotel is a little better built, a little better furnished, a little better everything than any apartment hotel ever was before—and that is why, too, you see, the Rogers Park should be your home!

Come out and let me show you. It is a pleasure I never tire of, making people understand what we have to offer. I would like you to see for yourself the pleasant entrances, offices and lobby; the bright and restful Della-Robia dining room; the quiet, self-leveling elevators.

Then, you will enjoy walking through the carefully carpeted halls and looking into whatever-size suite you may elect to see.

You will be pleasingly surprised with the good taste of the hangings, the furniture, the dishes, the silver—even the aluminum ware seems a little better than ordinary! Each suite is complete with service door, ample refrigeration facilities, running ice water, plenty of closet room. Indeed, I venture to think that you will find no point to criticize. There is enough furniture, but not too much; a davenport that's a joy to weary limbs; deep, soft chairs; shaded reading lights; a comfortable desk; a complete dressing table; dining table and chairs that add zest to appetite.

But I have written enough. You owe it to yourself, I think, to see this place, and see it thoroughly. Come any time, morning, afternoon or evening. Have a meal with us, and form your own idea of our service—being a Fred Harvey graduate, I think I am equipped to promise you a satisfactory meal. And then, let me show you around. I am proud of the Rogers Park and it will be my pleasure to let you see for yourself all we have—beautiful lake views, vistas of waving tree tops and all!

From the Seattle Gateway to the Orient

OVER the "Short Northern Route" from Seattle, palatial U. S. Government ships have set a new speed record between the Orient and the United States. If you are going to the great countries of the Far East, if you have hearkened to the call of its beauty and mystery, insure the unblemished realization of your hopes and plans by traveling in one of the new gigantic and luxurious U. S. Government ships.

As you steam out of the calm waters of Puget Sound—if this will be your first ocean voyage or your twenty-first—you go with the assurance that nothing the most seasoned and fastidious traveler could desire will be lacking on your journey.

The ships are 21,000 ton oil-burning vessels. They are exquisitely appointed in faultless taste. The staterooms are unusually spacious and equipped with hot and cold running water, electric fans, bed reading lamps. All are on the outside and most have private baths. The glass enclosed promenades, library, grand salon for dancing provide diversion for every hour of the day and night.

Send the information blank now and get the Government's descriptive literature. You owe it to yourself to know the advantages you may enjoy when traveling on your ships to the Orient.

Going Abroad?

You must by all means include a visit to the fair city of

GENEVA

WITH THE MONT BLANC

The ancient and beautiful University town of Geneva is one of the most attractive and interesting cities on the continent of Europe. It occupies a delightful position, commanding the loveliest views of lake and mountain—including the whole of the Mont Blanc—and its climate is agreeable at all times of the year.

It is an unrivaled excursion centre and—since Calvin's time—a model centre of education.

For information and literature apply to Official Inquiry Office, 9 Place des Bergues, Geneva, or the Swiss Federal Railroads, 241 Fifth Ave., New York.

WHITE STAR LINE

PHILADELPHIA - - - LIVERPOOL
via QUEENSTOWN

S.S. PITTSBURGH, the splendid new 16,600 ton oil-burning Liner that will ply with the popular "Haverford" on this well-known route, is 601 feet long, is replete with every modern and luxurious appointment and embodies numerous of the important features of the famous "Olympic." The Lounge, Reading Room, Smoke Room and Gymnarium are on the Promenade Deck and are commodious and lavishly equipped. The great Dining Room is on the Middle Deck and has tables for four or larger parties. The Pittsburgh is a marvel of graceful beauty and stanch seaworthiness.

Both these great, comfortable steamships will carry Cabin and Third Class Passengers, a service that is successfully meeting a present day demand and which actually exceeds the de luxe ocean travel accommodations of previous years. Excellent enclosed cabin accommodations also for Third Class.

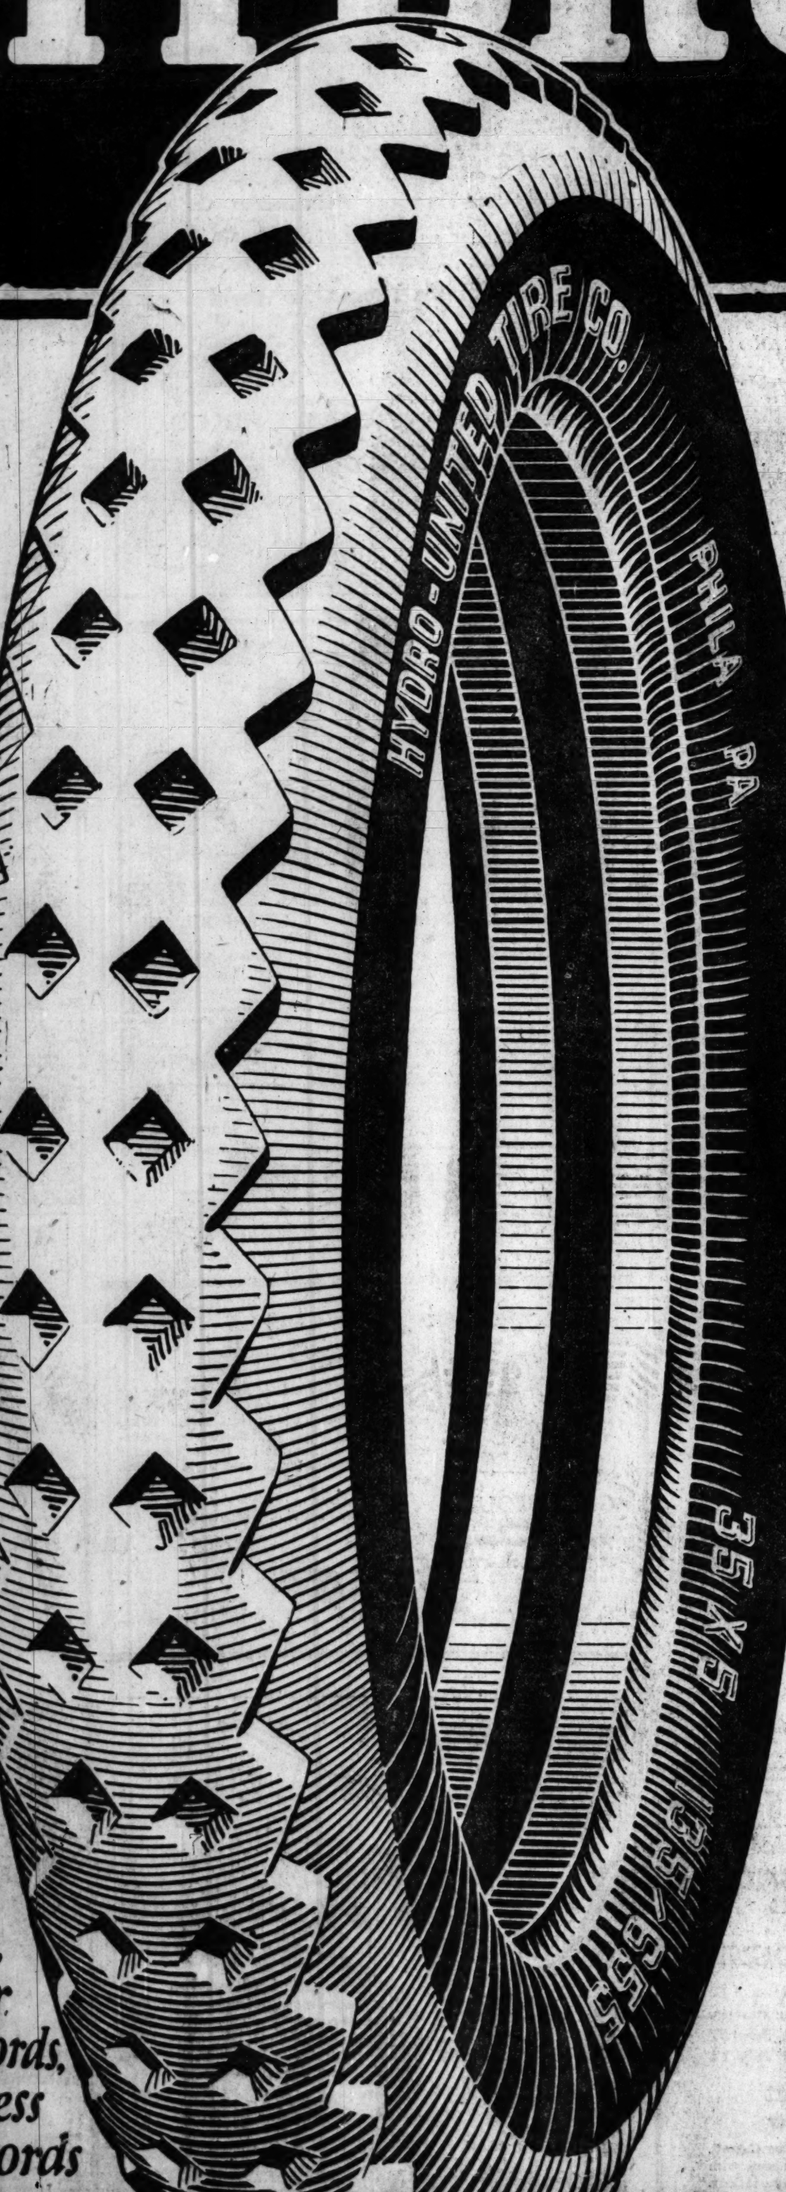
HYDRO-TORON



Two Distinctive Processes that Make the Better Tire

Our mechanical process of Internal Hydraulic Expansion, vulcanizing with water under pressure heated to the proper temperature—eliminates the defects which are the real causes of Stone-Bruise, Rim-Cut and Blow-Out.

The scientific chemical process of fabric treatment—the wonderful Toron (no-rot) process—proofs the tire against moisture, decay and oxidation in all its forms. The Toron treatment also gives the fabric greater tensile strength, increases its affinity for rubber, and fortifies all parts of the tire with greater holding power.

Your assurance of service, under these processes of building tires for greater mileage, is in the fearless guarantee of 10,000 miles against Stone-Bruise, Rim-Cut and Blow-Out.

There are other values which entitle Hydro-Torons to be your choice when you buy tires again: They are as big as cords, yet cost less than cords.

WANTED—FEMALE HELP.

Miscellaneous.

TEACHERS,

You can spend a delightful summer traveling with congenial companions, which offers unusual openings for teachers during vacation, with opportunity to qualify for permanent position if desired.

We will carefully train those selected and furnish everything needed for work without charge. No investment is required. No experience necessary.

If you are between 27 and 40, in good health, willing to spend your whole vacation with us and work hard, you can earn at least $50 per week in high class educational work.

State age, teaching experience, when you can start, and how long you can work in first letter. Address M C 223, Tribune.

OPPORTUNITY FOR WOMEN TO TRAVEL.

A well known Chicago firm doing a nation-wide business, plans an extensive spring campaign. This will create several openings in our regular sales organization that will appeal to well educated, ambitious women between 27 and 40 years of age. You must be absolutely footloose and free to travel anywhere these positions are permanent, with splendid opportunities for advancement and pay from $30 TO $400 PER MONTH.

Acceptable applicants will be given thorough course in our school for selling at Chicago, at our expense, and will receive liberal drawing account in addition to transportation. Ask for W. L. McGowen. 58 E. Washington-st., Chicago.

COUPLE—THIS OPPORTUNITY WILL PUT some sensible, refined, energetic couple ahead in the world; owner of new North Shore country home will rent same with two furnished rooms, bath, etc., in separate wing of residence with rent, light, gas, and water in return for services of whole hearted service helping owner's wife with housekeeping; will also pay man fair wage for lawn and garden work mornings or evenings; man can hold regular city job during day; young couple man and wife can spend slightly pleasant and profitable summer here; ordinary "help" need not apply. Address L O 14, Tribune.

A DELIGHTFUL SPOT IN WHICH TO MAKE YOUR HOME.

Read over these many advantages; 28 to 35 minutes in a comfortable seat in an easy riding coach to the loop; hardly time enough to read your paper; 22 trains a day gives frequent service, avoids congestion and eliminates straphangers.

Then you can own a beautiful home on a large 60 ft. lot on very easy payments, or if you wish you can buy beautiful home sites on which to build later, for as low as $150 on easy easy terms.

These beautiful home sites are located on the Wisconsin division of the Chicago Northwestern railroad, on the very edge of Chicago in the path of the city's present growth, northwest.

We want you to see this beautiful location, we want you to be convinced that this is the place where you can enjoy life at its best every day. We have all the advantages of the city together with the beauty and beauty of the country. We will be glad to send you an illustrated booklet and provide you with free transportation to inspect this location. Write today. It will not obligate you in any way. Address S L 443, Tribune.

California.

FOR SALE—CALIFORNIA STATE LANDS. The State Land Settlement Board of California has for sale a number of irrigated farms of 20 and 40 acres in San Joaquin valley. An unusual offer. The state makes it possible for you to own one of these farms, only requiring 5 per cent of purchase price; remainder in semi-annual installments over 36½ years at 5 per cent interest annually. Money advanced for improvement and dairy stock. Those already located are very enthusiastic. You can farm all year in California, all deciduous fruits profitably grown; alfalfa a paying crop. Ideal conditions for stock and poultry. Many persons long some day to make their homes in California. Nowhere else is found such a combination of winterless climate, plenty of sunshine, mountains, fertile valleys, paved highways, thoroughly efficient marketing associations, and excellent schools. State board's pamphlet, "Land of Sunshine," detailed folder describing San Joaquin valley, mailed free on request. C. L. SEAGRAVES, General Colonization Agent, Sacramento, Cal. Wav. 901 Railway Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

CAPITAL TO INV

AUTOMOBILES—GASOLINE.

DO YOU KNOW

That after 8 years as the Franklin dealer in Chicago I sold out my business April 1st?

Do you know that I am naming positively sacrifice prices on the few Used and Rebuilt Franklins I have left?

Do you realize how a man feels when he has definitely made up his mind to sell out his business?

I am willing that you should take advantage of me. I am not trying to make a profit. I am trying to turn my cars into cash. I am willing to sell them for less than cars of same make and model were ever sold before—hundreds of dollars less.

A GENUINE Opportunity

I want you to understand that this is no "Fire Sale" and no hullabaloo about so-called "reductions" in prices. There are Used and Rebuilt Franklins on this sales floor for you to see today that could not have been duplicated 2 weeks ago for $800 or $1,200 more. They are worth just as much today as they were before I decided to sell out, but they don't cost you as much. Come while there is still a good selection. Come today.

GASOLINE ECONOMY

You not only save hundreds of dollars when you buy a Franklin in my closing out sale. You are going to save money every mile you drive it. Remember, the Franklin will give 18 to 22 miles on a gallon of gasoline. Used Franklins and Rebuilt Franklins do it just as well as new Franklins. A Franklin car never loses that efficiency. Figure up what it will mean to you in a year's driving, say 10,000 miles, with a Franklin at 20 miles to the gallon on gasoline, compared to the average car at 12 to 15.

Remember, you save that, too, as well as several hundred dollars in the purchase price, if you buy here now.

Exceptional TIRE MILEAGE

You not only save money on the purchase price and on gasoline when you buy a Franklin car. You save money on tires. Franklin light weight balanced construction is very easy on tires. Franklin owners get as high as 30,000 miles on tires. All the Franklins I offer have good cord tires on them. Some of them have been used only a few hundred miles. Some have new tires. You can see from the condition of the tires I offer you be assured a full season's use of your Franklin at unusually low upkeep. All these Franklins are in good condition.

FRANKLIN OPEN CARS $475 TO $1,400.

FRANKLIN SEDANS and Broughams $700 TO $2,250

The higher prices quoted above buy you a car which you cannot tell from new—completely refinished, repainted, renickeled, refinished throughout. The lower priced cars are all in good condition—capable of thousands of miles of satisfactory service.

Ask any Franklin owner in Chicago what kind of a deal I have given him in the past. Find out whether my representations are to be relied upon. Then come down here prepared to get the most automobile style, comfort, and economy that money ever bought.

[World's Largest High Grade Car Dealers]

INVITES YOU!

Spring Opening

"When daffodils begin to peer,
With heigh! the doxy over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter pale."

From The Winter's Tale—A Road Near the Shepherd's Cottage—Act. IV., Sc. III.
—Shakespeare.

A RARE TREAT FOR THE AESTHETIC!

Connoisseurs who have seen our artistic window display portraying the spirit of the spring season [executed by Gordon, exhibit architect of Panama-Pacific exposition fame], pronounce it the most wonderfully elaborate setting ever seen on Michigan-av.

For weeks we have been preparing for this occasion and are pleased to announce that now have on display the most comprehensive stock of select high grade automobiles that we have ever offered in our history.

AMONG THEM YOU WILL FIND:

1920 Pierce-Arrow 6-48 sport.
1920 Pierce-Arrow 6-38 dual valve 4 door coupe sedan.
1920 Pierce-Arrow town car limousine.

REBUILT COLE AERO EIGHTS VERSUS "As Is" Rebuilt

Occasionally you will find Rebuilt Cole Aero Eights advertised in this and other papers at prices two and three hundred dollars less than we ask for them, and in most cases they are advertised as being from one to two years' later models than they really are. We can sell any Cole Aero Eight for from $350 to $500 less than our regular advertised price of

$1,250 TO $1,500
FOR REBUILT

before they are rebuilt and will

them to perform equal with any car in their class offered in "as is" condition. And we will agree to rebuild them for you at any future date that suits your convenience, and install our 1922 improvements at equitable prices.

Our REBUILT cars, however, represent more actual value than any car, new or rebuilt, of like price, and are actually big bargains, as the rebuilding charges are based on actual costs for labor and parts, and the work is done in the most efficient and best equipped plant in Chicago, and you know that the reason the car was turned in by the former owner was because it was in most cases in need of rebuilding.

CADILLAC'S 9 Bargains

OLDSMOBILE SEDAN, MODEL 46-8. This car is practically new. The mileage is less than 250. This is their standard right cylinder car that is selling new today delivered in Chicago, including war tax and freght, at $2,775. If you are looking for a snap in a practically new car at a saving equal or greater than the dealer's discount, this car will surely please you. This is not a used automobile in any sense. Special for this sale, $2,250.

PAIGE COUPE, 1920, MODEL 6-42. This is a roomy 4 passenger Coupe, with an excellent set of cord tires, an extra tire, and 5 disteel wheels. This particular car runs smoothly and quietly and you will find it not only a snap but a car which is worthy of many thousand miles of excellent service. Special for this sale, $775.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, PHAETON. This is our popular Sport model, with an excellent set of cord tires, 2 spares, bumper, clock, etc. Also a set of winter sides. It has had very careful usage and is coming into our hands in most excellent mechanical condition. As this particular model is very scarce and our price is extremely low, your immediate action will be necessary. Special for this sale, $1,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 53, TOURING CAR. This is our standard 7 passenger car and conceded by many to be one of our most popular models. Finished in dark blue, and in most excellent condition. Has many extras, including seat covers, bumper, clock, extra tire and a set of winter sides. The price is extremely low and if you are looking for a high grade Cadillac car that runs smoothly and quietly this car will surely please you. Special for this sale, $500.

BUICK COUPE, 1920. This is a standard roomy 4 passenger Coupe of this make that is in remarkably fine condition. Has an excellent set of Silvertown Cord tires and upholstery and paint are exceptionally fine. In fact this car does not look like the ordinary used car. Will make excellent demonstration because it runs quietly and is in such mechanical condition that there are many thousands of miles left in the car. If you are looking for a Coupe that we believe to be almost as good as a new car, this car will surely please you. Special for this sale, $950.

STEVENS-DURYEA LIMOUSINE, MODEL 6-C. If you would talk to people who know this particular make of car and this particular model they would advise you to buy this car if you want a standard limousine. It has been very sparingly used and has had wonderful attention and kept in good condition throughout. Has a set of cord tires, 5 wire wheels, an extra tire, etc. If you are looking for even a chassis this car is a big bargain. Special for this sale, $2,250.

PEERLESS COUPE, 1920. This is a roomy 4 passenger Coupe that has come into our hands from the original owner in almost new car shape. The paint, which is dark blue, shows hardly a scratch. The Goodrear tires look almost new. Has an extra tire, seat covers, bumper, clock, etc. Mechanically this car runs quietly and smoothly. We believe it to be almost as good as a new Coupe, which would cost, over twice as much as we are asking for this car. We have priced this car very low for the person who wants a real snap, and to avail yourself of it you must act immediately. Special for this sale, $1,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This is a roomy 4 passenger Coupe that has been so popular with us and we are very fortunate in being able to offer this type of car at this price. The general appearance of this car is exceptionally good. Mechanically very good. Has an excellent set of cord tires, seat covers, bumper, clock, spare tire, etc. If you are looking for a very well built car that runs smoothly and quietly and that has years of service left in it, this car will surely please you. Special for this sale, $1,400.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, ROADSTER. This is our standard 2 passenger Roadster, with an auxiliary seat accommodating 2 people. A most excellent business car or an ideal car for touring purposes, with ample room for storage. Is in mechanical condition. This car runs as smoothly and quietly as a new car and has been kept up in wonderful condition. Has an excellent set of Royal Cord tires, one extra, bumper, clock, etc. Here is your opportunity to buy a Cadillac Roadster at a ridiculously low price. $1,100.

PACKARD

STUDEBAKER LIGHT "6" TOURING, 1921 MODEL. It is very rarely that one of these cars is offered for sale, particularly in such wonderful condition. The car has only been driven a few thousand miles and shows no signs of wear whatever. The equipment includes spare tire, front and rear bumpers, neutral lock, stop light, tire cover, etc. The original finish is like new and the top and upholstery show absolutely no signs of wear. $900.

CADILLAC VICTORIA COUPE, MODEL 57. This is one of the last cars produced of the "57" model. It was taken in trade from the original owner, who availed himself of Cadillac Service Station at all times. The upholstery is silk velour and has been protected with seat covers, leaving it in condition like new. Mechanically this car could not be improved upon, and the tires, on the car are practically new. We would advise an early inspection, as our price is considerably under the actual market value. $1,750.

FRANKLIN TOURING, MODEL 9-B. All necessary mechanical work has been done on this car and it is ready to put into immediate service. We have repainted it in Brewster Green and equipped with practically new tires. The upholstery and top, in fact the entire car, shows practically no signs of wear. Special at $750.

HUDSON COUPE CABRIOLET, 1918 MODEL. For the man desiring reliable transportation with very small investment, we can highly recommend this car. The mechanical condition is very good. Tires are in fine shape and the equipment includes spare tire, bumper, neutral lock, etc. The paint is rather dull and the fenders somewhat damaged. This does not, however, interfere with the service of the car. Special at $500.

ELLIE SEDAN, 1920 MODEL. We are offering in this car a value very hard to duplicate. It is in excellent mechanical condition, has been repainted in Rich Maroon, with upper parts in English Purple Lake color. The velour upholstery shows no signs of wear and the cord tires are considerably above the average condition. Extra equipment is very complete, and the price only $1,250.

DANIELS TOURING CAR. This high grade late model car is being offered at an extremely attractive price. Mechanically it is practically as good as new. We have refinished the body and chassis and can assure the purchaser that he is getting a car that will render thousands of miles of satisfactory service. There is a good deal of extra equipment on the car, including a very nice set of glass winter sides. Special, $1,000.

PACKARD SINGLE SIX TOURING. This car has been driven less than 5,000 miles and was traded in by the original owner for an enclosed car. The car cannot be distinguished from new in any way and we are offering it at a very substantial saving compared with the new car price. The equipment is complete, the car is ready to put into immediate service. $2,000.

PACKARD TWIN SIX TOURING. LATEST MODEL, 3-35. We have just recently removed this car from Demonstrating Service, gone over the motor and chassis carefully, and will guarantee and service it same as a new car. The body and chassis have been refinished standard Packard blue with cream yellow wheels, and it is impossible to distinguish the car from new in any way. It is offered at a substantial saving over the new car price, which will appeal to the discriminating buyer. $2,800.

BUICK COUPE, 1918. This car presents a remarkable appearance and is in good mechanical condition. Repainted in particularly dark blue. This car has been completely overhauled from the front to the rear. A good value at $600.

STANDARD 8, 1921 SPORT PHAETON. Just like new. Has been driven less than 5,000 miles. Original paint. Special leather upholstery shows no wear whatever. This car is equipped with an excellent set of cord covers, 5 practically new cord tires, Biflex bumper, motometer, etc. This car cost over $3,500 less than a year ago—can be bought for $1,500.

COLE AERO 8, TOURING, 1919. This car in appearance and performance is like new. Just been overhauled and is in splendid mechanical condition. Repainted in a rich blue. Equipped with good cord tires and many extras. An extremely good value in a high grade touring car. The price is very low, $800.

COLE MODEL 870, 7 PASS. TOURING CAR. As good as the day it left the factory. Just painted a beautiful dark blue. Equipment consists of front and rear bumpers, spotlight, motometer, and 5 good cord tires. This car was delivered in 1920 and cost the owner over $3,500 equipped. Now offered at $950.

MERCER SPORT TOURING, 1921, SERIES "5." This is the 4 passenger model and is a car that is in every detail is absolutely like new. Mileage is low. Painted a rich golden brown with gold and white striping. Nickeled radiator and nickeled headlamps. Has an excellent cord tires and brand new Firestone cord, motometer, dimmers, spring bumper, clock, etc. A slightly used high grade sport touring car of a well known make at the attractive figure of $2,500.

NATIONAL 1918 TOURING CAR, 7 PASS. Recently overhauled and is in perfect mechanical condition. This car is equipped with 5 good cord tires, Biflex bumper, motometer, etc. This car has been well taken care of and is in fine shape. $400.

CADILLAC
TOWN LIMOUSINE
$2,000

"SALAMANCA TYPE."

This luxurious custom built 4 passenger "Salamanca" style town limousine is a rare offering in the used car mart. It is designed purely with an eye to good taste, artistic proportions and harmonious tones.

The superbody, which is composed of leather, is collapsible—allowing of the utmost comfort in the warm summer months. Refinished in dark claret wine with striping that artistically matches the Twentieth Century Vermilion wheels. Upholstery of pleasing design, is an imported light tan cloth, of heavy texture, with slightly darker stripe. Fenders, in black, are hand wrought.

Equipment consists of specially designed trunk carried at rear of and top of chassis, windshield wind wings, clock, 5 imported Rudge-Whitworth wire wheels, and 5 excellent cord tires.

You will rarely, if ever, get such a value again.

PIERCE-ARROW COUPE-SEDAN,

6-38 dual valve.

$4,500

The "coupe sedan" is a Pierce-Arrow creation. It fills a demand for a smart 4 passenger 4 door enclosed car of distinctive appearance and high-est quality. The body is cast aluminum and the appointments are in excellent taste along conservative lines. It is impossible to distinguish this beautiful car from new in any detail and a mechanical test proves that original cost was over $11,000 and at the low figure we are offering it and considering the fact that this model year has had only one season's service it is an unusual bargain.

TELLS ZONE BODY HOW IT CAN FIX BUILDING LINES

Hornstein Makes Reply to Bostrom's Query.

In reply to a request by Building Commissioner Charles Bostrom, chairman of the Chicago zoning commission, to the corporation counsel, for an opinion on whether the commission has the power, under the enabling act, to create building lines, Leon Hornstein, assistant corporation counsel, says in part:

"We suggest that if a building line restriction in certain localities is deemed desirable by the zoning commission, it should be limited to the following places:

"1. Where a new subdivision is platted in a residential area.

"2. To such blocks as are platted but not yet occupied by houses, where it is proposed to make the district residential.

"3. To residential blocks which already have all the buildings set back.

"4. To such residential blocks as have only a small amount of frontage without a setback for buildings, in which event such allowances should be made to lots adjoining the protruding building as will avoid discrimination.

"We are of the opinion that if such building lines are established, with a means for relaxation that will overcome any case of injustice or extreme hardship, the desired result will be accomplished and the provision will be found both feasible and valid."

PLAN FIRST FLAT BUILDING ON EAST SIDE OF EVERETT

Work will start the last of the month on the first apartment building on the east side of Everett avenue, north of Jackson park. Practically every foot on the west side has been built up, and now apparently begins the shutting off of the lake from the view of tenants of these Everett avenue west siders, for several other big hotel and apartment projects are planned which eventually will line the east side of the street from the park north to the end of the thoroughfare.

Rissman & Hirschfeld have drawn plans for thirty-six apartments 360 feet north of 55th, fronting west on Everett, to cost $225,000, with four and five room flats. Goldstein & Rosenberg are owners. Plan for fall occupancy.

They also have drawn plans for forty two flats at 942 Belmont, between Broadway and Sheridan, fours and fives, to cost the owners, Cantor & Freeman, $300,000; twenty-one apartments, fours and fives, at northeast corner of Washington and Lemar, owners Caplan & Richie, $125,000, ready in fall; ten stores and nine flats at the southeast corner Division and Menard, Albert & Berstein, $100,000; one and two story office and warehouse for Theodore Ebert & Co., decorators, Diversey parkway, north front, east of elevated, $90,000.

RACKET PROOF FLOORS IN THIS FLAT BUILDING

Architect Julius H. Huber, who recently designed the Ridge avenue Evanston residence of O. A. Mather, financial editor of THE TRIBUNE, has planned a three apartment building now going up at 1518 Jonquil terrace which is attracting considerable attention because it has what is claimed to be an absolute racket proof floor and a heat proof ceiling.

"All the kids in the neighborhood can get in one of the third floor flats," said Mr. Huber, "and they can roll cannon balls around if they want to, and the folks below won't hear even a rumble." There's a dead air cell between the floor and the ceiling. The same idea, that is, using a separate floor above the ceiling, supported on separate joists, so there's a dead air cell, makes the ceiling of the top apartment heat proof, and of course that means the usual heat from the roof won't penetrate to the third flat."

Clarence L. Lange is owner of this sanctuary of silence and coolness. It'll be completed by Oct. 1.

Chicago Gets a Brand New Magazine, American Homes

Chicago's got a new magazine, the April number being No. 1 of Vol. 1, and if it keeps up to the standard of its initial number American Homes should have a lot of readers. It's devoted to things of the home, as its name infers, and is interestingly edited by Frank Parker Stockbridge, with Bertha E. L. Stockbridge associate editor.

A few of the articles are: "A Home-like Entrance Hall"; "The Heart of the Home, the Fireplace"; "What Alls the Old House"; "Simplicity and Good Taste"; "Famous American Homes"; "Building the Home Library"; "Why Is a Dining Room?"; "A Practical Two Family Home"; "The Architect's Point of View," and others.

It is unusually well illustrated and the makeup is also unusually attractive. If it fulfills its promise to raise the standard of the home, architecturally and otherwise, we wish it success. It is published by the Home Press at 206 West Washington street.

New $600,000 Printers' Building

Architect Alfred S. Alschuler has drawn plans and contracts have been let for the $600,000 eight story building to be erected by the Atwell Printing company at the southwest corner of Prairie avenue and 20th, 120x177. It will be one of the largest printers' buildings in the city and will be equipped for publishing purposes, some floors to be subdivided for office tenants and extra elevator service provided for this purpose. The Atwell company will occupy three floors and the remainder will be rented. Work will start at once, with Dec. 1 set as completion date.

Trustee Represents Bondholder.

The corporation mortgage is an instrument which secures the principal and interest of the bonds issued under it. It is necessary to have a mortgage, pledging specified property, common to the entire issue of bonds in order to divide the loan up among a large number of bondholders without the difficulties of transferring and recording a mortgage every time a bond is sold. When a mortgage is issued and recorded, securing all the bonds, it is assigned to a trustee. The trustee is appointed by the corporation, but he immediately becomes the representative of the bondholder and is responsible to him for the proper fulfillment of his duties as defined in the mortgage and in state statutes. Trust companies usually are appointed as trustees because their facilities for caring for the bondholders' interests are greater than those of individuals.

The trustee is responsible to the bondholders for the careful and conscientious exercise of his power, but apart from that he has no personal responsibility towards them. It is the duty of the trustee to certify the bonds; to see that interest charges and principal are paid when due; to see that the property of the company is properly conserved and that funds are not diverted which properly belong to the mortgage holders. He has the right to seize the property in the interest of the bondholders, under authority of the court, when either interest or principal is not paid, where such power is allowed by law. He also is empowered to bring foreclosure proceedings and to request the appointment of a receiver if either interest or principal is not paid, and to sell the property in case of foreclosure, without operating it, if this is stipulated in the mortgage. A trustee cannot resign without the consent both of the bondholders and the corporation, except where his resignation is expressly provided for in the mortgage, but he may be removed for any willful acts of negligence that injure the rights of the bondholder. The importance of having a reliable trustee is too often overlooked by the purchaser of bonds.

SETTLES RUMORS ABOUT SALE OF MORRISON HOTEL

Harry C. Moir, owner of the Morrison hotel, yesterday calmly and thoroughly knocked out the bunch of rumors about various eastern hotel syndicates buying his property with two significant announcements.

"I don't know where these rumors originate," he remarked, "but they sure are widespread; I even heard them in Florida a few weeks ago. Anyway, here's the way I feel about disposing of the Morrison; I've built it from almost nothing to one of the world's great hotels and it'll never leave my hands while I'm alive.

"And to prove this, if it needs any proof, I might add that just as soon as building conditions warrant I'm going to build additions on both the Madison and Clark street sides which'll give me a total of 2,345 rooms. There are now 1,052."

ALBANY PARK, LOGAN SQUARE TO HAVE TEMPLES

Work is under way on the $75,000 synagogue, community center, and school of Congregation Beth Itzchok of Albany Park, on Drake avenue, west front, seventy-five feet south of Leland, designed by B. Leo Steif & Co. Prominent speakers are promised by the rabbi, Dr. I. A. Milner, for the cornerstone laying next Sunday at 2:30 p. m. The congregation was formed three and a half years ago. The new temple will be completed in July. It will seat 1,000.

The Logan Square congregation is having plans drawn by David Saul Klafter fo ra $250,000 temple on Fullerton avenue, near Kedzie. The auditorium will seat 1,800 and will have an assembly hall for social and community work and classrooms. It will be in the early Byzantine style of architecture and will be the largest Jewish synagogue on the northwest side, it is claimed.

Some Residence Sales in Chicago and the Suburbs

Edward C. Schweitzer, auditor of Sprague, Warner & Co., has sold his eight room brick residence in Wilmette at 918 Sheridan road, 50x200 lot, just west of the Ouilmette Country club, to Felix Wunnenberg, through B. F. Nicholson, for a reported $30,000, subject to $12,000. Another Wilmette sale was the residence at 619 Laurel, purchased by F. J. Conrad from John Henderson for a reported $25,000 through Paul Schroeder & Co., who also report selling the James Crabb residence at 919 Chestnut avenue to John McCabe for $30,000.

Augustus D. Curtis, president of the Curtis Leger Fixture company, has sold his residence at 5528 Hyde Park boulevard, 50x150, to Dr. Charles F. Sawyer, through James, J. Parker & Co., for a reported $25,000. The same brokers also report selling for Charles J. Miller his residence at 1223 East 50th street to Clarence W. Sills, vice president of Halsey, Stuart & Co., for $20,000, and for Harry S. Martin his stone house at 4942 Ellis avenue to Wellington Leavitt of Swift & Co. for $19,500. Also the residence at the southwest corner Grand boulevard and 48th for Will H. Palmer to Charles A. Pulsifer, 60x150, for $24,000.

Realty Remarks

S. W. STRAUS & CO. have just issued the most elaborate booklet of its kind we've ever seen in celebration of their fortieth anniversary, illustrated in color and half tones, showing many views of their magnificent new New York building—and, by the way, who was architect of that worth while structure? Hasty perusal shows no mention or credit to the man who designed it.

Architects frequently criticise newspapers, and often legitimately, for omitting to mention the architect's name when a photograph of a building is used; they probably don't know how almost universally bankers fail to mention that important point when they forward data and pictures of a building project to editors who may not have time or who receive them too late to find out who the architect is.

We suggest that the American Institute and the Illinois society take that point up with bond houses for we believe the public is just as much interested in knowing who designed the building as who owns it.

Boul Mich. realty owners and others as well will be interested in the handy map just issued by Frederick M. Bowes of the Bowes Realty company of the boulevard between the public library and Bellevue place and adjacent streets. It makes a good companion map to go with the larger colored map issued by Ross & Co. in 1920, as it gives the sizes of holdings and the locations of new and proposed buildings.

The reported city hall trouble having been ironed out, Louis Zuckerman assures us the Leland avenue widening project has already been started.

James Kilcran, superintendent of maps in County Recorder Joseph Haas' office, is just back at his desk, after a week's sickness. When Jimmy, who is one of the best newspaper men in town and the official channel for most of the realty news, is away, newspaper real estate departments show it.

Realtors going west next month to the national realty convention in San Francisco should plan to carry along their golf clubs. The Frisco board has announced its intention of staging a post-convention tournament on the Del Monte course for a perpetual San Francisco trophy. Realtors will be motored to Del Monte on Sunday, June 4, where, in addition to the tournament, there'll be picnic luncheons, dancing, movies, and other entertainment at the Hotel Del Monte. Finals will be played on Tuesday.

The prediction made by Joseph F. Haas, county recorder, on Jan. 1, that this would be a banner year in real estate transactions, is to be fulfilled judging from the statistics for the first quarter of 1922, just made public by him. During the first three months of the year there were 20,528 transfers with a stated consideration of $34,429,116, compared with only 15,811 transfers and $29,872,603 consideration in the same period of last year. The loan market showed a gain over 1921 of 3,411 in number of trust deeds and mortgages and $46,718,661 in amount secured. In the Torrens system the gain was 48 in number and $179,960 in value.

CHICAGO BOARD NOW HAS FAST GROWING REAL ESTATE LIBRARY

If you're looking for information on real estate matters, zoning or public improvements of any sort, perhaps you'll be interested in knowing that the Chicago Real Estate board has established a library for the seeker of knowledge on those points which is rapidly becoming one of the most valuable features of the new and live régime of Business Manager J. Soule Warterfield.

MISS EVA NELSON. [Moffett Photo.]

Charles M. Nichols, who established a similar library on a smaller scale at the Cook County Real Estate board, has done a major part in getting the Chicago board's library into its present shape. Miss Eva Nelson, a Chicago Heights girl, is librarian and also has worked strenuously to bring the library to its present standard.

"We're trying to form a library that any real estate man can go to and get any real estate question answered promptly," said Mr. Nichols. "Jacob L. Crane Jr., the board's technical adviser on zoning, is here daily to answer any queries on that subject, and we've already got together practically all the zoning literature there is. Abraham Lincoln Greene is chairman of the board's library committee and later on will name several members who are expected to take an active interest in developing the library."

North End Club Buys Site for New $100,000 Building

One of Edgewater's oldest women's organizations, the North End club, with 500 members, has just bought a site for a new $100,000 clubhouse at 6142 Kenmore avenue for $30,000. The 75x150 site is improved with an old house which will be torn down when building operations begin next year, according to Mrs. Frank L. Burland, chairman of the building committee. The purchase was negotiated by Mrs. Rose L. Cracraft of T. A. McGrogan & Co.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

SECRET WOES OF REALTY DEALER TOLD BY EXPERT

'Shopper' the Worst Pest, Says J. J. Ready Jr.

BY AL CHASE.

Little does the average citizen realize the deep and hidden tribulations incident to being a realty salesman—that suave, well dressed, debonair, nonchalant and apparently carefree individual who so easily persuades you to sign on the dotted line. That is, it seems easy to you. But, jiminy, what a lot of work for the realtor. What a lot of study and mental, moral and physical training to get into sufficient trim to persuade you to use the old fountain pen in the proper place.

JOHN J. READY JR.
[Wallinger Photo.]

And then, too, you probably recall all the unpleasant experiences you ever heard of or had with unscrupulous realty salesmen and don't give a thought to the sad, nerve shattering experiences the honest salesman has with the dishonest portion of the dear public.

A Glimpse Behind the Scenes.

John J. Ready Jr. of W. K. Young & Bro., one of the most successful of the younger generation of salesmen, in a lecture on "Salesmanship" before the real estate class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce, on Tuesday, took his listeners behind the scenes and told them a few secrets about the woes and the pleasures of realty selling.

The principal tribulation of the salesman is the "shopper," a sort of third cousin to the loop individual of the same name—but apparently alike in name only, for who ever heard of a loop shopper who didn't spend any money?

"In this town we've got a lot of so-called 'shoppers,'" explained Mr. Ready. "They're a class who are always looking, looking, looking, but who never buy. Looking at real estate has become a mania with them. There are cases where ten or fifteen years ago some of them were planning to buy a piece of property, and today they're no nearer purchasing than they were then.

Two Kinds of Objectors.

"The new salesman is very apt to bump into one of these shoppers, in which event he's very certain to learn various objections to the property he has to offer. But he mustn't let his sales talk get stale or his enthusiasm dwindle."

Mr. Ready said there were two kinds of objections met with by the salesman, the sincere and the insincere.

"When the prospect makes a chance criticism of the property with no further view in mind than to create a discussion, it's well for the salesman to overlook it, or he'll magnify a little matter that otherwise would have passed unnoticed. On the other hand, if the salesman hasn't enough arguments to make the advantages overshadow the objections of the sincere objector, he shouldn't try to sell the property."

Keep 'Em Apart, Says Realtor.

And here's another important tip to the salesman—keep your buyer and seller as far from each other as possible until the contract has been signed.

"After the prospect has seen the property and registered interest in it," says Mr. Ready, "the salesman should begin to refer to it as 'your' property and thus sow the preliminary seed of ownership in the mind of his party."

Soft Pedal on the Chatter.

And then comes what appears to us the most important bit of advice in the whole lecture—soft pedal on the chatter.

"Having reached this stage, the salesman must be careful not to talk too much," warns Mr. Ready. "He must be ready to deliver the punch and this can be accomplished best with as little conversation as possible. Many a salesman has had a deal almost made and then lost it and couldn't understand why. He had simply talked himself out of it.

"Get the contract signed as speedily as possible after the party has indicated his intention to purchase. When a man writes his name to an agreement he generally closes the door to objections and sees only the merit of his buy. With each contract bearing the names on the dotted line, the salesman adds another rung to the ladder of success."

Louis T. Jamme of the Clearing Industrial district will talk on "Industrial Property" Tuesday evening before the real estate class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce.

Uptown's Newest Shore Hotel—the Admiral

Work is now well under way on the first unit of the Hotel Admiral at Foster avenue and the lake, across from the Saddle and Cycle club, according to Architect John A. Nyden. A picture of the complete hotel, comprising two units, was shown in this department in 1920, but since then the exterior has been so changed that we believe it will be interesting to see what the first unit is going to look like when completed. It will be 60x145 and will have ninety furnished apartments of from two to four rooms and will cost $1,500,000. As soon as it is completed next October work will start on the second section. The hotel grounds front 176 feet on the lake, 230 feet on Foster, and 287 on the south. A space 167x176 on the shore will be used for an Italian garden and the balance for the building.

Albany Park's New Jewish Temple

B. Leo Stelf & Co. have drawn plans for the new $75,000 synagogue for Congregation Beth Itzchok of Albany Park, now building on the east side of Drake avenue, just south of Leland, the corner stone of which will be laid next Sunday at 2:30 p. m. More is told in another column.

ALBANY PARK TO HAVE $900,000 ARCADE-HOTEL

Grecian Style Structure Will Be Block Long.

Albany Park, which all real estate men in that neighborhood call "Chicago's fastest growing section," is going to have its first apartment hotel, and according to the men back of the project it'll be one of the finest in town and will cost $900,000.

Instead of breaking all records for height, which seems to be the ambition of builders in certain sections of the city, the new Albany Park hotel will shatter records, so 'tis claimed, for length, the new hostelry to be a block long. It will be on the south side of Foster avenue, fronting 266 feet between St. Louis and Drake avenues, with a 135 foot frontage on each of these thoroughfares. It will be three stories high.

To Be in Grecian Style.

J. G. Moeller recently bought the site and intends following the architectural lines of the Besonte hotel, in Hutchinson, Kas., which was designed in the Grecian style. Axel V. Teisen is architect of the new Albany Park hotel and will plan a building to contain 100 apartments, seventy of which will be one room kitchenettes and the balance two and three rooms. Leases will be made for sixty days and up, with some rooms reserved for transients.

There'll be a large lobby, a dining room, smoking room, library, roof garden, ballroom, and other hotel luxuries and conveniences. A building line of twenty-five feet on all sides has been established by the owner to provide for a large open air veranda which will encircle the building.

To Be Ready Oct. 15.

The entire structure will be fireproof, with shops along the Foster avenue frontage and a wide arcade contemplated back of the shops extending for a block between St. Louis and Drake avenues. Bowling alleys also are planned in the basement.

Work will start in five weeks for Oct. 15 occupancy, according to George F. Scheck & Co., who have the general contract and who were brokers in the purchase of the site by Mr. Moeller.

News of the Architects

The Chicago Woman's Drafting club will hold its next monthly meeting Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Room 1602, Ashland block, and according to Miss Ethel V. Lund, daughter of Architect Anders G. Lund and chairman of the entertainment committee, all girls actively interested in structural, architectural or mechanical lines, either in the office, drafting room or selling end, are invited to attend. Miss Elizabeth Martini, president of the club and the only licensed woman architect in the city, will preside. Mrs. J. J. Friedman has recently been elected a vice president of the organization.

Joseph H. Klafter, architect, who has been associated for the last fifteen years with his brother, David Saul Klafter, is now in practice for himself with offices in the American Bond & Mortgage building, 127 North Dearborn. His phone is Dearborn 2838.

Architect William C. Presto has moved his offices from 179 West Washington to Suite 726 in the Conway building, 111 West Washington. His new phone is Franklin 1407.

Rissman & Hirschfeld have outgrown their offices in the City Hall Square building and moved yesterday to much larger quarters in Suite 1110 Garrick Theater building. Their phone is the same.

William P. Doerr also is moving into larger offices. On May 1 he will occupy Room 1600 in the Steger building, on the same floor as his present suite.

To Make Sheridan Road Flats an Apartment Hotel

The craze to rebuild flat buildings into "apartment hotels" continues. The northeast corner of Sheridan road and Pine Grove, 86x180, has been sold by Croxton, Schneider & Co. for the E. H. Knoop estate to an undisclosed purchaser for a reported $112,500. Plans are being made to remodel the 108 rooms into a modern hotel.

Plan $100,000 Building at Wabash and Seventh

Work begins tomorrow morning on a $100,000 two story building at the southwest corner of Wabash and 7th, the entire second floor of which will be occupied by two unusually elaborate Masonic halls, to care for twelve loop blue lodges. There'll be eight shops on the first floor, according to Architect M. M. Friedman's plans. Jesse Ridge leased the 48x165 site, once occupied by a panorama building, from the Lambert Tree estate for twenty years from May 1 at an average annual rental of $3,500, and will call the new structure the Ridge building. It'll be completed Sept. 1. William R. Jordan was attorney for Mr. Ridge and Howard G. Grey and the Merchants Loan and Trust represented the lessor.

Brokers' Notes

Paul Schroeder & Co. have opened a branch at 2868 Central street, Evanston, which gives them five north shore offices, the main one and a branch being in Wilmette, another in Highland Park and one in Glencoe.

The Lake Shore Realty Company, Inc., announce having leased additional space on the seventeenth floor of the Consumers building for five years at a term rental of $60,000, from Jacob Kesner, and will use it for a building exhibit of materials for homes and for an architectural department for the convenience of buyers.

E. J. Vanderkoi and J. Schrock, formerly with M. Hoffman & Co., are now with the National Realty and Improvement company at 5605 North Clark street.

William F. Morris Jr., formerly with Robert White & Co., is now associated with K. R. Beak & Co. in charge of their downtown leasing department.

C. C. Sampson, long associated with Judson Stone in the management of the McCormick estate and later manager of the Temple for the State Bank of Chicago, is now with Ross & Co.

LEASES NEW THEATER.

Robert A. Pottinger, who is building two big northwest side improvements to cost $400,000, at Elston, Keystone Cullom, and Crawford, from plans by Architect Arthur Howell Knox, yesterday rented five stores to Gus Sharres for ten years at a term rental of $124,000 from Sept. 1. The 1,600 seat theater he has leased for ten years to the Dearborn Theater company at $12,000 annually.

Apartment Sales

Following are some of the recent apartment sales reported by brokers, but not published because of lack of space: Lawrence & Kennedy report twenty-four flats, 4416 Magnolia, C. C. Mitchell to J. P. Lindstedt, $113,000; eighteen flats, southwest corner Pine Grove and Belmont, Marguerite Kennedy to Otto Soefling, $80,000; six flats, 4535 Magnolia, Katharine Smith to David Lee Parker, $44,000.

Henry M. Underwood sold to B. J. Coolidge the eighteen flats at northeast corner Vincennes and 46th, for $75,000, through H. G. Howard & Co. Edward Taub and Oscar Fineman bought from Lafayette McWilliams the northwest corner of Wabash and 35th, for $70,000, through T. C. Ernest of Alvin H. Reed & Co. The store and office building at southeast corner of Clark and Berwyn, 50x125, sold by F. H. Welsch to J. P. O'Connell, through H. W. Harpold & Co., for $65,000.

James L. Beckwith and James B. Waller bought from Margaret and Charlotte Zepf the twelve flats at the northeast corner Broadway and Wellington for $67,000, through Chandler, Hildreth & Co. R. N. Crawford and L. Garibaldi bought from Dr. J. D. Stuart, through James L. Beckwith the twelve flats at 3508 Broadway, 100x100, for $60,000, and will remodel the first floor into shops.

REMODELING WEST SIDE BUILDING.

The Bromide Portrait company will remodel its two story building at 15-23 North Crawford at a cost of $40,000, converting the entire second floor into modern offices for physicians and dentists, to be ready May 1.

Building Statistics All Over U. S. Break Records

March building statistics throughout the United States break old records extending back as far as 1914 and conclusively point to the fact that the construction industry is shouldering its way into activities which will shortly take the slack out of the present industrial situation, says the American Contractor. Official returns from the building departments of 190 cities to that magazine show a valuation of $262,283,000, as compared with $131,905,000 in March, 1921.

To Build 32 Apartments at Constance and 72d

Work will start this week on a thirty-two apartment building at the northeast corner of Constance and 72d, designed by Walter W. Ahlschlager, Ins. It will cost $250,000 and will have four and five rooms. The Continental First Mortgage company has underwritten a $147,500 bond issue.

These Buildings Actually Make You More Money

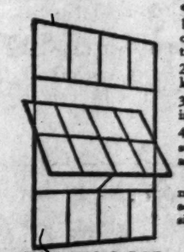
Truscon Standard Buildings effect four definite savings:

1. They are more quickly erected than any other type of permanent construction, and therefore begin to earn money much sooner.
2. They are lower in first cost than any other kind of permanent buildings.
3. Requiring a smaller investment, they reduce interest charges.
4. Built entirely of interchangeable fireproof steel panels, they can be enlarged or taken down and re-erected with 100% salvage value.

Fireproof, day-lighted, well ventilated, they make ideal factories, warehouses, foundries, service garages, filling stations, shops, etc. All sizes with pitched, monitor or sawtooth roof.

Buy them now at rock bottom prices. Write or 'phone for catalog, prices, etc.



TRUSCON STEEL SASH

Why it pays to watch the wording of your Want Ad

WHEN you use Tribune Want Ads to bring you buyers, prospects for your offer, you make use of a tremendous force. Just think of your message being reproduced over 800,000 times and carried into that many homes! Which takes care of how many people see your Want Ad. The next thing to consider is: What did you say to those people?

Take two Want Ads, both much the same kind of an offer. One Want Ad, in which the essential details are clearly and definitely set forth, is successful; buyers are secured. The other Want Ad, in which essential features are not included, and which is sloppily worded or inadequate in size, does not produce. The difference lies in what was said in each Want Ad. Let The Tribune's Want Ad Slogan be your guide: "The more you tell, the quicker you sell!" An example or two:

Wherein Mr. S. finds considerable cause for hilarity:

MR. S., for some unaccountable reason, was running this Want Ad in another paper to sell his Buick automobile:

> BUICK — COUPE, 21-48; PRAC. BRAND new; barg. for cash. Prospect 000.

He was asked one day if he had sold the car. A sad, severe "No." It was suggested that he use Tribune Want Ads, both the Section and the Slogan. Well, he'd try it. The expression of his offer was improved, so that his prospects among the thousands who would read the Want Ad would know definitely what his offer was! This Want Ad was inserted:

> BUICK—COUPE, 1921, MOD. 48, THIS car has been taken good care of in every respect; $100 extras; 6 new cord tires; take small car in trade; $1,500. Prospect 000.

This second Want Ad sold the car. Mr. S.'s comment: "I'm surely grateful to you for your suggestion. I'm going to spread the idea to all my friends. The more you tell 'em, the quicker you sell 'em!"

Wherein a bit of detail saves the day:

"I am losing confidence in The Tribune as a room-renting medium," said Mrs. B. Here's the Want Ad she was using to rent a room, without results:

> INGLESIDE-AV., 0000. 3D — TO RENT— Large frt. rm.; kitch. and laundry privs.; 2 women or marr. cple. empl.

Mrs. B. blamed The Tribune because her Want Ad did not produce, but there were other Want Ads in the same issue that did their jobs, rented their rooms,—why not Mrs. B.'s? Because the other Want Ads contained more information, were more interesting to a prospect.

It was suggested that she apply The Tribune's Want Ad Slogan, "The more you tell, the quicker you sell." Which she did, after considerable hesitation (because it meant increased expense.) Here's the second Want Ad:

> INGLESIDE-AV., 0000. 3D — TO RENT— Nicely furn. front room with kitchen and laundry privileges; nr. 63d-st. L and Jackson Pk.; priv. fam.; 2 women or marr. cple. emp.

This second Want Ad rented the room. Notice that the second Want Ad contained only one detail more (the inclusion of transportation), yet that Want Ad rented the room where the first one did not! Only one of hundreds and hundreds of examples where the addition of essential detail turns the trick! The more you tell, the quicker you sell.

WRITING a Want Ad is one of the simplest things in the world. Just be sure you have included the essential facts, briefly, clearly, adequately. Consider four things always: the price, the market, the offer itself, and the wording of your Want Ad.

—and in the matter of renting apartments—

"The better Want Ad surely gains the day," says Mrs. J. E. S. who owes the renting of her apartment to the application of The Tribune's Want Ad Slogan. She had been running the following Want Ad in The Tribune for some time, but had not found suitable tenants:

> TO RENT—MOD. 6 RM. 2D APT., 2 BATHS; open frt. porch; reas.; nr. Lincoln Park. 000 Fullerton-parkway.

There wasn't enough information in this Want Ad! And above all things a prospect likes to have is information—details, features, the "how, why, when and who" of an offer. That's why The Tribune suggested to Mrs. J. E. S. that she amplify the Want Ad above, using the slogan, "The more you tell, the quicker you sell!"

Mrs. J. E. S. said, naturally: "But it will cost more!" Of course it will cost more, but far better to spend another dollar or two and get results than run an unsuccessful, inadequate Want Ad. Economy in the long run! Mrs. J. E. S. decided to try it. Here is the resultant Want Ad:

> TO RENT—MOD. 6 RM. APT., 2D APT. 2 baths, open frt. porch; reas.; 5 large closets, lge. liv. rm.; concession if taken at once; good trans.; nr. lake. 000 Fullerton-pkwy.

This Want Ad rented the apartment. (Business of exulting on the part of Mrs. J. E. S. and business of remembering on the part of you!)

Wherein Mrs. J. H. finds the better way to use a Want Ad:

WHEN Mrs. J. H. decided to rent part of her apartment, she thought that all she had to do was "run a Want Ad in The Tribune." What she said in the Want Ad concerned her little. This is the Want Ad she used:

> TO RENT—MAR. CPL., EMP., SHARE APT. cong. mar. cpl.; good trans. Sheldr. 000.

But no one came to rent the apartment! Mrs. J. H., much discouraged, consulted a Tribune Ad-taker, who told her, without disparaging the power of a Tribune Want Ad, that she should include more information in her Want Ad if she wanted more results. So Mrs. J. H. inserted this Want Ad:

> TO RENT—MAR CPL, EMPL. WILL SHARE 6 rm. furn. apt with cong. marr. cple., 1 blk. N. W. R. R. Clark and Broadway cars; Sheldrake 000 Sun.; wk. days after 6 p. m.

Whereupon Mrs. J. H. rented the apartment, because the second Want Ad gave more reasons for a prospect's being interested enough to respond, which is only another way of saying that there was more information in the second Want Ad. "The more you tell, the quicker you sell!"

DO YOU know that your credit is good at The Tribune if you have a telephone? Just call Central 0100 and ask for an Ad-taker—your Want Ad will be inserted and a bill sent later. We continually carry from forty to seventy thousand accounts entered in this way over the phone. A quick, convenient, time-saving way to order a Want Ad! Remember it!
